Many Roman remains have been found here; and innumerable Roman coins have been discovered in the walls and elsewhere. Among other proofs of the Roman residence in this city, may be mentioned five Penates, or household gods, discovered here in 1778, with other antiquities. These Penates are of bronze, and were found in digging a cellar in High Street, at the corner of Broad Gate. One was a figure of Ceres; two were small statues of Mercury; another represented Mars; and the fifth was supposed to represent Apollo. They were found lying among a large quantity of oyster shells, and the fragments of two urns,—one highly glazed and adorned with handsome borders and human figures, executed in relief. On digging the foundations of a house on the opposite side of the street in 1776, some remains of a tesselated pavement were discovered, with a few Roman medals, one of them a Trajan, in large brass. Within the last fifty years tesselated pavements have been discovered in the heart of the city, namely, across the upper part of South Street, and in the inclosure on the north side of the Cathedral; baths were also found in 1836, on preparing the site for the higher markets in Queen Street, and in 1876 a tiled pavement was uncovered at some depth below the street outside the Guildhall, and these remains are now preserved at the 'Albert Museum.' How long Exeter retained its name of Isca Dannoniorum is uncertain, though it seems probable that it fell into disuse soon after the Romans quitted the island; about which time it appears to have been re-occupied by the Britons, who had preserved their independence by retiring to the wilds of Cornwall. They did not, however, continue its masters many years; for Cerdic, the founder of the Saxon kingdom of Wessex, having greatly extended his possessions, included most of Devon within his dominions; and at length Exeter became subjugated to the Saxons, who gave it the name of Exan-Cestre, which, through the various modifications of Exceaster, Excester, &c., has been softened into Exeter.

In early times, the city was often besieged, but the greatest calamities it experienced were inflicted by the Danes, who are believed to have made their first attack upon Exeter itself, in 876. In the following year, a body of Danish cavalry from Wareham, in Dorsetshire, proceeded to join their comrades in this city, and though hotly pursued by King Alfred, they succeeded (according to the Saxon Chronicle) in getting within the fortress, where they remained until the middle of the winter. During their stay they appear to have sacked and demolished the monastery, which had been founded in this city before the end of the seventh century, and in which St. Boniface (the Apostle of Germany), received his education, under the Abbot Wolphard. Boniface died June 5, 755. In 894 the Danes again invested the city, but it was relieved by Alfred, and the Danes contented themselves with ravaging the coast. This sovereign, the founder of the British Navy, befriended Exeter; but he gave its revenues, with his royalties in Wessex and Cornwall, to his learned tutor and biographer, Asserius, who tells us of his master's liberality. 'He gave me "Exanceastre," with every parish which pertained to him in Saxonia and in Cornubia.' After a reign of thirty years, King Alfred died in 901. Mr. Sainthill, in Vol. I. of his 'Miscellanies,' has engraved a penny of this king, struck at Exeter, which bears the following inscription:—'+ Aelfred Rex Saxonum;' and on the reverse, 'Exa.'

Between the period of the death of Alfred and the reign of Athelstan, the Western Britons recovered possession of Exeter; but the latter monarch drove them beyond the Tamar, and they were never afterwards able successfully to oppose the Saxon arms. King Athelstan, who reigned from 925 to October 27, 941, has been always regarded as the special benefactor of Exeter. He frequently visited the city, refounded her minster or monastery dedicated to SS. Mary and Peter. For further security, he enclosed Exeter with a wall of hewn stone, defended by towers; and under his auspices, says Malmesbury, 'It became such a place of trade, that it abounded with opulence.' He also gave it the privilege of a double Mint; and Mr. Sainthill has discovered a rare specimen coined here. Instead of the king's bust, the obverse presents but a simple cross. The circular legend is 'Aedelstan Rex To. Brit.,' and the reverse supplies the name of the Mint-master, 'Rægenold Mo Exonie Civ.' He also built the first castle here, which, seventy years later, was destroyed by the Danes; and during a Christmas which he spent in the city (after he had expelled the disaffected Britons, who had heretofore enjoyed equal rights and priviliges with the Saxon inhabitants), he held a 'Witenagemote,' when a code of laws was enacted for the due protection of property and the impartial administration of justice. When Sweyne, King of Denmark, landed in England in 1003, to avenge the general massacre committed on his countrymen in the preceding year, by order of King Ethelred, Exeter became the first sacrifice to his vengeance. Though bravely defended during two months, the city was at last delivered up, through the treachery of Hugh, its Norman governor, and its inhabitants were put to the sword without mercy, and most of its buildings destroyed by fire. It is said to have lain in ruins till the reign of Canute, who took it into his favour and protection. Edward the Confessor was at Exeter with his queen, Edith, in 1050. William the Conqueror was scarcely seated on his throne, when the citizens of Exeter, impatient of the Norman yoke, rebelled against him, and made every possible preparation for defence. The king, on receiving information of their proceedings, marched towards Exeter with his army, accompanied by some of the chief English nobility. Certain leading men of the city hastened to the king's camp, besought his pardon, and having promised fealty, and that they would receive him with open gates, gave such hostages as he required. Notwithstanding this, when they returned to their fellow citizens, they found them resolved upon an obstinate resistance. The king, hearing of this breach of promise, rode forward with 500 horse, and finding the gates shut and the walls and towers manned with a great force, he gave orders for his army to advance, and caused the eyes of one of the hostages to be put out before the city gates. The citizens defended the place with the utmost bravery for several days; but were at length obliged to capitulate, and throw themselves on the king's mercy. Having prostrated themselves before the Conqueror, they obtained a free pardon, with protection from plunder. To prevent future rebellion, the Conqueror ordered a strong castle to be built. There is no evidence that the new fortress was erected on the site of King Athelstan's Castle, but it was admirably adapted to overawe and protect the town, since it was built on the north-east summit of its highest ground, called Rougemont, from the colour of its soil. This castle is not referred to in Domesday, and Sir H. Ellis says that 'no notice of it can be expected,' probably because it was in the immediate custody of the Crown, and was therefore exempt from taxation, and afforded no pecuniary profit. Many castles built by the Conqueror, including the tower of London, are similarly unnoticed. To Baldwin de Molis, or de Brioniis, or de Sap (by all of which names he is indifferently called), who had married Albreda, the Conqueror's niece, was assigned the charge of superintending the work; and the custody of the castle, with the office of Sheriff of Devon, was granted to him and his heirs, as an appendage to his Barony of Okehampton. In 1069, the Saxons again attempted to possess themselves of the city, but the citizens, mindful of their opposition to the Norman Conqueror in 1067, shut the gates against them. The king sent forces to their relief, and the Saxons were defeated with great slaughter.

Soon after King Stephen's accession, Exeter was garrisoned for the Empress Matilda, by Baldwin de Rivers, Earl of Devon; but, on the arrival of the king with a great army, he was joyfully received by the citizens. The Earl was obliged to shut himself up in the castle, with his countess, his children, and all his adherents; among whom were some of the most distinguished young men of the realm. In this stronghold they made a most obstinate defence, and held it three months, though the besieging army availed themselves of all the military engines then in use, and succeded so far as to take the barbican by assault, and to batter down the bridge which communicated with the city. They were at length obliged to capitulate for want of water, but the Earl escaped to the Isle of Wight, where he was soon after taken, and banished. The present well in the castle is 104 feet deep, and affords an abundant supply. It is referred to in the 'Close Rolls,' where King John, June 19, 1205, directs the treasurer to pay the account of William Briwere for making this well, 'by our order.' When Stephen left Exeter, he committed the custody of the castle and the county to his brother, Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester; but the government was soon restored to the family of Rivers, and with partial interruptions, so continued, until 1232, when Henry III. detached it from the Barony of Okehampton. Henry II. granted the citizens several privileges, as a reward for their attachment to his mother, the Empress Matilda, and gave them the custody of the castle. Edward I. and his Queen kept their Christmas here in 1285, and were entertained fifteen days at the Black Friary. Izacke relates that, during their residence here, the murder of the precentor, Walter de Lechlade, was investigated; and that the late mayor, who had borne that office eight years, and four others, were condemned to death. Considerable doubt has been expressed relative to this murder, the account of which Izacke manifestly copied from Hooker's MS. This tragical occurrence is not referred to at all, either in the register of Bishop Quivil, or in a deed of the then Prior of St. John the Baptist's Hospital at Wells, concerning money left by the deceased precentor. Mr. Duffus Hardy has, however, of late years discovered in the Tower of London, three original letters from Bishop Quivil, and one from the Archbishop of Canterbury (Peckham), which prove the actual commission of the crime beyond the possibility of question. It is unlikely, however, that the mayor was executed, as related by Izacke, since his name is appended as witness to a deed, by which Walter Doderidge surrendered in September, 1285, to the Dean and Chapter, the right of egress and ingress through the doors of their house in the High Street into the Cathedral Cemetery. Walter Lechlade must have been murdered two years previously to this date, since Quivil's Register records the collation of Andrew de Kilkenny to the precentorship, void by the death of the said Walter on Nov. 19, 1283. It is true that King Edward I. spent the Christmas of 1285 at Exeter, and whilst there he held a Parliament, when a statute, known as the statute of Exeter, was enacted to remedy the abuses of coroners. He did not reside at the Convent of the Black Friars, however, but took up his residence at the Bishop's palace. See Oliver's History of Exeter (page 63, note), where it is stated that Jenkins makes the former assertion 'apparently upon his own authority.' In 1357, Edward the Black Prince, having gained the memorable battle of Poictiers, landed on his return at Plymouth, whence, coming to Exeter with his royal prisoners (the King of France and his youngest son), he was received with great demonstrations of joy, and he and his two captives were sumptuously entertained for three days. Henry VI. was eight days at the Bishop's palace in 1451, and in the contest between him and Edward IV. for the crown, Exeter again became the scene of hostilities; but the dangers to which it was exposed were averted by the prudent conduct of the mayor and other citizens, in 1469. At that period of the long-continued wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, the Duchess of Clarence, Lord Dinham, Lord Fitz-Warren, and other distinguished partisans of Henry VI., whose cause the citizens favoured, with many fighting men, were blockaded at Exeter by the Yorkists, under Sir William Courtenay; but after twelve days the blockade was discontinued, through the mediation of some of the canons of the cathedral and the mayor.

The battle of Losecote, in Lincolnshire, ensued in 1470, and the Duke of Clarence and the Earl of Warwick fled to Exeter, where they were entertained by the bishop, till a ship was got ready at Dartmouth, to take them to Calais. They had only just escaped when the king arrived at Exeter with a numerous army. In 1471, previous to the battle of Tewkesbury, the Lancasterians of Devon and Cornwall, under the command of Sir John Arundel and Sir Hugh Courtenay, mustered at Exeter, whence they marched to the fatal field. Some time after this, Edward IV., with his queen and the infant prince, visited Exeter, and at his departure, presented the mayor with a sword, to be carried before him and his successors on all public occasions. This sword, covered with black crape, was formerly carried before the mayor on January 30, in commemoration of the execution of King Charles I. A strong party was formed in the west of England against the usurpation of Richard III. in 1483, but their hopes were for a time frustrated by the execution of the Duke of Buckingham; and a Special Commission was sent down to Torrington, under which the Marquis of Dorset, Bishop Courtenay, and others of the Courtenay family were outlawed. Richard himself having made a progress into the west, on this occasion came to Exeter, and was presented with a purse of 200 nobles, less for love than fear. John Atwill, the mayor, and Thomas Hext, the recorder (the latter, according to the municipal records, wearing 'a new gown,' which had been purchased for the occasion at a cost of £2 2*s*.), together with seventy-two soldiers clothed in red and black, met the king beyond the east-gate, and conducted him to the bishop's palace, where he was presented with wine to the value of £12. The only members of the confederacy remaining in Exeter were Sir John St. Leger—who was the husband of the king's sister (the Princess Anne, Duchess of Exeter), and who appears to have therefore counted upon the clemency of his brother-in-law—and in attendance upon him, was his esquire, Thomas Raine. Both these unfortunate men were condemned and executed, Hoker and Jenkings say, at the 'Carfoid,' near the great conduit. Dr. Oliver mentions the area of the castle-yard as the scene of their suffering; but the recent investigation of the municipal records by Mr. Cotton, proves that they were beheaded before the door of the Guildhall; and the City Receiver's accounts for this period, include the following charges—'Paid three men for watching those who were beheaded before the door of the same hall,' 'candles, fire, and the making of a scaffold.' The cost of each of these items appears in the account. Weever says, page 284, that Sir John St. Leger was buried with his wife in the Collegiate Church of Windsor. They had two children, Anthony and Anne, who were possibly born in Exeter Castle.

The next siege of Exeter was in the time of Henry VII., when Perkin Warbeck, pretending to the Crown, and asserting himself to be Richard, Duke of York, son of Edward IV., landed in Cornwall, and marched to this city at the head of about six thousand men. He commenced a vigorous siege, but was repulsed in several assaults, and at last compelled to raise the siege. The conduct of the citizens during this siege so conciliated the favour of Henry VII., that on his visit to the city shortly after, bringing with him Perkin Warbeck as prisoner, he bestowed on them great commendations, granted them a new charter, and gave them the sword he then wore, as a testimony of his goodwill. Some of the ringleaders of the rebellion were executed upon Southern Hay; and others received a free pardon, after being brought before the king, at the treasurer's house in the Close, with halters about their necks. The Princess Catherine of Arragon, having landed at Plymouth in 1501, rested several days at Exeter, on her way to London. In 1536, Exeter was made a county of itself, as will be seen at a subsequent page. The 'Reformation in religion' and the suppression of the monasteries, in the reign of Henry VIII., and during the regency of his infant son and successor, Edward VI., caused much discontent among the poor; and insurrections broke out in various parts of the kingdom, especially during the year 1549, when the nobility and gentry began to enclose the monastic lands which had been divided amonst them. The poor had long enjoyed considerable benefit from these estates, as well as the right of pasturage on the commons and wastes. The insurgents of Devon, being assembled in considerable numbers, encompassed Exeter on July 2, 1549; but the city was bravely and successfully defended for five weeks, through the devotion and courage of the mayor, John Blackaller. The assailants burned the gates, and after attempting to scale the walls, tried to destroy them by mining, but without success; they then attempted to starve the citizens by a blockade. The besieged, though reduced to great distress, and obliged to eat horse flesh and loathsome viands, held out till they were relieved by the forces under Lord John Russell, who completely routed the rebels at Clist Heath on August 5, and entered the city on the following day. The magistrates, in gratitude for their deliverance, appointed August 6 to be kept annually as a day of thanksgiving, which, until within the last twenty years, was regularly observed; and the Lord Protector sent a letter in the king's name, thanking the citizens for their courage and fidelity.

As a more substantial reward, the king, with the advice of the Privy Council, granted the Corporation the valuable manor of Exe Island, for the better maintenance of the city, with licence also to take out of the woods of Cotledge and Perridge, wood sufficient for repairing the mills belonging to the said manor. The citizens had been unjustly deprived of 'Exe Island' at the time of the Norman Conquest, when King William made it a member of the Barony of Okehampton, and granted it to Richard de Brion, and from him it had descended to the Courtenays, and the latter family kept possession of it, notwithstanding the determination of several law-suits in favour of the Corporation, until the attainder of Henry Courtenay, Marquis of Exeter, in A.D. 1538. It then reverted to the Crown, but might of course at any time be restored to the Courtenay family, who had always had their own rule, laws, and guards within it, and who had been in the habit of utterly despising the authority of the Corporation. So anxious were the Corporation to obtain possession of this manor (then valued at £29 18*s*. 10*d*. per annum), that they had made the greatest efforts through their burgesses and others, to purchase it of the king. The gift, therefore, was peculiarly acceptable, and as Mr. Cotton says, 'it still remains to the Corporation a lasting monument of the courage and loyalty of John Blackaller, and his brethren. In January, 1554, Sir Peter and Sir Gawen Carew, Sir Thomas Dennis, and others, being up in arms to oppose King Philip's coming to England, are said to have taken possession of the city and castle of Exeter. Don Antonio, the deposed King of Portugal, was liberally entaintained with his whole retinue in 1584, by John Davy, Esq., the mayor. A terrible sickness broke out at the Assizes, in 1586, when Sir B. Drake, one of the judges, and several of the magistrates, and jurymen, died of the distemper. Queen Elizabeth sent the citizens a letter of thanks for their zealous exertions against the Spaniards in 1588, and granted them the motto of 'Semper fidelis,' to be borne in the city arms. In 1531, the Rev. T. Bennett, M.A., was burnt to death at Liverydole, near Exeter, for heresy. In the last year of Queen Mary (1557), Agnes Prest is said to have been burnt to death on Southernhay, for denying the real presence in the Sacrament; but no mention of this occurrence is to be found either in the register of Bishop Turbeville, or the Act Books of the Common Council. In 1646, three poor friendless old women from Bideford were condemned and executed at Exeter, for the supposed crime of witchcraft, as also was Richard Wilkins, in 1610.

At the commencement of the civil wars of the 17th century, the Earl of Bedford, being Lord Lieutenant of the county of Devon, and attached to the cause of the Parliament, repaired to Exeter, disarmed the loyal citizens, garrisoned the city, and planted ordnance upon the walls. When he quitted Exeter, he gave the government of it to the Earl of Stamford. After the loss of the battle of Stratton, in which the latter earl had the chief command, he hastened to Exeter, with the news of his defeat, and, expecting a siege, destroyed all the houses in the suburbs, and ordered the trees on the walls and in the Northern and Southern Hays to be cut down. After the capture of Bristol (July 24, 1643), Sir John Berkeley was sent by Charles I. to take the command in Devonshire, and to take measures for blockading Exeter. About the middle of the following month, Prince Maurice came with his army before Exeter, and found Sir John Berkeley besieging the city, with his guards close to the gates. The siege continued till after the loss of the Parliamentary garrisons upon the north coast, when the Earl of Stamford was induced to surrender. Sir John Berkeley was then made governor of Exeter, to the great joy of the major part of the citizens, who are said to have been zealous Royalists. Exeter being regarded as a place of great security, the Queen, then far advanced in pregnancy, was sent there, and was joyfully received by the citizens, who conducted her to Bedford House, which had been fitted for her reception, and where she gave birth to the Princess Henrietta Maria, afterwards Duchess of Orleans. The Corporation voted the queen a present of £200. On the approach of the Earl of Essex with his army, on his march westward, her Majesty left Exeter for Falmouth, and embarked for France. The Earl, however, made no attempt on this city, which was visited by the king, and the Prince of Wales, on July 26, 1644, and the former was entertained at Bedford House, and the latter at the Deanery. On their arrival, the Corporation presented the king with £500, and the prince with £100. After his successful expedition into Cornwall, the king returned to Exeter for one night (September 17), and then proceeded to Oxford. The Prince was in Exeter in August and September, 1645. After the battle of Naseby, Sir Thomas Fairfax was sent as general into the west. Although the reduction of Exeter was one of the chief objects of the expedition, the general did not immediately besiege it, but placed garrisons in several of the neighbouring villages and gentlemen's seats, by which the city was greatly distressed. In the spring of 1646, Exeter was closely invested; and after a struggle of some weeks duration, Sir John Berkeley, the governor, was obliged to surrender the city on April 9. One of the articles of capitulation was that the infant, Princess Henrietta Maria, and her household, should have liberty to remove to any part of England or Wales. The cathedral was defaced by the Parliamentary soldiers, the painted glass destroyed, and the fabric divided into two places of worship, one for Presbyterians, and the other for Independents. Although doubt has been recently thrown upon these statements, yet it is undeniable that the cathedral was divided in the year 1657 by means of a brick wall, erected by order of the chamber of Exeter, at a cost of £150. The eastern portion of the divided church was called 'East Peters,' and was appropriated to the Independents, whose congregation chiefly consisted of the Parliamentary garrison. It is needless to say, that care had been taken immediately upon the capitulation of the city, that the Puritans in the Corporation should be in the majority, and as the members of this body were principally of the Presbyterian persuasion, they agreed to meet for public worship in the second half (or nave) of the cathedral, which they named 'West Peters.' With respect to the 'fearful sacrilege,' which rests chiefly upon the assertions contained in the 'Mercurius Rusticus' of Dr. Ryves, it is possible that the acts of the Puritans within our cathedral have been highly coloured and magnified; and this, Dr. Oliver admits. But we can scarcely agree with the sweeping assertions made by the authors of the 'Gleanings of the Municipal Records,' that 'no desecration whatever was committed at Exeter,' since overwhelming evidence is afforded by Dugdale, Walker, and even by John Vicars' 'Parliamentary Chronicle,' that a vast amount of mischief was effected in our churches and cathedrals by the fanaticism of the Parliamentary troops; and although it is possible that they may have been accused of certain acts of Vandalism which should have been in justice placed to the account of Elizabeth's visitors; yet, had they been quite guiltless, Prebendary Reynolds, in his sermon preached in Exeter Cathedral on July 27, 1684, would not have remarked (after speaking of the partition wall already referred to), 'many of us have seen not only the monuments of the dead, but even the very ashes and bones of some of them, disturbed and violated.' If (as Mr. Cotton says), the Puritans 'were not the men to desecrate any place of worship willingly,' how are many known facts to be reconciled with this statement? Take, for instance, the Journal of William Dowsing, the Parliamentary visitor of Suffolk: 'At Clare, January 6, 1643–4, we brake down one thousand picture superstitions; I brake down two hundred.' There is a tradition in the Gould family, that one of their ancestors, James Gould, who was Mayor of Exeter in 1648-9, and continued a Justice of the Peace until his death in 1659 (see Act Book ix. p. 126), ransomed the cathedral from being plundered of its leaden roof, bells, and sundry of its ornaments, at the expense of many hundred pounds. The organ was removed from the church, and at first stowed away in the cloisters: it was afterwards ordered to be disposed of, and the 'pipes to be melted down,' with the brass half-crowns, 'which were seized in Mr. Snowe's mayoralty.' The cloisters themselves were turned into a serge market, which was removed to them from South Street, on October 30, 1657. The Bishop's palace was purchased by Mr. Alderman Bennett for £450, on behalf of the Corporation, who afterwards sold it for £400, to the governors of St. John's Hospital; and these new proprietors leased it to a sugar baker, who was permitted to retain undisturbed possession of it during Bishop Gauden's episcopate, 1660–2, and this prelate, when he came to his diocese, accepted the hospitality of 'Mrs. Alice Ford,' the widow of the late mayor, Thomas Ford, since his own house was not in a fit condition to receive him. When Bishop Carey, in 1821, was making alterations in the palace, the troughs and other fittings on the ground floor of that portion which had been used for a sugar refinery were distinctly visible. On August 11, 1657, twelve of the seventeen churches within the city were ordered to be surrendered to the Corporation. Permission was afterwards given to the parishioners to purchase them, for sums ranging from £100 to £33 6s. 8d., with the understanding that they were to be only used for schools or purposes of interment. Dr. Vilvaine purchased Allhallows, Goldsmith Street, for £50; and St. Lawrence, St. Mary Steps, and St. Olave's, seem also to have been reserved by the parishioners, the rest appear to have been made over to St. John's Hospital, in consideration (to the extent of £650), of money, from time to time advanced for the use of the municipal body. St. Stephen's Church was valued at £230, and Mr. Tobey Allyn agreed to become the purchaser of it, and of the cellar underneath, which was included in this sum. The Chamber, however, retained the bells, the lead, and the materials of the tower. St. Mary Arches, St. Edmund's, St. Petrock's, and St. Mary Major continued open, but 'ministers' who affected the dominant party, superseded the lawful incumbents. Many of the cathedral dignitaries, and most of the parochial clergy suffered persecution, sequestration, fine and imprisonment, which, however, is perhaps scarcely to be wondered at, since they were most, if not all of them, ardently devoted to the Royal cause. Sir Thomas Fairfax, at the head of his army, entered Exeter on April 14, and stayed till the 18th, when he left it in charge of Colonel Hammond, and one of the regiments raised by Colonel Shapcote, Colonel Weare, and Colonel Frye. The king surrendered in the same year, and was beheaded in 1649. In 1655, John Penruddock and Hugh Grove, Esq., were beheaded at Exeter Castle for having taken arms against the Commonwealth; and several gentlemen were hanged for the same offence at the common place of execution. Colonel Penruddock was buried in St. Lawrence Church, and his fellow-prisoner, Mr. Groves, in St. Sidwell's, without the walls. The brass plate there inscribed to his memory, was erected after the restoration of King Charles II., which event was hailed at Exeter with much enthusiasm, and when His Majesty was proclaimed on May 11, 1660, the three conduits of the city were supplied with claret. The Corporation presented a piece of plate, of the value of £500, to the king; one of £300 to the Queen-Mother; and one of £200 to the Princess Henrietta Maria, who was born in the city. In 1670, Charles II., having been to see the new citadel at Plymouth, visited this city on his return, and lodged at the deanery. On this occasion he promised the Corporation a portrait of his sister, Henrietta Maria, then Duchess of Orleans. This valuable picture was sent down the next year, and now hangs in the Guildhall. At the memorable Revolution of 1688, Exeter was the scene of some interesting transactions. William Prince of Orange, having landed at Torbay on November 5, rode on the 7th to Ford House, near Newton-Abbot. On the 8th, Lord Mordaunt, with Dr. Burnet (afterwards Bishop of Salisbury), came to Exeter with a troop of horse. The mayor, Sir Thomas Jefford, who had recently been knighted and elected to that office by the mandate of King James, ordered the gates to be closed against them; but the porter not being able to resist, reluctantly opened them, and soldiers continued to enter the city nearly all the day. On the 9th, the Prince of Orange entered the city with a most magnificent cavalcade, followed by the remainder of his army. The Prince was welcomed with loud acclamations, and conducted to the deanery, where he kept his court, after offering up thanksgivings in the cathedral for his safe arrival, at which ceremony the canons residentiary declined to occupy their stalls; and when Dr. Burnet read the Prince's declaration, the prebendaries and singers crowded in all haste out of the choir. At first, the neighbouring gentry, intimidated by the recent cruelties of Judge Jefferies, and the fate of the rash followers of the late Duke of Monmouth, showed much reluctance in declaring in his favour; and it is said he had some thoughts of abandoning his designs; but being emboldened by the arrival of Lord Colchester with some of the king's troops, the gentlemen of Devon joined the Prince's standard, and entered into an association for the defence of the Protestant religion, and for the maintenance of government and the liberties of the people, as established by Magna Charta. This instrument was signed in the cathedral on the 17th; and on the 21st the Prince of Orange left Exeter on his march to London; leaving Sir Edward Seymour governor of the city. In the Prince's cavalcade, when he entered Exeter, were 'the Earl of Macclesfield, with 200 horsemen, most of them English nobles and gentlemen, on Flanders' steeds, in bright armour; 200 negroes attendant, wearing embroidered caps, with white fur and plumes of feathers; 200 Finlanders, clothed in beavers' skins, with black armour and broad swords; 50 gentlemen and as many pages, to support the prince's standard; 50 led horses, with two grooms to each; two state coaches; the Prince on a milk-white horse, in a complete suit of bright armour, a plume of white ostrich feathers on his head; 42 running footmen by his side; 200 gentlemen and pages on horseback; 300 Swiss guards; 500 volunteers, with two led horses each; the Prince's guards, 600 armed capa-pie; the remainder of the army, with 50 waggons laden with cash; and 120 pieces of cannon.'

On October 18, 1738, the Duke of Marlborough came to review the troops at Exeter, and was entertained by the Corporation. In 1779, the combined fleet appeared off Plymouth, and the numerous French prisoners then at that port were marched to Exeter, and guarded in the County Bridewell by a volunteer regiment, raised at this alarming period, by William Bastard, Esq., of Kitley. On August 16, in this year, this gentleman offered to raise 500 men, as a corps of fencibles; on the 18th of the same month, he had to select from 1500 young men, who contended for the honour of serving under him, in defence of their country. On the 19th, his regiment being complete, and officered by some of the principal county gentlemen, he was appointed to the duty referred to above; and as an acknowledgment for his prompt service, King George III. signed the warrant for his baronetcy, which was gazetted on September 1. Mr. Bastard, however, modestly declined the intended honour. To his warlike ancestor, Robert Bastard, we have drawn attention in the analysis of Domesday (see page 45.) In August, 1789, this city was honoured with a visit by George III., his Queen, and three Princesses. This royal visit was lampooned by Dr. Walcot, in his usual Pindaric humour, and in the dialect of Devonshire, his native county. During the alarms of French invasion, in 1798 and 1803, active measures were taken for securing and fortifying Exeter. In the early part of the late wars, large Cavalry and Artillery Barracks were erected here by government; the former occupying an extensive oblong area on the north side of the city, and the latter pleasantly situated in the south-eastern suburbs, within the bounds of Heavitree parish. In the latter part of last, and early part of the present century, Exeter displayed its royalty and patriotism by forming several companies of Volunteers, both horse and foot. Many of the citizens at the same time joined the three regiments of Devonshire Militia, who were sent to various parts of the kingdom for internal defence, at the time when nearly all the troops of the line were abroad. For more than a year, in 1812–13, the South Devonshire Militia were stationed at Sheffield, where they were much esteemed for their orderly conduct, and proficiency in military tactics. Previously to the termination of the war in 1815, the East Devonshire Militia were on duty in Ireland. On one occasion, after they had been doing garrison duty in the north, they marched from Yorkshire to Exeter in three weeks. Captain Hugh Cumming (well known in Exeter), joined this regiment in 1798; and only expired about twelve months since. The Dowager Queen Adelaide, accompanied by her sister, the Duchess of Leiningen, Prince Edward, and the two Princesses of Saxe-Weimar, the Earl of Derby, Earl Howe, &c., arrived in Exeter, at the Clarence Hotel, August 16, 1845, and stayed till the Monday following, when they proceeded to Powderham, Mamhead, Torquay, &c. In May, 1873, H.R.H. the Princess Louise, with her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, visited the Albert Memorial Museum in Queen Street, and expressed herself well pleased with the building and the arrangements generally.

In 1790 and 1800–1, the high price of bread caused several riots in Exeter; and the ringleader of the mob in the former year was afterwards hung. Owing to the scarcity and dearness of provisions, there was a serious food riot in the city on May 14, 1847. The coronation and marriage of her present Majesty, Queen Victoria, were severally observed here with great demonstrations of loyalty, and the poor were regaled with old English fare. After the Indian mutiny, the 9th Lancers were garrisoned in Exeter; in recognition of the recent brilliant services of this distinguished regiment, the officers and men were entertained at a banquet, provided for them in the higher market, at the expense of the city, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion. Exeter is now a brigade centre; is the 34th sub-district, according to the official Army list, and contains the depôts of the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 11th Foot.

Though the locality of Exeter is peculiarly healthy, it has at various periods suffered severely from plagues and other epidemics. It is said to have increased greatly in population in the reign of Athelstan, by the influx of strangers; but in the Domesday Survey, 48 houses which had paid taxes are stated to have been then in ruins. The city was visited by famine and pestilence in 1234, and the two following years. Fatal pestilences are recorded to have happened in 1378, 1438, 1479, 1503, 1546, 1551, 1569, and 1586. The plague was very fatal here in 1590, 1603, and 1625, but the city appears to have escaped the great plague in 1665. The small-pox was very prevalent here in 1777, when, out of 1850 cases, there were 285 deaths. Asiatic cholera visited this city in July, 1832, but was much less virulent here than at many other places, the number of deaths resulting from it being only 40. The same malady made dreadful ravages at Plymouth, Devonport, and many other parts of the kingdom in 1849, but was only slightly felt in this city, where many sanitary improvements have been effected since 1832, as appears from the recent Report of the Health of Towns Commission, and from a 'History of the Cholera of 1832,' by Dr. Shapter, the first edition of which was published in 1849. In 1832, the city was very badly drained, and scantily supplied with water, but now, as Dr. Shapter says in his valuable work, 'the drainage is comprehensive and efficient; water gushing at all points yields its ample supply; those attending the markets have covered buildings; in St. Sidwell's a church and schools cover the ground where the clothes of those dying of the pestilence were destroyed, and a new parish has been created in obedience to the wants of the people; a pleasure park occupies the ground which was first devoted to the burial of those dying of the cholera; spacious cemeteries without the walls have relieved the former over-crowded grounds, which are now closed and planted; while in one of them a monument, erected over the last cholera patient there buried, is a church'—a church for the parish of 'Allhallows on the Walls,'—'the advantages of which had been denied to the inhabitants for nearly two hundred years.'

The Castle of Exeter stood in the highest part of the city, within the north-east angle of the city walls, as already noticed. From the colour of the soil of the bold eminence on which it stood, it obtained the name of Rougemont Castle; and we find it described as 'the Red Mount, beyond the east gate of the city of Exeter,' in deeds of the 13th century, in possession of the Town Council. William of Worcester, in his 'Itinerary' of 1478, also calls it Rougemont. With reference to the colour of its soil, Sir Henry de la Beche says, 'Continuing a course from Broad Clyst to Exeter, red sandstones and conglomerates are observed to rest upon the edges of the older rocks to that city, where another patch of similar igneous rock occurs, forming the hill on which Rougemont Castle is situated.' When Richard III. visited it in 1483, he commended it highly, both for its strength and beauty of situation; but on being told it was called Rougemont, he mistook the name for Richmond, and suddenly grew sad, saying that the end of his days approached; a prophecy having declared that he would not long survive the sight of Richmond. After its surrender to General Fairfax, in 1646, this once formidable castle ceased to be a military fortress, and all its towers and battlements were destroyed. There are now but few remains of the building, its site being mostly occupied by the Devon Assize Hall and Sessions House. The governor's house, the old chapel, sallyport, &c., were taken down about 1773; but the lofty entrance gateway, with a circular arch and triangular headed openings finely mantled with ivy, is still to be seen in the beautiful gardens of Rougemont Lodge, formed on the site of the castle fosse, and commanding delightful prospects. There are still extensive remains of the boundary walls of the castle enclosure, which had a small collegiate chapel, which was dedicated to St. Mary, but known as Trinity Chapel, and was taken down about 1782. Notwithstanding the general opinion of modern writers, that Exeter Castle was of more remote origin, and had been the residence of the West-Saxon kings, we find no authority in history to countenance that opinion. The first building worthy of the name of castle is recorded to have been built by King Athelstan, and to have been destroyed by the Danes in 1003. As noticed at page 323, William the Conqueror selected Rougemont as the site of a larger and more strongly fortified castle than had ever existed at Exeter, and gave the superintendence of its erection and its future custody to Baldwin de Moles or de Brionüs, the husband of his niece Albreda. Baldwin was at the same time made hereditary sheriff of Devonshire, and after completing the castle, it became his occasional place of residence. The Charter Rolls prove that lands were once held of the Crown, by the service of guarding this castle; thus on July 7, 1216, King John granted to Richard Malherbe, certain estates by the service of providing in the time of war, by his own charges 'one man-at-arms (unam servientem ad haubergellum)' for forty days in our Castle of Exeter. Baldwin's son Richard, died without issue, and this castle was granted to Richard de Redvers or Rivers, who had married a daughter of Baldwin de Moles, and was created Earl of Devon by Henry I. On the death of Isabel de Redvers, sister and heir of the 8th Earl, in 1293, the castle and honour of Exeter passed to Henry Courtenay, the 6th Baron Courtenay, who was created Earl of Devon in 1335. The Courtenays held the earldom, with a few short intermissions, till 1556, and it was again restored to them in 1831. (See Powderham Castle.) The title of Duke of Exeter was first conferred in 1397, on John Holland, who was 3rd son of the Earl of Kent, and was beheaded in 1400. Thomas Beaufort, natural son of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, was created Duke of Exeter in 1416, but on his death, without issue, in 1426, the title became extinct. In 1443 it was conferred on the son of the first duke, John Holland, Lord High Admiral, who was succeeded in 1446 by his son Henry, who was attainted in 1461, when the dukedom was forfeited. In 1525, Henry Courtenay, the 17th Earl of Devon, was created Marquis of Exeter, but he was attainted and beheaded in 1539. His son, Edward, was restored in blood and honours in 1553, but dying without issue in 1556, the title became extinct. In 1605, Thomas Cecil, 2nd Baron Burghley, was created Earl of Exeter, and in 1801, Henry Cecil, the 10th Earl of this family, was raised to the dignity of Marquis of Exeter, now enjoyed by William Alleyne Cecil, the present Marquis, who succeeded in 1867; and who resides at Burghley House, near Stamford, Lincolnshire.

In 1232, Exeter Castle, as well as many others, was seized by Henry III., who gave it to his younger brother, Richard, Earl of Cornwall. In 1286, Edward I. granted it to Matthew Fitzjohn for life; but it continued nevertheless, chiefly in the Earls of Cornwall; and in 1337, when Edward, the eldest son of King Edward III. was created Duke of Cornwall, this castle, with a small district adjoining, was made part of the duchy, which has been ever since vested in the heir apparent to the Crown, who becomes Duke of Cornwall immediately after his birth, and who has always been created Prince of Wales. In 1397, there being then no Duke of Cornwall, Richard II. made John Holland, the first Duke of Exeter, governor of this castle, in which he is said to have had a fine mansion. In 1711, an Act of Parliament was passed, enabling Queen Anne to grant a lease of Exeter Castle for 99 years, for the use of the county of Devon. It is probable that the castle had been used for county purposes long before that period; indeed the gaol is said to have been removed there from Bicton, in 1518. There are no grounds, however, for this tradition, which has been unfortunately perpetuated by Polwhele and others, who appear to have been misled by King Henry I.'s grant of Bicton Manor to John, called 'Janitor,' from his office of keeper of the county gaol; and they therefore imagined that the gaol itself was at Bicton. Innumerable documents, the 'Close Rolls' and the 'Crown Pleas' prove abundantly that the service of Geoffery Balistarius, as lord of Bicton, consisted in keeping the county gaol at Exeter. The Chapel already referred to, as situated within the castle, was not dedicated to the Holy Trinity, but to St. Mary the Virgin. Tradition attributes the foundation of this church to the family of De Briwere, its existence, however, was more probably coeval with that of the castle; and its four prebends, Hayes, Cutton, Carswell, and Ash Clyst, were in the patronage of the Barony of Oakhampton. With reference to its dedication, the Cartulary of St. John's Hospital, page 37, contains a notice of the obligatory yearly payment of half a pound of wax, to be offered at St. Mary's Chapel, within the castle of Exeter, on the Festival of the Assumption.

Danes' Castle is a small circular earth work, in the northern suburbs of the city, near the County Gaol. Mr. Shortt pronounces it to have been an outpost of the Roman garrison of Exeter, and in corroboration of this opinion he evidences the number of broken urns, coins, &c., found near it, a few years ago, in cutting a road. The aggar or vallum of this little earth work is now very imperfect, but on one side of it there is still a fosse 28 feet wide and 4½ deep.

Mints.—On April 10, 1604, it was suggested to the Mayor and Council that a Mint could be obtained for Exeter, by suit to the 'King's Majesty' (Act Book, v. p. 62 b); but as they could not determine whether it would prove beneficial to the city, and, moreover, had some fears as to the amount of the attendant expenses, they declined to entertain the subject. We have already adverted to other Mints here, in the Early History of the city, and it certainly was one of the six places in which Mints were established by William III., in 1696. The silver coined here at the latter period has the letter E under the King's bust, and the mint was then in Hele's Hospital. The street leading from Fore Street to St. Bartholomew's Yard (in which was once situated the Priory of St. Nicholas) has from time immemorial been known as 'the Mint.'

Manufactures.—The Woollen Manufacture existed here at an early period, and was much increased in the reigns of Henry VIII. and Elizabeth. There were fulling mills here in the time of Edward I., and in 1535, the wool market for this part of England was removed hither from Crediton. The weavers and fullers of Exeter were subsequently united to the merchant adventures, who were incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, in 1559, under a governor and four consuls. Bishop Grandisson's Register (Vol. i. fol. 23), shows that in the reign of Edward III., the wools of Devon were considered to be of inferior quality, and comparatively of little value. Westcote (View of Devon, p. 59), states that only frieze and coarse cloths were made of this wool until the time of King Edward II., when an Italian, Anthony Bonvisi, taught the men of Devon how to make 'kersies,' and the women the art of spinning with the distaff. The brother of this 'Bonvisi' was probably called Lawrence, since in the privy purse expenses of King Henry VII. we read : '1st June, 1494, delivered to Lawrence Bonvisi for to bye wulles for the King's use £1340 11*s.* 1*d.*' In the previous month he had received £2088 4*s.* 11*d.*, 'to be employed for the King.' Hoker, in his MS. History, declares Exeter to have been chiefly inhabited by clothiers and workers of broadcloth, which 'were of such good and substantial making,' that the names of Exeter cloths be yet had in remembrance in the South and Spanish countries. Hoker's manuscript has been so often referred to in these pages, that it may be as well to mention that he was Chamberlain of the city, and in his MS. at p. 351, we read, A.D. 1555 : 'This yere at Michælmas the writer hereof entered ynto the office of Chamberlain of this citie, having the fee of £4 by the yere and his liveries, which made up 32 more—£5 12*s.* in all.' John Hoker died in 1601, aged 76. Under the auspices of Queen Elizabeth, great numbers of Dutch, Flemish, and other cloth workers, who had fled from the religious persecutions of the Duke of Alva, settled in this and other parts of England, and brought with them their arts and their industry. After this period, the Exeter merchants, chiefly Germans, Swiss and French, considerably increased their exports of woollen goods to Germany, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, &c. In the reign of James I. the trade of this city was still further augmented, and woollen goods were then exported to Italy, Turkey, and the Levant. In 1676 eight out of ten of the citizens are said to have been engaged in the woollen trade, and upwards of £50,000 worth of goods were sold here weekly. In 1750 no fewer than 302,760 pieces of woollen cloth were exported hence to foreign countries, and the total annual value of the exports, including cloth, wool, corn, hides, &c., in this year, was estimated at one million sterling. The manufacture of serges was then flourishing here; but a great part of them were sent white to London, to be there dyed and finished. For a long period the East India Company purchased here about £300,000 worth of serges, &c., yearly. When the ports of the Continent were shut against English goods by Napoleon, the woollen trade of Exeter sustained serious injury, and it has continued to decline since the general peace ; the manufacturers here, and in other parts of the West of England, not having emulated those of Yorkshire in the introduction of improved machinery, and the erection of large mills and factories. In 1822 the manufactures of this city and its immediate neighbourhood employed only about 350 hands, and consisted chiefly of serges and other coarse cloths. This trade has now entirely disappeared. Exeter lace, a very beautiful fabric, is the production of Mrs Treadwin, of the Cathedral Yard. Two magnificent lace flounces have been executed by her to the special order of Her Majesty the Queen. Although the general cast of pattern of one of them is similar to the lace known as 'Point de Venise,' yet it would be a misnomer to name it thus, since it is essentially an Exeter manufacture; and there is now a fair chance that Exeter will in future rank amongst the places famous for the production of a specially beautiful lace. Exeter has a large share of general commerce and many mercantile houses, some of them extensively engaged in the foreign and coasting trades. Here are several large iron foundries, corn mills, paper mills, malt kilns, breweries, and tanneries; and many coal, corn, wool, timber, wine, spirit, drug, and grocery, &c. merchants.

The PORT of EXETER extends about 26 miles along the coast of the English Channel, from Axmouth to Teignmouth, and includes the navigation of the rivers Exe, Teign, Otter, Sid, and Axe. The RIVER EXE, from which the city takes its name, has its sources in the forest of Exmoor, in Somersetshire, within six miles of the Bristol Channel, and about 36 miles N. by W. of Exeter. It flows in a very sinuous course, eastward to Dulverton, and thence southward to Tiverton, Exeter, Topsham, and the English Channel. Its principal tributary streams are the small rivers Barle, Batherm, Loman, Culme, Creedy, and Clist. At Topsham, about four miles below Exeter, it suddenly widens its stream to more than a mile in breadth, and becomes navigable for ships of considerable burthen. Anciently, vessels of good size had been accustomed to pass up the river to Exeter Bridge, and the tide flowed beyond the city; but in 1284, Isabella de Redvers, Countess of Devon, erected a lofty wear across the bed of the river, near Topsham, which from her is called Countess Wear. This obstruction stopped both the shipping and the fish, to the great damage of the city and neighbourhood. It was satisfactorily shown, by an inquisition taken at Exeter, in 1290, in a complaint preferred by the citizens, that the course of the river Exe, from the Checkstone at its mouth, to Exeter Bridge, was originally the property of the Crown; that the city of Exeter was also an appurtenance of the Crown; that Henry III. had granted the same to his brother, Richard, Earl of Cornwall; that the citizens held the fee-farm of the said city of Richard aforesaid, as they had holden it formerly of the Crown, by the yearly payment of £39 15*s.* 3*d.* ; that in virtue of such grant, and of ancient custom, the Exe water belongs to the said city, as far down as the port of Exmouth; and that the right of fishing and using the water is common to all. A verdict was recorded in favour of the city ; but the navigation to Exeter was further impeded by the Countess's heir and successor, Hugh Courtenay, Earl of Devon. He built a quay at Topsham, the general receiving place of the city's customs, and his bailiffs obstructed the city's sergeants in the execution of their right of searching vessels. The citizens very frequently preferred complaints against these encroachments; but owing to the confusion of the times, and the overwhelming influence of the Courtenay family, they could not accomplish the removal of the wear, though they maintained their right to the tolls. The tides, therefore, only reached Topsham, which belonged to the Earl of Devon, and became exceedingly flourishing. To provide a remedy for these ancient grievances, an Act of Parliament was obtained in the reign of Henry VIII., to cut a water-course or canal, from Topsham to Exeter. This 'new work or haven,' imperfect and inefficient as it was, still ranks its designer, John Trewe, an engineer of Glamorganshire, amongst the very first projectors of inland navigation. The Act book of the Chamber No. 2 contains the agreement between John Trewe and the Mayor and Corporation, and other memoranda prove that the original canal took the same course as the present canal for 9360 feet of its length. The name of this engineer is perpetuated, since one of the weirs is still called 'Trew's Weir.' The expense of the undertaking amounted to about £5000. Charles II. made Exeter a royal port; and in 1675, an act was obtained, to enable the Corporation to widen and improve the canal. In 1699, they had expended nearly £20,000 in this work; but further improvements were suggested and adopted till 1725, when the port was considered to be finished, though only comparatively small vessels could get up to Exeter. In 1825, the Corporation, deeming further improvements necessary, employed Mr James Green, an able engineer, to considerably deepen the channel of the canal, and to extend it down to Turf, a deeper part of the tideway, where there is now a sea-lock 125 feet long, and 30 wide. The canal is now more than five miles in length, and 13 feet in depth, and runs along the western side of the river. The entrance is deep enough to admit vessels drawing ten feet of water, even at neep tides, when there is not water enough for them to proceed to Topsham. Any vessels (except steam packets), which can pass the bar at Exmouth—that is, any drawing from 12 to 13 feet of water—are enabled to proceed at once to Exeter. Two of the larger sailing vessels are also now enabled to pass easily abreast along the canal. The principal trade by the canal is foreign hides, wines and spirits, timber, &c., and there is also a large trade done with France in refined sugar, potatoes, and fruit; but this has considerably decreased of late years, in consequence of the railroads. The canal after being enlarged and extended, was opened September 14th, 1827, and the basin was opened the 29th of the same month. Upwards of 56,000 gallons of brandy are annually imported directly to Exeter. Mr. R. C. Banfill has been in the service of the Corporation for nearly 60 years in connection with the canal. Vessels which draw too much water to enter the canal lie in bight at Exmouth, and discharge their cargoes into lighters, for Topsham or Exeter. The Basin, or floating dock, on the western side of the Exe, opposite the quay at Exeter, was opened in 1830, and is 917 feet long, and 18 deep. It is 110½ feet in width for more than two-thirds of its length, and the rest 90 feet. There are about 10 pilots at Exmouth, who are licensed by the Trinity Board at this port, as also are 6 river pilots, who reside at Topsham. The late Municipal Commissioners, in 1834, found that the old Corporation of Exeter had incurred a debt of £100,000 in improving the canal, and that this enormous expenditure was a subject of much complaint on the part of the city merchants, who said that the excessive tolls then paid bore a large proportion to the freight; sometimes as much as a quarter part for the freight on a coasting voyage. Since the introduction of railway competition, these tolls have been much reduced. Steam packets do not often come up to Exeter, and the first that arrived there was the Alert, which came to the quay on September 20, 1840. The screw steamer, Ossian (96 tons register), and the Ixia (131 tons register), trade from Charente and Cadiz and Oporto, with wines and spirits to Exeter, and bring a larger quantity of brandies than is brought to any other port on the south coast. The owners are Messrs. Turner, Edwards and Co., Bristol, and are represented at Exeter by Mr. Arthur W. Batt. The port of Exeter stands sixth in the average of the United Kingdom for the direct importation of this spirit.

Customs.—There are (1877) 26 bonding warehouses in the city for tobacco, spirits, wines, tea, and coffee. The gross receipts of customs in 1876–77 were £139,800; and in 1875–6, £138,100. Mr. Jones, wine merchant, of Longbrook Street, is now building handsome bonded stores near the Quay (A.D. 1878). The gross amount of customs' duty collected at this port was £84,496 in 1838; £90,081 in 1839; £122,226 in 1872; £126,232 in 1873; £124,127 in 1874; £130,607 in 1875; and £131,604 in 1876. The value of the total imports of foreign and colonial merchandise received here was £327,089 in 1872; £280,639 in 1873; £315,553 in 1874; £327,866 in 1875; £281,852 in 1876. The value of the total exports of the produce of the United Kingdom at Exeter was £1,424 in 1872; £13,377 in 1873; 7,978 in 1874; £1,258 in 1875; £10,607 in 1876. The number and tonnage of sailing and steam vessels, including their repeated voyages in 1876, was:—Foreign Countries and British Possessions: entered with cargo: 143 sailers, having a tonnage of 16,761, and 10 steamers, with tonnage of 2,986; cleared with cargo: 7 sailers, 1,844 tons; entered in ballast: 1 sailer, having a tonnage of 53 tons; cleared in ballast: 105 sailers, 11,363 tons; 2 steamers, 192 tons. Coastwise—entered with cargoes: 416 sailers, 35,264 tons; 1 steamer, 62 tons; cleared with cargoes: 140 sailers, 8,077 tons; entered in ballast: 42 sailers, 1,840 tons; 1 steamer, 40 tons; cleared in ballast: 313 sailers, 28,585 tons; 5 steamers, 1,850 tons. The number of vessels on the register belonging to this port on December 31, 1876, was:—65 sailers, having a tonnage of 6,425 tons, and 4 steamers, with a tonnage of 3,355; total vessels, 69; tonnage, 9,780. The number of fishing boats on the register on the same date was 289. During 1876, two wooden ships, having an aggregate burthen of 80 tons, were built at this port.

Markets and Fairs.—From the richness of the soil of the surrounding country, Exeter has long been noted for the cheapness and plentiful supply of its markets, which are held by prescription, and were formerly held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The principal market is now held on Friday, and is esteemed the largest in the West of England for all kinds of provisions. It is well supplied with corn and cattle, and there are also provision markets on Tuesday and Saturday. A 'Great Market,' for cattle, &c., is held on the second Friday of every month; and here are four Fairs for cattle and merchandise, held annually, on the third Wednesdays in February, May, and July, and the second Wednesday in December. The Corporation are owners of the markets, and have power to alter the fair-days, which they have done on several occasions. Henry I. granted to St. Nicholas's Priory, a fair to be held on St. Nicholas's Day (December 1), and the moiety of an ancient fair called Crolldítch, now Lammas fair, which was held on Southernhay Green till 1793. The latter is the fair which in Edward I.'s time was said to be held by prescription, and continued four days. Both moieties of this fair were purchased by the Corporation some centuries ago. A fair at the feast of St. Mary Magdalen, which had belonged to the Leper's Hospital, was granted to the Corporation in 1463. St. Thomas's, or Easter fair, is still the great pleasure fair of the year and is held in a field in Cowick Street, St. Thomas; which is annually filled with theatres, shows, and booths, largely frequented by the middle and lower classes, and by juveniles of all ranks. The Corporation obtained an Act of Parliament in 1820, empowering them to remove the markets from the public streets, &c.; and to raise money by subscription for the construction of two covered Market Places, which were not commenced till fifteen years afterwards, and are equal in design and accommodation to those in London. The Western Market, in Fore Street, was built in 1835–6, and is open for all commodities, but is principally used for the sale of butchers' meat, corn, seed, leather, and wool. It has a central avenue, 71 feet long and 31½ broad; and a market hall, 157 feet by 91, comprising a nave and aisles, with arcades springing from piers of granite. The nave rises above the aisles by a second tier of minor arches, through which light and air are admitted; and the roof is formed with circular ribs, all exposed to view. Adjoining the hall is the Market House Inn, which has a large Exchange, with approaches from within and without the market. The walls are of stone and brick, and the use of timber is avoided as much as possible, by the substitution of iron. The Eastern Market, in Queen Street, was not opened till July, 1838, though the first stone was laid April 8, 1835. It is a handsome and substantial building, of Cornish granite and Bath stone, in the Doric order, end is 230 feet long, and 165 broad, exclusive of the entrance from Paul Street. Great attention has been paid to the free admission of light and air. The shops and stalls for the sale of various commodities, except fish, are distributed over the area of the general market. In the centre is an avenue of granite pilasters, occupied by stalls for the sale of fruit and vegetables. The fish market is separated from the rest of the market by a covered colonnade round its four sides, and in its centre is a fountain, for keeping the temperature as cool as possible. The fish shops have marble slabs, with tubes for the distribution of water. The total cost of the Eastern and Western Markets was £88,220. Mr. Charles Fowler was architect of the latter, and also superintended the erection of the former, from the design of the late Mr. George Dymond. The Cattle Market has been removed to Bonhay, on the banks of the river, near Exe Bridge, and is well supplied every Friday.

Municipal Corporation.—Exeter has, from time immemorial, enjoyed many privileges and immunities. At the Norman survey it was found to be exempt from paying taxes. Since then it has received many charters and grants from different monarchs. Henry I. confirmed its prescriptive privileges, which were further confirmed by Henry II. and Richard I. In the time of King John, 'Isabel, his consort, held Exeter in dower, with a fair thereunto belonging.' In the third year of this monarch, the burgesses paid a fine of 110 marks for a confirmation of their charters; and about the same time (A.D. 1200) the city, which had previously been governed by port-reeves and bailiffs, was incorporated, and had a mayor for its chief officer, though the corporation claimed it to be so by prescription. In the reign of Edward I., the citizens pleaded that their city was an ancient demesne, and that they held it in fee-farm of the crown, at the yearly rent of £39 15*s.* 3*d.* To support this claim, they referred to the charter of Henry III., made to his brother Richard, whereby they further claimed return of writs, a gallows, pillory, &c., and a fair of four days, besides three weekly markets, which liberties they certified they had enjoyed since the time of the Conquest, 'upon which they were allowed.' Henry VII. gave the citizens a sword and cap of maintenance, and granted them a charter in 1497, which recognises a mayor, 4 bailiffs, 24 common councilmen, and 4 sergeants-at-mace; and settles the mode of their election. A recorder and town clerk are also mentioned in this charter. In 1627, Charles I. confirmed the city charters, and granted many additional privileges. In 1683, this charter was surrendered to Charles II., who granted a new one in the following year, under which the corporation was made to consist of a mayor, 8 aldermen, 15 common councilmen, a recorder, &c. In 1770, George III. granted the city a confirmatory charter, and instituted some new regulations for the administration of justice in the city. Henry VIII. constituted Exeter a distinct county of itself, thus rendering it independent of Devon, of which it is nevertheless the capital. This privilege was confirmed by Act of Parliament in the reign of Edward VI. Originally the limits of the city and county of the city were not the same, but they were afterwards made co-extensive, except for certain purposes. The Parliamentary limits were extended by the Reform Acts of 1832 and 1868, as already noticed at page 317. Exeter is said to have been one of the first cities that sent representatives to Parliament; and it certainly has returned two members regularly since the time of Edward I. Before 1832, the right of election was in the freemen and resident freeholders, of whom there were about 1,200. The number of names on the register in 1836 was 3,488, of whom 460 were freemen, 952 freeholders, and 2,076 occupiers of houses of the yearly value of £10 or upwards; but as many of these were entered in two or more parishes, as occupiers and owners, as well as in the list of freemen, the total number of voters was only about 2,800. Exeter Castle is a polling place, and the principal place of election for the Eastern Division of Devon, though the city, being a county of itself, is not a part of that division.

By the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, Exeter has been divided into six wards, and placed under the government of a Town Council, consisting of a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 36 councillors, with a recorder, town clerk, and other officers, and a number of borough magistrates. The latter are appointed by the Lord Chancellor, who, in February, 1849, issued a new commission of the peace for the city. The style of the corporate body is still the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the city of Exeter, and the city is comprehended in Schedule A of the Municipal Reform Act, among the boroughs in which the old municipal boundaries are to be retained, until altered by Parliament. The Provost Court, the Mayor's Court, the Sheriff's Court, and the Court of Requests, were the four civil courts held by the members of the old corporation. The court of requests was established by an Act of the 13th of George III., and was held every Tuesday, for the recovery of debts under 40*s.*; but it was superseded by the County Court, which was first established under 9–10 Vict. c. 95 (1846). Being a county of itself, Exeter has separate assizes and courts of quarter sessions. The recorder is judge of the Provost Court, which has cognizance in all real or personal actions to any amount, arising within the limits of the ancient glacis without the walls. The mayor and provosts, or bailiffs, hold the Mayor's Court, which has a concurrent jurisdiction with the above in personal actions. In this court the masters and wardens of the 13 trading companies of the old corporation were sworn in. Eleven of these companies, in the order of their foundation, are as follows:—Merchants, Tailors, Cordwainers, Brewers, Cappers, Hatters and Haberdashers, Weavers and Tuckers, Skinners and Glovers, Smiths and Cutlers, Coopers and Helliers, Butchers, and Bakers. The net income of the corporation for 1839 was £12,882; and their principal items of expenditure in the same year were, 'principal paid off, and interest, &c., £7,392; on public works, repairs, &c., £1,569; on police and constables, £1,215; administration of justice, prosecutions, &c., £533; and on the gaol, maintenance of prisoners, &c., £513. The borough expenditure for the half-year ending Michaelmas, 1849, was £1,897. The heavy debt transferred by the Old to the New Corporation in 1835, has been considerably reduced, and much property which the former had long held, as trustees, for charitable uses, has been restored by the latter, as will be seen at subsequent pages.

EXETER COUNTY COURT DISTRICT comprises the following parishes—Alphington, Ashton, Ashcombe, Aylesbeare (including Newton Poppleford), Bicton, Brampford Speke (including Three Horse Shoes), Broadclist, Bridford, Christow, Clyst Hydon, Clyst St. Lawrence, Colaton Raleigh, Doddiscombsleigh, Dunchideock, Dunsford, East Budleigh (including Budleigh Salterton and Knowle), Exeter, Exminster, Farringdon, Holcombe Burnell, Heavitree (including Wonford), Honiton's Clyst, Huxham, Ide, Kenn (including Kenford), Kenton (including South Town, Cockwood and Starcross), Littleham (including Exmouth), Lympstone, Mamhead, Netherexe, Otterton (including Passeford), Pinhoe, Poltimore, Powderham, Rockbeare, Rewe, Sowton (including Bishop's Clyst), St. Leonard's (including Trew's Weir), Shillingford St. George, Stoke Canon, St. David's, St. Thomas (including Exwick, Foxhayes and Oldridge), St. Mary's Clyst, St. George's Clyst, Topsham (including Countess Weir), Tedburn St. Mary, Upton Pyne, Whitstone, Withycome Raleigh, Woodbury (including Woodbury, Salterton and Ebford), Whimple. The office is at 13 Bedford Circus, and the Court is held at the Court House, Castle of Exeter. Matthew Fortescue, Esq., is judge; H. V. Mules, Esq., treasurer; R. R. M. Daw, Esq., registrar; and Mr. Thomas Andrew, high bailiff.

For Admiralty purposes the Exeter district comprises the following districts, viz.: the County Courts of Axminster, Honiton, Exeter and Newton Abbott and Torquay. For Bankruptcy purposes the districts of the County Courts of Axminster, Crediton, Exeter, Honiton, Newton Abbot and Torquay, and Tiverton, comprise the Exeter district. Exeter is also a District Registry of the High Court of Justice, under Order in Council of August 12, 1875; R. R. M. Daw, Esq., is district registrar. Exeter is also a Court of Survey under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1876, and embraces the following courts—Axminster, Honiton, Newton Abbott and Torquay. Matthew Fortescue, Esq., and the Recorder of Exeter are the judges. R. R. M. Daw, Esq., is registrar, and has his office at 13 Bedford Circus.

The Probate Court for the County of Devon is at 6 Bedford Circus. C. H. Turner, Esq., is registrar; Mr. J. B. Gould, chief clerk; and Mr. J. G. Greenslade, resident official.

The Guildhall is a spacious structure, in High Street, remarkable for the massiveness and variety of its architecture. The upper story, which projects beyond the line of houses in the street, is supported by an arcade of heavy moorstone columns. Beyond the vestibule is a lofty and spacious common hall, with an arched roof, supported by grotesque figures of beasts. The city assizes, sessions, &c., are held in this extensive court-room, and its walls are wainscotted, with carved mouldings. In the cornices are a number of small shields, with the arms of England, France, the city, and the different incorporated trades, and also of various mayors and recorders. At the upper end are the magistrates' bench and two jury galleries, and from the centre is suspended a brass chandelier. The walls are decoratad with many valuable portraits, among which are General Monk and the Princess Henrietta Maria, by Vandyke, George II., Chief Justice Pratt, John Tuckfield, Esq., founder of an hospital here, J. R. Walters, Esq., M.P., Benjamin Heath, Esq., Henry Blackall, Esq. (three times mayor), and Alderman Phillips. Above stairs are the grand jury room, council chamber, and other apartments. The Guildhall has, from time immemorial, occupied the same site, and was rebuilt in 1464. A chapel, dedicated to St. George and St. John the Baptist, stood in front, and is supposed to have been taken down in 1593, when that part of the hall which projects into the street was erected. The building was thoroughly repaired and beautified in 1720, and the interior has been again restored within the last fifteen years. It appears to have always occupied its present position since, in a deed of the 13th century, there is mention of a rent of 7*s.* granted to St. Nicholas Priory, from certain lands and shops in the High Street, near the Guildhall, 'de terris et seldis in magno vico juxta Gialdum,' in the 15th and 16th centuries: its situation is determined by other documents of the same character. Payments between citizens in ancient times were often made between the four benches or forms here.

The County Prison, which is situated in the New North Road, and which overlooks the South Western Railway Station, is a large and handsome building, erected on the plan of the model prison at Pentonville. It is now the only Gaol and House of Detention in Exeter. The buildings include houses for the Chaplain and the Governor, offices, &c., for the head-quarters of the Devon County Constabulary. To a certain extent, this prison is an enlargement of the old Gaol and Bridewell, the former of which was commenced in 1796, and the latter in 1807. The cost of the erection was £35,534, and the furnishing £635; the late Mr. William Hooper and Mr. John Ware were the builders; and Mr. Hayward, of Exeter, the architect. The execution of criminals of the county takes place within the prison. This prison is to be retained under the New Prison Act of 1877, by which all prisons are under Government inspection; several other prisons in the county will be abolished. According to the forty-first Report of the Inspectors of Prisons, dated March, 1877, the number of cells certified was 254 for males, 77 for females, total 331; cells for punishment for males, 6; females, 3; total 9; reception cells, 7 for males, 6 for females, total 13. There were 36 cells for male, and 2 for female debtors; and 2 day rooms for male, and 1 for female debtors. The total population of the prison on September 29, 1875, exclusive of debtors and military prisoners, was 118 (87 males, and 31 females), the number admitted during the year, exclusive of debtors and military prisoners, 1069 persons (796 males, 273 females); total 1187 persons (883 males, 304 females). Number discharged, removed, and died during the year ending September 29, 1876, 1075 persons (795 males, 280 females), thus there were on September 29, 1876, 112 persons (88 males, 24 females). The greatest number of prisoners at any one time during the year was 179 (147 males, 32 females). The average number of debtors in the prison during the year was $5\frac{13}{73}$ persons ($4\frac{172}{365}$ males, $\frac{258}{365}$ female); and there were 7 military and naval prisoners in custody on September 29, 1876. The prisoners are employed in mat making, oakum picking, stone breaking, carpentering, whitewashing, tailoring, painting, assisting engineer, shoemaking, needlework, laundry, cleaning, on the treadwheel, and in pumping water. The total value of work done by the prisoners during the year was £670 7*s.* 5*d.*, the net profit on their work being £160 0*s.* 5*d.* The total ordinary expenditure of the prison, including salaries of all officers, &c., for the year ending September 29, 1876, was £4842 16*s.* 11*d.*; the average cost per prisoner, without allowing for earnings of labour, £36 2*s.* 9*d.*; the average annual net profit on each prisoner's labour, £1 3*s.* 10½*d.*; the average weekly cost of food per prisoner, 1*s.* 10*d.* The treadwheel accommodates 48 prisoners, employed thereon four hours a day in winter, ascent 7200 feet, and 5 hours, 20 minutes, in summer, ascent 9600 feet. Persons employed at pounding stone are required to perform a daily task, in winter about four pecks, in summer six pecks. Mr. E. H. Rose is the governor; the Rev. John Hellings, M.A., chaplain; Mr. T. W. Caird, surgeon; and Miss Sarah A. Hughes, matron.

The City Prison was erected in Queen Street in 1819, but was closed in September, 1863, when the County Prison, just noticed, was opened, and the city prisoners were removed there. A large and handsome hotel is now being erected on the site of the old prison by a limited liability company.

Devon Assize Hall and Sessions House, commonly called 'The Castle,' form a spacious and handsome building, on the north side of the Castle yard, on the site of the old county prison and courts of justice. This structure was erected in 1773–4, but has undergone frequent alteratio ns and some enlargements, to make it suitable for the augmented business of the county. It is faced with Portland stone, and contains two commodious courts, a grand jury room, and magistrates' room. In the Castle yard is a fine statue of the late Lord Fortescue, erected in 1863; sculptured by Stephens, A.R.A. In the crown-bar-court is a large painting presented to the county by the artist, Mr. Brockedon, and representing 'The Judgment of Daniel.' The judges on the western circuit hold the assizes here twice a year for Devonshire, and at the Guildhall twice a year for the city. Petty Sessions are held here every Friday, before the county magistrates, who also hold here quarter sessions, &c., at the usual periods. County meetings and election meetings for the Eastern Parliamentary Division of Devonshire, are held in the front of the building, in the Castle yard, which is extra-parochial. On the Eastern side of the Sessions House the visitor may ascend to a very pleasant walk on the castle walls, overlooking Northernhay.

The INLAND REVENUE and STAMP OFFICES were removed from South Street to Queen Street, to more commodious premises in 1860. Samuel M. Balls, Esq., is collector; Mr. Charles East, chief clerk; Messrs. J. W. Mallett and A. E. Hancock, clerks; Mr. Richard Leckenby, supervisor; Messrs. A. Prideaux, J. Satchell, and P. Wheaton, officers; Edmund J. Moore and John Hutton, Esqrs., surveyors of taxes; and Mr. T. Hodge, officer.

The CUSTOM HOUSE, situated on the Quay, is a commodious building, erected in 1681, in the long room of which is a particularly fine ceiling. James Turner, Esq., is collector and surveyor; Mr. Elias Tozer, chief clerk; Messrs. N. A. Mackie and W. J. White, clerks; Mr. H. W. Suggate, writer; Messrs. J. W. Skeels and R. W. Tucker, examining officers; and there are seven out-door officers.

The CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, is in Gandy Street City Chambers, and was established 1867, and has now about 80 members, comprising the principal merchants of the city. Sir Stafford Northcote is president. W. Cotton, Esq., vice-president and treasurer. Mr. F. Pollard, secretary. The Council consists of 20 members, who meet at intervals about once a month.

DEVONSHIRE CHAMBER OF AGRICULTURE was established in 1868, and meets at the Half Moon Hotel four times a year; it has 200 members. B. J. Ford, Esq., is the secretary.

The DARTMOOR and EXETER WATER SUPPLY COMPANY (limited), was incorporated in 1877, with a capital of £125,000 in £5 shares, to secure 'a continuous supply of pure water for domestic and other purposes, uncontaminated with sewage or other deleterious matter; a supply, which should, at the same time, have a sufficient pressure for gravitation, to render unnecessary the costly use of steam for its distribution, and the employment of engines in case of fire.' It was proposed to bring the water from an uncultivated spot on Dartmoor, and favourable analyses were given by the well known chymists, Professors Voelcher and Redwood. The collecting reservoir, which it was intended to construct, would have been capable of containing above 1,000,000,000 gallons of water, and would have been 1250 feet above the level of the sea. This company has been purchased by the Corporation of Exeter, and it is possible that the Council will adopt the scheme when they have the water supply in their own control.

WATERWORKS.—The inhabitants were formerly chiefly supplied with water by pumps and wells in the town, and from several springs on the hills about a mile distant, whence it was brought in leaden pipes to several fountains or conduits, erected in the principal streets. One of these, called the Great Conduit, or the Conduit at Quartrefois, or Carfois, was rebuilt in 1461, and stood in the centre of the city, at the junction of the four principal streets; but it was taken down in 1778, when a new conduit was erected in High Street. Another was built in South Street, in 1799, and there is one in Mary Arches Street, erected in 1839, at the sole expense of J. Golsworthy, Esq. The Conduit in Milk Street, which supplies the Western Market and the neighbourhood, has three cisterns, which will hold 100 hogsheads of water, enclosed in a brick building, and conveyed in pipes to an obelisk of granite. According to Izaacke, attempts were made as early as 1635, to introduce river water into the city. Sixty years later the long contemplated scheme was determined upon to convey the Exe water by wooden pipes to the houses of such of the inhabitants as should agree to take in the same at a reasonable rate. On February 12, 1695, the Mayor and Chamber contracted with Jonathan Pyrke, of Stourbridge, county Worcester, gentleman, Richard Lowbridge and Ambrose Crowley, of the same place, ironmongers, and Daniel Dennett, of Gloucester, carpenter, for this purpose. These undertakers agreed, at their own charge, to erect and maintain a water engine in the New Mill leat; and, in consideration of their expenses and of the benefit and safety to accrue to the city from their useful enterprise, they were to pay down a fine of 5*s.* to have a term on their waterworks of 200 years, and to make an acknowledgment of a peppercorn, if demanded at every Michaelmas. This supply, in the course of years, became quite inadequate to the wants of the increasing population, and at the commencement of the present century, the proprietor, Mr. Rous, derived but little profit from them. In 1808, the late Mr. James Goldsworthy became the lessee, and he was the introducer of a great improvement by substituting iron pipes for the ancient wooden ones. The history of his exertions for twenty-five years, is admirably given in Dr. Shapter's valuable work on the cholera in Exeter; but at last, in the year 1833, he parted with his interest to the present 'Water Company,' which was then formed, and who are the holders of the original lease, 'which will not expire until February 12, 1895.' When the present Company was established in 1833, it had a capital of £30,000, since increased to £50,000, in £25 shares, now selling at more than £45 premium. They completed their works in 1834-5, and by means of a powerful engine, worked by two water-wheels (equal to forty horses' power, with additional steam power), they propel an ample supply of good water from a clear and unpolluted part of the river Exe, about four miles above the city, into a large reservoir, on the hill, near the County Gaol. This reservoir is at an elevation of 400 feet, and is about 200 feet square by 17 deep, and capable of holding 5000 hogsheads, or 315,000 gallons. Two large reservoirs, near the above, and capable of holding 1,000,000 gallons of water, or 25 gallons per head, were constructed in 1857. Another reservoir has recently been constructed at Mary Pole Head, at an elevation of 266 feet above the others, for the supply of the higher parts of the town. Connected with them are more than 20 miles of iron pipes, branching out through every street, &c., in the city and suburbs. They also supply the public baths and several jets d'eau on the public promenades. The Corporation purchased the works of the company in 1878, the Corporation paying 8 per cent. on the share capital of £50,000 by half-yearly payments, and taking upon themselves the present Debenture debt of £16,000, and the Floating debt of £5419 now secured by bonds. The purchasers have the option of redeeming the ordinary shares at £47 per share, at any time within ten years from the passing of the Act. The offices are at 4 Bedford Circus, and Mr. H. Tripe is clerk.

The Gas Works are situated at the Basin in St. Thomas, and are connected with the old works in the Exe Island, which are still utilised, and which rank among the earliest provincial establishments of the kind in England. The city and suburbs are brilliantly illuminated—the operations are carried on by the Exeter Gas, Light, and Coke Company, established in 1815 by Act of Parliament, with a capital of £82,500, raised by original and Preference shares. The Company are now going to Parliament for a large amount of additional capital, and for extended powers. The city was first lighted in 1817. The charge for gas is extremely moderate, the quality first-rate, and the Company (excepting during the period of the unprecedentedly high price of coal), have always maintained their maximum dividends. The Company now proposes to raise a further sum of £130,000. Their offices are still situated in Exe Island, but their removal to some more convenient and central position is in contemplation. Mr. W. A. Padfield is the secretary and manager of the Company.

ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.—It is said by Hoker, that Exeter, from its having abounded with religious houses in the time of the early Saxon kings, was called Monkton, and that Athelstan changed its name to Exanceaster. In an old poem, the city is made to speak as follows:—

"The ground of my first Ancestry
Is worn out through Antiquity;
Caeriske the Britons did me name,
And Monkton, Saxons did me fame;
"Till of the river running by
Exeter ycleped became I:
Seven times besieged mightily,
Mine Enemies to flight put I."

This strange assertion of Hoker, which has been perpetuated by Izaacke, cannot be substantiated, since the charter to which these historians refer, can bear no such construction. If it be genuine, the date, 670, is manifestly inaccurate, and the names of the witnesses belong to an antecedent period. In it the king professes to grant to the Monastery of St. Mary and St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles, at Exanceaster, a Manse called Munecatun, and then are distinctly specified the boundaries of this manse.

Monastic Institutions.—It is certain from the life of St. Boniface, that Exeter had a monastery before the end of the 7th century, and during the stay of the Danes, this institution appears to have been sacked and demolished. King Athelstan refounded it about the year 932, and it was dedicated to SS. Mary and Peter. Thirty-six years later this Abbey was reinforced by a body of monks, under the auspices of King Edgar. This building, together with its charters, was utterly destroyed, and reduced to ashes in 1003, when the city was sacked by Sweyn, King of Denmark, and no details concerning it have reached our times, and but slight materials remain to us, from which we can glean anything of the history of its successor, although the charter to its Abbot Akelwoldus proves that it was liberally endowed by King Canute. A deed of the Chapter at the end of the 12th century, proves that the usual 'hospital,' in this instance for twenty poor brethren, fronted the west end of the Cathedral, and it must have been situated partly on the site of the present deanery, and partly on the ground occupied by the College of Vicars. When Bishop Grandisson contemplated the erection of the latter, these brothers (called Fratres Kalendarii), were removed to St. John's Hospital. The Abbey is said to have had among its precious relics, part of Christ's garment, some of the hair of the Virgin Mary, and some of St. Peter's beard. On the removal of the Bishop's See from Crediton to Exeter, this abbey was given by Edward the Confessor to the Bishop and his successors, and its walls were incorporated into the structure of the Cathedral then founded. The abbot and monks were removed to Westminster.

St. Nicholas Priory, which stood in Mint Lane, was founded by the Abbot of Battle, to whom William the Conqueror had given the chapel of St. Olave in this city. King John was a great benefactor to this Benedictine priory, which was valued at £147 12*s.* per annum at the dissolution, in 1545, when its site was granted to Sir Thomas Dennis, who sold it to the Corporation, who disposed of it in lots before the end of the 17th century. The most remarkable remains of the priory is a crypt, with massive Saxon arches, which has long been used as a kitchen. The Catholic Chapel and Priest's house stand on part of the site, and when they were erected in 1792, mutilated pieces of carved mouldings and monuments were found in digging the foundations. The Grey or Franciscan Friary, which stood originally near the priory of St. Nicholas, was founded about 1240, but was removed, about 1300, to a place outside the city walls, beyond the South gate, given by John Gervis. The church of the first convent was standing so late as 1434, and its site was granted to the Corporation in 1507. The site of the friary was granted at the dissolution to Humphrey Rolle, and it afterwards passed to the Colleton and Graves families. Colleton crescent occupies part of the site. The Black or Dominican Friary, which stood in the extra parochial precinct called Bedford Circus, was supposed to have been founded by Bishop Blondy, about 1250. Its church became the burial place of the Ralegh, Martyn, Calwoodley, and other distinguished families. At the dissolution, Henry VIII. granted this friary to John Lord Russell, who converted it into a town residence for his family; and after they became Earls of Bedford, it acquired the name of Bedford House. In this mansion, the Russells received many illustrious visitors. Having been long neglected by the family, it was divided into tenements, which were taken down in 1773. Two ranges of houses, &c., forming a circus, occupy the site of this house and its once beautiful gardens. Cowick Priory, in St. Thomas's parish, was a cell of Benedictine monks, given by William Fitz-Baldwin in the reign of Henry II. to the Abbey of Bec-Harlewin. It was suppressed by Henry V., with other alien priories; but was refounded by his successor. In 1451, it was given to King's College, but Edward IV. gave it to Tavistock Abbey, with which it passed to John Lord Russell, at the dissolution. Some remains of the priory may be seen, or were to be seen, a few years since, in a farmhouse, standing near its site, and still retaining a few fragments of stained glass in its windows.

Polesloe Priory, in the eastern suburbs of Exeter, but in Heavitree parish, was founded for Benedictine nuns, by William Lord Briwere, or Brewer, in or before the reign of Richard I. It was suppressed in 1538, when its revenues were valued at £164 8*s.* 11*d.* per annum. It was granted in 1541 to Sir George Carew, and afterwards passed to the Champernowne, Petre, Izaac, and Parker families. The remains of this nunnery now form a large and substantial farm-house and out buildings. The walls in many places are more than 5 feet thick, and the house is panelled throughout with ancient carved oak, and contains several relics in carved stone of the old priory. It is in the occupation of Mr. William Adams. On the same side of the city was St. James's Priory, which was founded in 1146 by Baldwin de Rivers, as a cell to the Cluniac abbey of St. Martin, near Paris. It had only a prior and four monks, and was suppressed by Henry VI., who gave it to King's College, Cambridge. Scarcely a vestige of the building is now to be seen, though Chapple says the barn and part of the priory house were standing in 1735. The Chapel of St. Ann, with an adjoining almshouse, at the junction of St. Sidwell Street and Black Boy Road, was founded at an unknown date as a hermitage or hospital. After the dissolution it was purchased by Oliver and George Mainwaring, and converted into an almshouse for eight poor people, in trust with the dean and chapter. The chapel is only about 15 feet in length and breadth, but has a handsome Perpendicular window of three lights, with a piscina, and a canopied niche on each side of it. Within the Castle precints stood the Collegiate Chapel of the Holy Trinity, founded by Ralph Avenell, in the reign of Stephen, as already referred to. Divine service was performed in it at the assizes till it was taken down, about 1782. It will be seen at subsequent pages that St. John's Hospital was established on the ruins of an ancient religious house. In the front of a modern house, at the corner of North Street, stands an ancient wooden statue, representing St. Peter trampling on the devil. This figure holds a church in its right hand, and in the left the emblematical keys and book, and as a relic of old Exeter it merits particular notice. Fore Street and High Street are here crossed by North Street and South Street, and this part of the city was originally called the Carfoix, corrupted from the Norman French 'quatre voix,' four ways. In the middle of the street stood the city conduit, which was rebuilt in 1461, according to Jenkins; but more probably in 1534, when the average price of the workman's labour was 6*d.* per day. (See Oliver's 'Monasticon,' p. 403, note.) Here kings were proclaimed, and public announcements were made, it being the centre of the city. At each corner of this space was a corresponding figure to the one remaining in situ, and another of these, removed from its old position, stood within the memory of persons still living within the Court-yard of the house, once the residence of Alderman Coplestone. The conduit itself, which had stood nearly 300 years, and which 'had often poured wine to the rejoicing citizens,' was removed in 1770. At this period it had become dilapidated, but it was originally a very beautiful structure, and was decorated with pinnacles at the four corners; there were also niches on the east and west fronts in which were mutilated statues. On the top of the architrave, at the corners, were two lions and two unicorns (probably added at the restoration of King Charles II.). It was likewise adorned with sundry armorial bearings, but only those of the Courtenay family could ultimately be distinguished. In 1803 an old building was destroyed in Waterbeer Street, which, according to some, was the ancient Guildhall, but that careful historian, the late Dr. Oliver, appears to have conclusively proved that the Guildhall (at all events since the 13th century), has invariably occupied its present position. Others have considered it to have been the first Christian Church erected in Exeter, but there is nothing whatever to substantiate this theory. Jenkins describes it as 'evidently of Saxon architecture, and as having every appearance of having been erected long before the Norman Conquest;' he also says that it was 'of great extent,' but its original use must still remain a matter of conjecture.

As to the ancient foundations for the poor in Exeter which had an ecclesiastical origin, we have already referred to the 'Fratres Kalendarii,' whose house had existed at the west end of the cathedral, 'from time immemorial' until its brethren were removed to St. John's Hospital by Bishop Grandisson. With reference to St. Anne's Chapel, it is described as 'de novo constructa' (lately built) on November 2, 1418. (Stafford's 'Reg.,' vol. i. fol. 244). No almshouse, however, was attached to it until the reign of Elizabeth, as already noticed. The Lepers' Hospital, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, was probably founded before the Crusades, but the actual date of its erection is unknown. Its chapel, 60 feet long by 22, is still standing. Richard Orenge, Mayor of Exeter, in 1454 retired into this hospital, and was buried in the chancel of its chapel in 1458. Grendon's Almshouse (commonly called the ten cells), is in Preston Street. The founder thrice filled the civic chair of Exeter, and died early in the autumn of 1411. These almshouses continue to afford a very comfortable retreat to ten poor widows. The founder also bequeathed £20 to conduct the water to the 'quadrivium' (conduit at the Car-foix), already referred to, if completed within four years of his death. Bonville's Almshouse, to which was attached the Chapel of St. Roche. The will of the founder, Sir William Bonville, is written in French, and bears date 1407. The revenues of this foundation, which afforded a home to twelve poor men and women, were confiscated by King Edward VI., but they were restored by Queen Elizabeth. The house, which was situated in Coomb Street, fell into ruins in 1708. Wynard's Almshouse, in Magdalen Street, was erected and endowed by William Wynard, A.D. 1430: its foundation deed is dated January 20, 1436, and by it twelve infirm and elderly men were provided with decent lodging and subsistence; and a chaplain to administer the comforts of religion. Bishop Lacy's Register refers to the licence which had been granted to John Marchant, to celebrate divine service in the oratory or chapel within the hospital of William Wynard. This foundation, as will be seen hereafter, still flourishes. Adjoining St. Katharine's Gate, but outside the Close, is the Almshouse, founded by John Stevens, Canon residentiary of Exeter. The will of the founder (which was unknown to Bishop Tanner, author of the 'Notitia Monastica') is contained in Bishop Nevyel's Register, fol. 124; it bears date February 3, 1457. The foundation provides for thirteen poor persons, and is under the direction of the Dean and Chapter. In its chapel, Thomas, titular Bishop of Solubria, suffragan of Bishop Oldham, held an ordination December 6, 1576. PALMER'S ALMSHOUSE (will be again referred to). As to its early history, John Palmer, a baker, in 1479 erected four houses in Magdalen Street, for as many poor widows. His will, made October 26, 1487, was proved in November of the same year. To each of the poor in his house he left a mattress, a pair of sheets, and a bed coverlet. MOORE'S ALMSHOUSE ON THE BRIDGE.—On March 16, 1519, the Mayor and Corporation granted the necessary licence to John Moore (who had filled the civic chair in 1513), and to Bartholomew Fortescue for the foundation of an Almshouse for three indigent persons on the (Old) Exe Bridge. Adjoining it, and opposite St. Edmund's Church, was an ancient 'Chapel of our Lady,' as it is called in a deed bearing date July 8, 1380. Over it was a chamber for the priest, who had a pension of 50*s.* per annum. We have already referred to the skeleton found in this chapel when it was pulled down in 1833.

RELICS OF OLD EXETER.—The visitor who enters Exeter from Queen Street (the modern portion of the city), will be much struck with the picturesque old houses still remaining in most of the principal thoroughfares, with their timbered fronts, carved brackets, grotesque heads, and overhanging storeys. In Fore Street, over a house on the left-hand side, a little below South Street, there is a figure of a man on horseback, which was the sign of the abode of a Cavalier. Many of the interiors are peculiarly rich in oak wainscot, and shields of arms, and will well repay a visit from the antiquarian and archæologist. In the Close, near the north-eastern end of the cathedral, stands the ancient residence of the Abbot of Buckfast. The house is built round a quadrangle, and over the gateway are the arms of the Rodd family, who were amongst its subsequent owners. At Madford House, in Wonford Lane, which was built by Sir George Smith, we meet with the Arms of Queen Elizabeth. The old house in the Cathedral Yard, now occupied by Mr. Worth, was formerly a noted coffee-house, named 'Molls.' In the large room over the shop are to be seen forty-six shields of arms pertaining to the various county families, whose ancestors doubtless made this their place of rendezvous when they visited the city, and they were probably placed here partly out of compliment, and partly as an appropriate means of decorating the coffee-room. Bampfylde House, in Bampfylde Street, the old town residence of the family of the same name which is now represented by Lord Poltimore, is particularly rich in ornamentation of this kind, and in the hall there are six shields of fine old painted glass in the window. In the courtyard, there is an interesting example of an ancient leaden cistern, and the whole house is kept in excellent repair, and is in the occupation of Mr. Robert Dymond, F.S.A., than whom no one can more appreciate this fine old building. The houses on each side of the entrance to Gandy Street (occupied respectively by Mr. Anning, tobacconist, and by Mr. Grant, proprietor of the 'Civet Cat') are both worthy of notice; the former, once the residence of the Mallock family, contains interior decorations probably dating from the time of Queen Elizabeth; and the latter was the old 'Mayoralty House.' The house, No. 25 High Street, now in the occupation of Mr. Green, draper and silk mercer, was called the 'New Inn,' and was formerly the principal inn of Exeter, and was erected on land belonging to the Chapter and to the Chamber. The earliest mention that we can discover of it is in the account of Thomas Flay, Receiver of the City, December 6, 1624, when the County Magistrates were in the habit of holding their sittings. Its principal feature was the Apollo Room, where the only constituted Lodge of Exeter Freemasons held their meetings, as Brice informs us. It was begun at the Revolution; its proportions are 32½ feet long, 23½ wide, 17½ high; the ceiling, which is so justly admired, was commenced in October 1689, on the agreement of the Chamber with Thomas Lane, plasterer, to complete it at the rate of 5*s.* a yard, and he received on March 20 following, £50 for the work. The Royal Arms, and those of the See and the City of Exeter, were painted by Charles Stannaway. The arms over the centre window are of the family of Hillerdon; the opposite ones are Calmady, with the date of 1695 under. The arms at the east end are—1, Prestwood; 2, Acland; 3, Radcliffe. Many of the house fronts in Fore Street will also repay particular attention.

DIOCESE OF EXETER.—After its partial subjugation by the Saxons, and the conversion of that people to Christianity, Devonshire became subordinate to the Bishop of Wessex, and so continued until 703, when it was deemed expedient to divide Wessex into two Sees. On that division, Sherborne in Dorsetshire was made the seat of the new bishopric, which comprehended Devonshire; but on the subdivision of the See of Sherborne, in the year 909, Devonshire was constituted an independent diocese, and Aidolf, its first bishop, fixed his See at Crediton. In the year 1042, the Bishopric of Cornwall, which had its cathedral at St. Germain's, was united to that of Devonshire, at the solicitation of Bishop Livingus, whose successor Leofric, the sixth Bishop of Crediton, was chancellor and chaplain to Edward the Confessor. This saintly king, by a charter granted in 1050, consolidated the pontifical chair at Exeter, in the church of the abbey of the Blessed Virgin and St. Peter, as already noticed. The king being present in person translated the Benedictine monks to Westminster, and enthroned Leofric, the first Bishop of Exeter, with much ceremony. Being thus established in his new See, and having a grant of the monastic property in the Close, Leofric began the erection of the Cathedral, which was finished by succeeding prelates, after the lapse of many ages. By an order of Her Majesty in Council, made December 9, 1876, 'the Bishopric of Truro was founded, and Cornwall again made a separate See.' The Diocese now consists of the entire county of Devon, except part of the parish of Axminster, in the ecclesiastical district of All Saints, Chardstock, part of the parish of Uplyme, in the ecclesiastical district of Monkton Wyld, part of the parish of Exmoor, the parishes of Broadwoodwidger, St. Giles-in-the-Heath, North Petherwyn, Virginstow, and Werrington, and the hamlet of Northcott; but includes Stockland parish, formerly in Dorset.

BISHOPS OF EXETER.

A.D.
1050. Leofric, after governing the See 4 years at Crediton, was installed 1st Bishop of Exeter, by King Edward the Confessor, and Editha his Queen, in person. Leofric was Lord Chancellor of England, and died Feb. 10, 1073.
1073. Osbern or Osbert.
1107. William Warelwast. His consecration was delayed by Anselm the Primate; he was nephew and chaplain of William the Conqueror. He died Sept. 26, 1137, and was buried in the Chapter House of Plympton Priory.
1138. Robert Chichester.
1155. Robert Warelwast. (Nephew to William the third Bishop.)
1161. Bartholomew. Surnamed Iscanus, was a native of Exeter.
1186. John Fitz-Duke. Commonly called John the Chanter, having been Precentor of the Cathedral before his elevation to the Episcopate.
1194. Henry Marshall.
1214. Simon de Apuliâ. In consequence of the interdict, was not consecrated by the Primate, Stephen Langton, until Oct. 1, 1214.
1224. William Briwere or Bruere.
1245. Richard Blondy.
1258. Walter Bronescombe.
1280. Peter Quivil.
1292. Thomas de Bytton.
1308. Walter de Stapeldon. Brutally murdered in London, Oct. 15, 1326. Buried in S. Clement Danes; said to have been re-interred at Exeter; but this is a matter of question. He was Lord High Treasurer of England.
1327. James Barkley. Died three months after consecration, June 24, 1327.
1327. John de Grandisson. Consecrated at Avignon, Oct. 18, 1327. Died July 15, 1369; founder of the College Church of Ottery St. Mary.
1370. Thomas de Brantyngham. He was Lord High Treasurer.
1395. Edmund Stafford. He was Lord Privy Seal, and completed the foundation of Exeter College, Oxford.
1419. John Catterick. Died at Florence, Dec. 28, 1419, and was buried there.
1420. Edmund Lacy. Trans. from Hereford.
1458. George Nevylle. Trans. to York, 1465. Consecrated before his 25th year. Lord Chancellor before he was 28.
1465. John Bothe.
1478. Peter Courtenay. Trans. to Winchester.
1487. Richard Fox. Trans. to Bath and Wells, 1491; thence to Durham; finally to Winchester, where he died Oct. 5, 1528.
A.D.
1493. Oliver King. Trans. to Bath.
1495. Richard Redmayne. Trans. from St. Asaph. Trans. to Ely.
1502. John Arundell. Trans. from Lichfield and Coventry.
1504. Hugh Oldam. Joint founder, with Bishop Fox, of Corpus Christi College, Oxford.
1519. John Veysey (also called Voysey and Harman). Compelled 'præ corporis metu' to resign his office to the Crown, Aug. 14, 1551.
1551. Myles Coverdale. Translator of the Bible. Deprived two years later. Died Feb. 19, 1568–9, and was buried in the Chancel of St. Bartholomew's Church, London.
1553. John Veysey restored.
1555. James Turberville. Deprived June 18, 1559.
1560. William Alley.
1571-2. William Bradbridge.
1578. John Woolton.
1595. Gervase Babington. Trans. from Llandaff. Trans. to Worcester, 1597.
1598. William Cotton.
1621. Valentine Cary.
1627. Joseph Hall. Trans. to Norwich, Dec., 16, 1641.
1642. Ralph Brownrigg.
1660. John Gauden. Trans. to Worcester, 1662.
1662. Seth Ward. Trans. to Sarum, 1667.
1667. Anthony Sparrow. Trans. to Norwich, 1676.
1676. Thomas Lamplugh. Trans. to York, 1688.
1688. Jonathan Trelawny. Transferred from Bristol. Trans. to Winchester, June 14, 1707. One of the seven Bishops imprisoned in 1684.
1707-8. Ofspring Blackall.
1716-7. Launcelot Blackburn. Trans. to York, 1724.
1724. Stephen Weston.
1742. Nicholas Clagett. Trans. from St. David's.
1746-7. George Lavington.
1763. Frederick Keppel.
1778. John Ross.
1792. William Buller.
1797. Henry Reginald Courtenay. Trans. from Bristol, 1797.
1803. John Fisher. Trans. to Sarum, 1807.
1807. George Pelham. Trans. from Bristol. Trans. to Lincoln, 1820.
1820. William Carey. Trans. to St. Asaph, 1830.
1830. Christopher Bethell. Trans. from Gloucester, April, 1830; but on Nov. 11 following removed to Bangor.
1831. Henry Phillpotts.
1869. Frederick Temple, 61st Bishop of Exeter. Consecrated December 21, 1869. Installed December 29 in the same year. He was formerly Head Master of Rugby. The episcopal income is now £4200 per annum; his present lordship having liberally given up £800 a year, as a contribution to the establishment of the Cornish episcopate.

Bishop Brewer appointed the first dean about the year 1231, previously to which the 24 prebendaries were presided over by the precentor. This latter office is now filled by the Rev. Canon Cook, who is one of the five canons residentiary. There are four priest vicars, and seven lay vicars, with 9 secondaries, and 12 choristers. An ancient almshouse for 12 poor men and 12 poor women, called Fratres Calendarii, was converted into a college for the vicars choral, by Bishop Grandisson, about the middle of the 16th century, as already mentioned. The bishops are said to have had thirteen houses, besides the Palace, at Exeter. The latter was embattled by Bishop Quivil in 1289, and Bishop Stapledon had license in 1321 to fortify the Palace, and to surround the Close with a wall of stone. There was formerly a prison connected with the Palace for 'convicted and scandalous clergymen.' Among the ancient customs of Exeter Cathedral, was that of riding in procession on the vigil of St. Peter; and also that of electing a Boy Bishop out of the choristers, on St. Nicholas' day.

As already stated at a previous page, the rural deaneries have been recently re-arranged, to conform as nearly as possible with the Poor-law Unions, and the present Ecclesiastical Divisions will be found at page 31 of this work. The Diocese of Exeter is divided into three ARCHDEACONRIES, Exeter, Totnes, and Barnstaple. The number of Benefices in the Diocese is 493, which includes several new parochial districts, recently created and provided in the populous parts of the county. Of the Benefices, 131 are in public, and the remainder, with some few exceptions (given below), in private patronage. The larger proportion of the former are presented to either by the Bishop or by the Dean and Chapter. The Crown, the Lord Chancellor, and the Dean and Canons of Windsor are also included in the list of patrons. In excess of the number given above, the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury present to 2 livings; the Prebends of Warthill and Grindall in the Chapter of York, 1; Caius College, Cambridge, 1; the Trustees of the Exeter Charities and Twelve Governors of Crediton, 3 each; Dean and Chapter of Bristol, 2; Eton College, 1; Church Patronage Society, 2; Provost of Oriel College, Oxford, 1; King's College, Cambridge, 2; Christ Church, Oxford, 1; and the Vicars Choral of Exeter Cathedral, 1. The 'Exeter Diocesan Calendar' gives the following

The Episcopacy of the present Bishop has been marked by many changes for the better in the administration of the Diocese. His lordship holds frequent Confirmations, and visits every parish in turn. Under Episcopal auspices an annual Diocesan Conference was established six years since, of which the Bishop is President. The meetings are held at Exeter in the autumn of each year, and matters connected with Church work are there discussed by the members, who consist of six clerical, and six lay representatives, elected by each deanery. An inspection of the 'Valor Ecclesiasticus' shows us that in the reign of Henry VIII. the whole revenue of the Bishopric of Exeter amounted to £1566 13*s.* 6*d.*

The net common revenues of the DEAN and CHAPTER were valued in the time of Henry VIII. at £1132 18*s.* 11*d.* per annum, and in 1831 at £7352, besides £754 appropriated to the Custos and College of Vicars Choral. The estates of the Dean and Chapter are now temporarily vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England. There are a dean and five canons residentiary, and 19 non-residentiary canons or prebendaries. There are houses assigned for the residence of the Dean and five canons residentiary. The Corporation of the Custos and College of Vicars Choral (who are rectors and patrons of the vicarage of Woodbury), consists of four priest-vicars, of whom one is dean's vicar and sub-treasurer, and another custos of the college. They divide the net revenues among them. The Dean's vicar has a residence in the Close. A tenth part of all fines, payable to the Dean and Chapter and the Vicars Choral, have (by ancient custom) been set apart for the reparation of the Cathedral.

The CATHEDRAL—which has, during the last seven years, undergone a complete restoration, under the supervision of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, at a cost of about £50,000—is dedicated to St. Peter. It stands in a spacious close, and is a venerable and magnificent structure, ranks as the chief ornament of Exeter, and is highly interesting to the admirer of ancient architecture. As noticed at page 337, the original cathedral was but a small fabric, formed about the year 1050, out of the conventual church of the Benedictine Abbey. This Saxon structure, of which there are now no apparent remains—if we except, perhaps, the Chapel of the Holy Ghost, in the south tower—gave place in A.D. 1111, during the prelacy of Bishop Warelwast, to the commencement of the second, or Norman edifice. That prelate is recorded to have built the two existing towers, under which the transepts were afterwards formed. The Cathedral suffered much during the siege of Exeter by King Stephen, but was repaired by several succeeding bishops. The honour of commencing the third or present Cathedral belongs to Bishop Quivil, who was installed in 1280; but he made portions of the old edifice subservient to the grand design of the new one. The lower parts of the two ponderous Norman towers were converted into transepts, and the beautiful Lady Chapel, and that of St. Gabriel, built by Bishops Bruere, Blondy and Bronescombe, were retained. Several successors of Quivil continued the work, according to the plan designed by him, and it was finally completed, with the exception of the internal decorations and the Chapter House, by Bishop Grandisson, in 1360. Nothing can exceed the beauty of many parts of this Cathedral; but on the whole it is not so satisfactory, for the unusual position of the towers renders the want of some lofty central feature very apparent, whether the building be viewed from the Close or the city. The first great improvement exteriorly was the removal of the treasurer's house in 1798. This ancient edifice, with its gardens, originally extended from the north tower quite across the Churchyard, and entirely intercepted the view of the Cathedral from the north transept eastward. The ground, thus freed from incumbrances, was afterwards drained and lowered, and the plinth of the church, which had been covered for ages, was laid bare. At a subsequent date, several mean buildings which approached inconveniently near to the sacred structure were taken down, and recently the houses on the south-western side have also been destroyed, so that the exterior can now be tolerably well seen. It is built in the form of a cross, but the arms are very short, owing to the transepts being formed under the towers. The entire length of the building, including the Lady Chapel, is 408 feet; the length of the transepts 140 feet, and the height of the towers 145 feet.

The towers are Norman, and similar in size and general appearance, but they display varieties in their ornaments. Their surfaces are covered with blank arcades and other Norman ornaments, and there are square turrets and vanes at the four corners of each, rising several feet above the embattled parapets. The rest of the Cathedral is in the Decorated style of English architecture; and the numerous windows, with their flowing tracery, are amongst the finest examples of that rich style. Between the windows are bold flying buttresses, with crocketted pinnacles. The roof, which is of very high pitch, is covered with lead, and crowned by a fleur-de-lis ridge ornament. The most striking portion of the exterior is the WEST FRONT, which is unlike those of all other Cathedrals, and is surpassed by none of them in beauty. The lower part of this front is adorned with a rich screen, extending beyond the walls of the aisles, and rising to about a third of the height of the central pediment. This elegant screen has three doorways, and its entire surface is occupied by canopied niches, containing statues of apostles, kings, bishops, crusaders, &c. The second storey is formed by the west wall of the nave, and contains the large and noble west window, the arch of which is filled with the richest flowing tracery. On each side of this window are decorated arcades. The upper storey, which recedes somewhat behind the second storey, is formed by the gable of the nave, and has a smaller window of the same character. The statues and other ornamental work have lately been carefully restored, so that this magnificent façade is now seen in a nearly perfect condition. The flying buttresses, 'arcs-boutants,' which add so much to the beauty of the exterior of the church, were originated by Bishop Bitton (1292–1307). They were introduced to receive the lateral thrust of the loftier vaulting which that prelate had raised and reconstructed, in order to carry out his predecessor's (Bishop Quivil's) magnificent idea, for the transformation of the Norman Cathedral into one of another style. From Bishop Quivil's first year, 1280, to Bishop Grandisson's last, 1369, the best style of pointed architecture, known as the Decorated Style, prevailed in this country, and as the late Archdeacon Freeman says, 'to it we owe, in the main, our Cathedral as it is.'

The interior of the Cathedral is far more imposing than the exterior. It comprises a spacious nave, with two aisles, a chapel at the north-west angle, a porch on the north side, a transept, from which two chapels open on the east, a choir, with two aisles, from which two chapels branch off near the middle, and several others at the east end, which is terminated by the Lady Chapel. The Nave is grand and spacious—its lofty arch vaulting, covered with a profusion of bold ribs and elaborate bosses, exquisitely finished, attracts and leads the eye from one extremity of the church to the other, and will not fail to strike the stranger with its sublime and imposing effect. The sub-divisions next merit attention, and command admiration; they consist of seven high and broad arches on each side, resting on clustered columns, with a low triforium above, and that crowded by a series of large florid windows. On the north side of the nave, projecting from the clerestory, is that singular example of ancient art, called the Minstrel's Gallery. It rises from a bracket cornice, and displays in front a series of twelve quartrefoil-headed niches, in which stand as many figures of angels, playing upon musical instruments of different kinds. There are galleries extending round the whole and communicating with each other. Two noble and elegant windows adorn this Cathedral—one at the east and the other at the west end, both of which are particularly admired for the beauty of the tracery and rich colour of the painted glass. Wooden gates of a peculiar but handsome pattern separate the aisles of the choir from the transept; whilst the choir itself is divided from' it by a screen or rood-loft of most exquisite design, constructed by Bishop Stapledon in the reign of Edward II. The upper part has a modern finishing, and includes a range of thirteen paintings in oil upon stone, in arched compartments, representing the Creation, Adam and Eve, the Deluge, Moses dividing the Red Sea, the Destruction of Solomon's Temple, Building of the Second Temple, the Angel appearing to Zacharias, the Nativity, the Baptism of Christ,

Taking down from the Cross, the Resurrection, the Ascension, and the Descent of the Holy Ghost. In the north tower is a curious clock, made in the reign of Edward III.; and the great bell, which weighs 12,500lbs., and is the heaviest bell in England, except Great Tom of Christ Church, Oxford, which weighs seven tons six cwt., and that at Lincoln, which weighs five tons eight cwt. In the south tower are eleven bells, ten of which are rung in peal, and form the largest and heaviest set in the kingdom, the tenor weighing 2000lbs. more than any other of that denomination in this country. In the nave is a handsome stone font, given by Canon Bartholomew in 1843, and executed by Mr. S. Rowe.

On entering the CHOIR, the stranger will feel the force of the description of the Rev. Dr. Oliver, where he says 'the mind is enchanted with the exquisite richness of the noble east window, with the splendid episcopal throne, that towers in airy state to the vaulting; and, as the spectator advances to the sanctuary, he will acknowledge that the three stalls on the right are unrivalled in beauty and delicacy of sculpture.' The throne is of oak, about 52 feet in height, and its canopy is composed of pointed arches, columns, niches, pinnacles, and foliated ornaments, tastefully and delicately carved, rising in a pyramidical form, and finishing in a series of ascending spires. It was erected by Bishop Stapledon, in 1316; although until recently it has been wrongly attributed to Bishop Bothe, his successor, at a much later period, A.D. 1470. During the Commonwealth it was taken down and concealed, but replaced at the Restoration, and now remains as perfect as when first erected. The fine old monuments existing in this Cathedral are numerous, and especially worthy the stranger's attention. We cannot do more than enumerate some of the principal, and point out their situation. In the choir, is a splendid monument of Bishop Stapledon, who was murdered in 1326, and chaste and elegant altar tombs of Bishops Marshall and Lacy, the former died in 1206, the latter in 1455. In a recess in the north aisle of the choir is a sepulchral memorial, representing a full length skeleton, lying on its winding sheet. Nearer the Lady Chapel, in the same aisle, is the statue of an armed knight, which has been attributed to Sir Richard Stapledon, the bishop's brother. In the chapel of St. Mary Magdalen, on the north of Lady Chapel, is the sumptuous tomb of Bishop Stafford, who died in 1419. In the chapel of St. Gabriel, stands the stately monument of Bishop Bronescombe, the founder of the chapel, who died in 1280. In this chapel also, are two fine specimens of modern art; one is an exquisite piece of sculpture, by Sir Francis Chantrey, and has a full length statue, in white marble, representing Northcote, the painter, who died in 1831. The other is by Flaxman, in memory of Lieutenant-General Simcoe, who died in 1806. In the Lady Chapel are three monuments of early bishops, supposed to be those of Bartholomew Iscanus, Simon de Apulia, and Quivil. In the south choir are the effigies of two crusaders, one of whom is said to have been of the Chichester family, but is more probably the effigy of Sir Henry Ralegh de Ralegh, A.D. 1301, and the other represents Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford. Most of the chapels contain monuments, and the open screens, which separate them from the body of the Cathedral, are in several instances of exquisite beauty and delicacy. The Chapter House is said to have been built in the 15th century by Bishops Lacy and Bothe, but the lower part of it appears to be much older. It is a handsome oblong structure, with an oak roof, in richly ornamented pannels. In it is arranged the Cathedral Library, which was formerly kept in the Lady Chapel, and contains about 8000 volumes, among which are many valuable and scarce books, and some genuine Saxon manuscripts. Before the year 1547 there were 21 chantries in the Cathedral, founded by the bishops and others, but they were all dissolved at the Reformation.

The Cathedral has recently undergone a complete restoration, at the hands of that eminent architect, the late Sir Gilbert Scott. As long ago as 1843, the Dean and Chapter felt convinced that a very extensive renovation of the fabric was becoming absolutely necessary, since no works of any magnitude had been undertaken for more than 250 years, when Dean Ward, in the year 1626, spent £25,000 in beautifying his church. It was not, however, until 1866, twenty-three years after Sir Gilbert, then Mr. Scott, presented his first report, that the present Capitular body felt themselves in a position to commence the noble undertaking; which has resulted in making this venerable pile, for more than 800 years the mother church of the Diocese of Exeter, at least equal in beauty to any similar structure in England. The large expenditure, £50,000, has been met by two funds, to which all classes have liberally subscribed, one of these was called the Chapter, and the other the City fund. The first reached the sum of £21,000, and was headed by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, with a donation of £100. The Dean and Chapter as a body subscribed £3000, and added to this out of their private incomes the munificent sum of £7000. It would almost appear invidious to mention names, in the presence of such great liberality, but the name of the present Chancellor of the Cathedral, the Rev. Edward C. Harington cannot be passed over in silence; since his wonderful generosity in this restoration will cause him, hereafter, to be as often referred to, in connection with the Cathedral, as those of the ancient Episcopal founders of this noble pile. The eastern window (in the Lady Chapel) of magnificently painted glass; the reredos, jointly with Dr. Blackall, of Spitchwick Manor; the nave fittings; and the new altar table of carved oak, are all his gifts, and in addition, he subscribed the large sum of £4000 to the Chapter fund.

In the Spring of 1871, Mr. Luscombe, who had been appointed clerk of the works (and who was already well known in the capital of the west, on account of his successful connection with the Albert Museum), commenced the work by the erection of a wooden screen, in order to separate the choir from the nave during its progress. The restoration of the former went on satisfactorily, and it would have probably been completed in the early part of 1873, but the undertaking was unfortunately suspended for some months in consequence of what is now known as the 'Reredos controversy.' The objection raised to the new reredos at first appeared but a slight difficulty, although it afterwards acquired a very serious complexion; but as the proceedings in its connection are not now of interest, we will do no more than refer to them as the causes which delayed the re-opening of the choir, until St. Peter's day, 1876. After this date the work in the nave was rapidly pushed on; and on Thursday and Friday, October 18 and 19, 1877, the magnificently grand old fabric, restored to nearly, if not quite, all its original grandeur and glory, was re-opened, in he presence, and with the assistance, of seven bishops and 300 priests. We will now proceed to notice some of the chief features of the new work, commencing with the Lady Chapel, which was built in 1200, and transformed in, or about 1291, by Bishop Quivil. Here the roof has been beautifully decorated, the reredos has been restored, and a new eastern window inserted by Chancellor Harington, in memory of his sister, as already noticed. (The other four windows are also of stained glass; and are in memory of Bishop Philpotts.) Lady Rolle, of Bicton, has been the donor of the new fittings; and entrance to the chapel is now afforded by new gates of polished brass.

On the north and south sides of the Lady Chapel, are those of St. Mary Magdalene and St. Gabriel. The roofs of these have been renovated, the floors relaid, and the monument of Bishop Bronescombe, who died in 1280, in the latter, and that of Bishop Stafford, 1419, in the former, have been carefully restored. Here, and in every other part of the church, the piscinæ have been judiciously repaired, all ornamental stonework has been re-chiselled, and decayed crockets, finials, and mouldings, have been correctly renewed.

The Chantries of St. George and Bishop Oldham are situated immediately westward of the last named. The former, known as the Speke Chapel, is of Perpendicular date, and was erected during the espiscopacy of Bishop Oldham, as a mortuary and chantry, by one of the ancient Devonshire family of Speke, ancestors of the well-known African traveller of that name, and careful work has been effected here. In the Oldham Chantry that prelate lies interred; he died June 25, 1519, and the restoration of his burial-place, which was originally dedicated to Our Saviour, was undertaken some years since, at the expense of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. Upon entering the choir, the magnificent reredos first claims attention. As we have already said, it has been provided by the Chancellor of the Cathedral and Dr. Blackall, and it is stated to have cost nearly £2000. It is built of alabaster and marble, and is inlaid with lapis lazuli, and malachite. It is divided into three compartments by slender pilasters of alabaster, and of these, the central division rises to a height of 29 feet above the floor of the church. On either side are elaborately ornamented and graceful pinnacles, and the Triangular apex is also profusely crocketted, and the finial is surmounted by a Latin Cross. This recess contains a sculpture in relief of the Ascension. The figure of our Lord is within a large quatrefoil immediately beneath the arch, and on the ground are the Eleven Disciples in various positions, and amongst them St. Peter, the patron saint of the Cathedral, is conspicuous. The side compartments are much lower than the centre, and are ornamented with elaborate canopies, profusely adorned with tabernacle work; that on the north contains a representation of the Ascension, whilst the south wing has a group of fifteen figures, and the subject is the 'Descent of the Holy Spirit.' This beautiful erection only fills up the central portion of the space at the eastern end of the choir; it is, therefore, united to polished marble wing walls, with an alabaster coping, and above this there is a gilded grille of wrought iron work, which adds much to the general effect. The design of Sir Gilbert Scott was carefully executed by Messrs. Farmer and Brindley. The stone tablets, on which are inscribed the Ten Commandments, have been re-cut, and are now placed on the walls of the Ambulatory. There is every reason to suppose that the sedilia, called in old records the 'Bishop's seat,' was originally intended to preserve in the Cathedral the induction of Leofric, the first bishop by King Edward the Confessor, and Egytha his queen. Just above each of the three seats is a small head, the centre one that of a bishop, and on either side those of a king and queen; and these have been almost conclusively proved by the late Archdeacon Freeman, to have been representations of these personages. The beauty and delicacy of this masterpiece of Gothic carving, cannot be exceeded; the canopy of the seats is adorned with wreaths of vine leaves on each side, which meet, and form a finial. It is believed that the lower portion of this seat is of much earlier date than the upper part, which was undoubtedly erected during the episcopacy of Bishop Stapledon, 1308–1326. At the recent restoration, it was found to be so much defaced through time, that it was necessary to put 1300 new pieces of stone in it. The Bishop's Throne also erected in Stapledon's episcopacy, has been carefully restored. It is of carved oak, and rises to a height of 52 feet, and the following account of it is given by Mr. Worthy, in his 'Memoir of Bishop Stapledon,' page 5:—'It has been recently satisfactorily ascertained that he erected that magnificent specimen of ancient wood carving known as the episcopal throne, which for some years was attributed to Bishop Bothe, his successor at a much later period (A.D. 1465). But in the year 1312, there appears the charge of £6 12*s.* 8½*d.* 'pro maremio ad sedem episcopi,' and we are told that the oak from the woods of Newton and Chulmleigh was kept for four years, in order that it might be thoroughly seasoned. In 1316 the sum of £4 was paid to Robert de Galmeton for making the throne by contract, and the painting cost £1 10*s.* Lately restored at a cost of nearly £1000, the enclosure at its base is now appropriately approached by three steps of magnificent black marble, from our Ashburton quarries, and in nearly all its pristine beauty, and still adorned with foliage, pinnacles, and elaborate niches, it towers upwards above the triforium arcade, until its finial is nearly level with the clerestory window, and, as a well-known author remarks, "the lightness of its ascending stages almost rivals the famous sheaf of fountains of the Nuremberg Tabernacle."' Prior to the advent of Queen Elizabeth's visitors, the niches or tabernacles were filled with figures of saints and apostles. The enclosure at the base of this elaborate structure, is new. Traces of paintings of four of the early bishops were discovered at the bottom, and these have been preserved. The new pulpit was the gift of Mr. Edwin Force, the Chapter clerk; it is of alabaster, with panels, adorned with canopies and spandrils inlaid with coloured marbles. It rests on eight quatrefoiled columns, clustered round a central shaft; and in the panels are figures of SS. Peter and Paul, and several appropriate groups. The stall screens are new, and so also are the stalls; the four at the end are appropriated to the four dignitaries, and are surmounted by four figures in oak of Bishop Marshall (1206), Bishop Quivil (1291), Bishop Stapledon (1326), and Bishop Grandisson (1369). The ancient misereres, constructed during the episcopacy of Bishop Bruere, 1223–1244, have been preserved. They are probably almost, if not quite, the earliest examples of this kind of seat to be found in England. The strange and foreign character of many of the subjects, particularly the introduction of the figure of an elephant, have been attributed to the residence of Bishop Bruere for five years in the East. The carvings fall under three heads, viz. foliage; figures from real life, such as a lion with a serpent stinging its heel; the elephant already referred to, birds, fish, and men engaged in various occupations; grotesque monsters, and nondescripts, amongst which last the figures of Nebuchadnezzar, and a swan drawing a knight in a boat, are remarkable. The new stalls follow these ancient and curious examples, having a profusion of human figures, animals, and foliage. All traces of old colouring and gilding have been carefully restored, wherever they have been discovered. Plaster and whitewash no longer disfigure the walls; and the mighty Purbeck shafts which support the arcading, have been cleaned and repaired. The corbels of the vaulting shafts, as well as the numerous and interesting bosses and nodi in the roofs, have been also well and effectively treated. The floor has been entirely laid with new tiles, which increase in richness of combination and material as they approach the 'sacrarium.' It is said that the pannelled designs on this floor, are amongst the finest examples of this kind of work to be found anywhere. The chapels of St. Andrew, St. James, St. Paul, and St. John the Baptist, and the altar tombs and other ancient memorials have received a due share of attention. In the course of the restoration an ancient crypt of two bays was discovered, under St. James's Chapel, on the south side of the choir; it has a finely-groined roof, and there are traces of a staircase, with which it communicated with the chantry above. The choir is now entered through ornamental gates of gilded iron. The rood screen has been retained, although at one time its entire removal was a subject of serious consideration. Originally erected between the years 1317 and 1324, it appears to have been much tampered with in the reign of the first James, and the thirteen oil paintings, in the canopied recesses on its western face, usurp the places of ancient bas-reliefs. It has now been elaborately restored and pierced, so as to admit a full view of the choir, from the nave, and it still continues to support Loosemore's great organ, dating from the year 1665, which has been almost rebuilt by Messrs. Speechly, of London; whilst the case has been cleaned, remodelled, and enlarged. The windows have been also repaired, and many of them have been re-glazed with stained glass, by Mr. Drake, of Exeter, and Messrs. Clayton & Bell, of London.

The work in the nave has consisted chiefly of cleansing and renovating the pillars and walls, and of restoring the carvings and mouldings. On scraping off the plaster, many traces of fresco painting were discovered. Mr. Robert Dymond, F.S.A., has paid particular attention to some shields of arms which were found thus concealed on the walls of the south aisle, and he has found that they all relate to the period immediately anterior to the raising of the Royal Standard at Nottingham, in 1642, and the majority display the heraldic bearings of persons holding civic offices in Exeter, in the reigns of James I. and Charles I., and none of the persons whose arms occur, appear to have been Parliamentary supporters, and for this reason perhaps the shields were covered with whitewash, before the Puritans prevailed in the city; since none of them appear to have been wilfully defaced. In the north porch a niche has been laid open, which contains the remains of a mutilated rood; the figure of the Saviour, on which, has been decapitated. Statues of the Blessed Virgin and of St. John, are on either side. Several other interesting discoveries of image recesses and piscinæ have also been made. The chapel of St. Edmund, in the nave, has been renovated, and the floor newly laid with tiles, in conformity with the original pattern, traces of which were found on the removal of the modern floor. The door in the ancient purclose screen has been removed to its original situation, and several of the doors in this and other parts of the structure have been renewed. The beautiful Minstrels' Gallery has also been carefully cleaned and repaired; traces of illumination were also found here on the removal of the plaster. The restoration of the nave has cost a little under £10,000. The modern font has been replaced by a much plainer one, of Sicilian marble, of no architectural, but of a considerable amount of historical interest, since it was placed in the Cathedral originally, for the baptism of the Princess Henrietta Maria, daughter of King Charles I., who was born at Bedford House in this city, as already noticed. It is now placed in the first bay of the north aisle. The new pulpit in the nave has been erected by a few friends, in memory of Dr. Patteson, late Bishop of Melanesia, who was killed by natives at Nukapu, in the South Pacific Ocean, September 20, 1871. The pulpit, of yellow Mansfield stone, is supported on four shafts of Devonshire marble. The sculptures in relief, which represent the death of the prelate, are by Messrs. Farmer and Brindley. The choir only was used for divine worship until 1859; in that year Chancellor Harington spent £1200 in deal stalls, and other fittings. He has now provided new stalls of carved oak in a style suitable to the restored grandeur of the building, at a cost of over £1000. All the other fittings of the nave are equally suitable for the purposes for which they are intended; and Exeter Cathedral, in its renewed splendour, will be an enduring memorial to one of England's greatest architects, since it was his last great completed effort, and since he spent the closing years of his useful and famous life in so ably effecting its perfect and elaborate restoration.

The Close, or Cathedral Yard, comprises a large extra-parochial area, finely shaded with trees, and having many neat houses, &c., besides those occupied by the dignitaries of the church. In the 14th century it was enclosed by walls and had seven gates, but they were taken down many years ago. The Bishop's Palace, which has extensive gardens, has been thoroughly renovated, and mostly rebuilt about 1845, in the Tudor style, at the cost of about £4000, of which £3400 was given by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, out of the Episcopal Estates which were then surrendered. At the death of the late bishop, the Commissioners, as bound by Act of Parliament, augmented the episcopal income from about £2700 to £5000; £800 a year of which Bishop Temple has resigned in favour of the See of Cornwall. The old Palace was a very irregular building, which was erected at various periods, and was considerably reduced in size in the reign of Elizabeth, owing to the diminished revenues of the Bishop after the Reformation. In 1647 it was sold to the Corporation, who conveyed it in 1650, to the Governors of St. John's Hospital, who leased it to a sugar baker. After the Restoration of Charles II., it was purchased by Bishop Ward, who repaired it and made it habitable. When altered and improved by Bishop Cary, in 1821, some of the troughs, &c., of the sugar refinery were discovered. It is now an extensive and elegant mansion, and has a very beautiful Tudor window, removed from Elyot's House, in St. Petrock's parish, and richly ornamented with carved tilting-shields, &c. A private covered passage leads from the palace to the cathedral; and the gardens are bounded on the south by a portion of the ancient wall of the city, on which is a terrace walk. Near the Palace Lodge is the DEANERY, a commodious mansion, which stands on part of the site of an old Almshouse or Hospital, already referred to at previous pages. Near it is the Hall of the College of the Vicars Choral, which has been restored and decorated, and is now occupied by the Architectural Society. This edifice is of the 14th century, and contains some fine specimens of wooden carved work, and some old portraits of the early bishops.

PARISH CHURCHES.—There are in the city and county of the city of Exeter, nineteen parishes and three precincts, besides the Castle; and in the suburbs are the three parishes of St. Leonard, St. Thomas and Heavitree. In the city and suburbs are 23 parish churches and several episcopal chapels. Many of them are small, and possess but little architectural beauty, except those that have been erected or rebuilt during the present century. In the reign of King John, an existing deed shows that there were 28 churches in Exeter, and in this document they are all mentioned by name. In the taxation of Pope Nicholas IV., finished in 1291, 19 parish churches only are referred to. Some of them, as we have already shown, were sold in 1658, and many of them have lands and buildings, which have from time to time been vested for their repair.

Allhallows Church, in Goldsmith Street, is a small, antique fabric, which was disused from 1720 to 1822, when it was re-opened for public worship, after being thoroughly repaired. It has a wooden belfry and one bell. Its rectory, valued in K.B. at £6 4*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £66, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter. We have already referred to its sale in 1658, and to its purchase by Dr. Vilvaine. In 1767, its bells were taken down and sold to St. Sidwell's. Whilst the Rev. Charles Worthy (now vicar of Ashburton) was rector, this church was carefully restored. The eastern window has in the central light a representation of our Lord crowned with thorns and wearing the purple robe. There are several mural tablets, the most noteworthy of which are those to the memory of Loveday, daughter of Christopher Bellot, and of Bridget, her sister, who both died of small-pox, the first in 1711, and the second in 1719. A grave-stone on the floor records the death of Thomas Westlake, in 1666. There has been some idea of removing this ancient structure, which is referred to in the taxation of Pope Nicholas IV. (A.D. 1291), in order to widen the entrance from the High Street to Goldsmith Street. The present rector is the Rev. W. J. W. Webb, who has £100 a year, and about four acres of glebe, situated in the parish of Ashburton.

Allhallows-on-the-Walls is a handsome structure of Perpendicular architecture, which was finished and consecrated in September, 1845, except the tower, which was not commenced till 1849, when the south window of the chancel was enriched with stained glass, in memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cornish. The roof is open, and supported by circular ribs; and the east window is of beautiful stained glass, representing the four Evangelists, &c. The communion plate was presented by Canon Rogers, and the altar-cloth was the gift of the Hon. Mrs. Ford. The total cost of the building was about £3500, and at the time of its erection the parish had been about a century without a church, the ruins of the old one, which stood in Fore Street, being cleared away about 1777, when the present Exe Bridge was built. The new church stands in Old Bartholomew Burial Ground, which was opened on St. Bartholomew's-day, 1637, and was the principal place ot interment for the city till the opening of the New Cemetery, on the other side of the city wall, in 1837. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £5 4*s.* 9½*d.*, and in 1831 at only £19, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter. This church is also mentioned in 1291. The present rector is the Rev. John Gilberd Pearse.

Bedford Chapel, in the precinct called Bedford Circus, is a neat brick building, which was erected in 1831–2, at the cost of £4400, of which £2000 was raised in £50 shares, and the remainder by voluntary contributions. The interior has three aisles, three galleries, and about 1000 sittings, of which 300 are free. The front has three entrances, and over the centre door is a portico, supported on Tuscan pillars. The bell hangs in a small turret. The perpetual curacy, valued at £250, is in the patronage of the Bishop and incumbency of the Rev. W. J. R. Neame.

Exwick Chapel, St. Andrew's, is a neat modern building in the style which the Camden Society wished to introduce. It was consecrated on September 26, 1842, and was built by subscription, aided with a grant of £500 from the Church Building Society. It has a small turret and one bell. Exwick was made a separate district by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in 1872, when the church was considerably enlarged by the addition of a new aisle and the lengthening of the chancel. It now consists of nave, north aisle and chancel, and contains a handsome mosaic reredos, which cost nearly £400, by Salviata, and represents the Ascension in the centre panel, with the Apostles on each side. The roof of the chancel is beautified with illustrations of the Benedicte and Te Deum. The roof of the nave and aisles is also suitably painted. The Church is in the Early Decorated style, and was enlarged at the expense of the late William Gibbs, Esq., who also endowed the living with £200 a year, and built the present substantial stone vicarage, which is most pleasantly situated. A tower is intended to be built at the end of the north aisle. The church contains 250 sittings. It is in the patronage of William Gibbs, Esq., and the Rev. William Cobham Gibbs is the vicar.

Heavitree Parish Church, dedicated to St. Michael and All Angels, was rebuilt in 1845–6, at the cost of about £3000, raised by subscription, and a grant of £500 from the Church Building Society. It was consecrated August 1, 1846, and is a neat structure of mixed architecture, with a tower of four bells. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are appropriators of the great tithes, and patrons of the vicarage, which is in their peculiar jurisdiction, and was valued in 1831 at £641, and in K.B. (1535) at £34 3*s.* 4*d.* The Rev. Reginald Henry Barnes, M.A., Prebendary of the Cathedral, is the incumbent, and has a good residence and 6 acres of glebe. The great tithes, the property of the Dean and Chapter, are in the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; they were commuted in 1842, the rectorial for £467, and the vicarial for £563 a year. There are many mural monuments and several stained glass windows within the church. A tablet to several members of the Ralegh family by J. H. Foley, R.A., has been erected in the south gallery. There is also an altar tomb, which was erected by subscription, in memory of the Rev. Arthur Atherly, who was vicar 36 years, and who died in 1857. The pulpit is of stone and finely carved. The Register dates from 1560. The chapel at Whipton was built by subscription in 1861. Liverydole Chapel (hereinafter referred to) is also in this parish, and is held with Heavitree; it is in the patronage of Lady Rolle.

Holy Trinity, in South Street, adjoining the site of the South Gate, was rebuilt in 1820, at the cost of £7295. It is a spacious Gothic fabric, with a turret containing a clock and bell, and contains several mural monuments. It has about 1000 sittings. In the vestry is an original document in admirable preservation, relating to the ancient custom of celebrating the dedication of this church, dated 1442. In the chancel a stained glass window by Beer and Driffield represents the Crucifixion, Resurrection and Ascension of our Lord, and is a memorial inserted by Mr. R. Durant, of Sharpham. In the north aisle is a small three-light memorial window, representing the Presentation of our Lord in the Temple. The rectory valued in K.B. at £11 6*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1831 at £177, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter, and is now enjoyed by the Rev. J. G. Davis, M.A.

St. David's Church occupies a beautiful situation on St. David's hill, in the northern suburbs of the city. The ancient church was pulled down in 1816, when the erection of the present fabric was commenced, but it was considerably enlarged in 1839. It is chiefly in the Romanesque style, with a Doric portico, and a round tower containing six bells. It has a burial-ground; and its parish includes the manor of Duryard. The first known mention of St. David's is in a mandate of Bishop Marshall between 1194 and 1206. This old church was rebuilt in 1541. The Chapel of St. Clements, near the river Exe, is frequently referred to as early as the first quarter of the 13th century; it was dismantled in 1572. St. David's, although now a distinct parish, was originally dependent on Heavitree, to which it is a daughter church. The present building has some handsome stained glass windows, and a mural tablet (removed from the old church), in memory of Sir Thomas Jefford, who built Great Duryard; he died in 1703. He is remarkable as having been made Mayor of Exeter by command of King James II. in 1687, after that monarch had removed John Snell from this office, and had made other changes in the Corporation. The present incumbent of St. David's is the Rev. J. T. Toye.

St. Edmund's Church, in Edmund Street, on the western side of the city, was rebuilt in 1834, at the cost of £2000. It is a plain cemented structure, with a tower containing a fine peal of eight bells. It has a handsome stone altar-screen, given by Lord Rolle. When the old bridge over the Exe was in existence near it, the ancient church was commonly called St. Edmund-on-the-Bridge, as it stood on a dry arch of the old structure, which was allowed to remain when the bridge itself was destroyed. The Chantry on the Bridge, dedicated to the 'Virgin,' stood nearly opposite. The whole of this parish, together with a portion of the parish of St. Mary Steps, forms the manor of Exe Island. The rectory, valued in the King's Books at £10 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £196, was formerly in the gift of the Corporation, but now belongs to the Rev. Arthur O. G. Alleyne, who is the present rector.

St. James's Church, in the north-eastern suburbs, has been made the church of a parochial district, separated from St. Sidwell's parish in 1838; but the privilege of solemnising marriages, baptisms, and burials was not given to it till 1842; and its burial ground was not consecrated till 1846. Its district parish comprises about 4000 souls. It was consecrated as a chapel of ease on November 26, 1836, and was built at the cost of £3722, raised by subscription, except £500 given by the Church Building Society. It is in the modern Gothic style, and has 1200 sittings, of which 600 are free. The interior is neat, and the east window contains a large figure of St. James, in beautifully painted glass, given by Mrs. Wilkinson. The pulpit is richly carved, and is said to have been captured in a Spanish vessel, in the reign of Elizabeth. It was presented to the church by the Dean and Chapter. National Schools, for 250 children, of this district parish, were built in 1845, at the cost of £778, of which £200 was granted by Government, and £150 was given by the National Society. It is in contemplation to erect a chancel in the Pointed style of architecture, as a memorial to the late rector, the Rev. Alfred Buckeridge. The living was constituted a rectory in 1868, by an order of the Queen in Council. St. Anne's Chapel, already referred to, is in this parish. The patrons are the Dean and Chapter, and the present rector is the Rev. E. N. Dumbleton, M.A.

St. John's Church, Fore Street Hill, is a very ancient cemented structure, the tower of which has a peal of six bells, and a clock with two faces projecting into the street. The church was fitted with galleries in 1843, when the church of St. George-the-Martyr was taken down for the improvement of South Street, and its parish united with St. John's. Here are several neat monuments, some of which were removed from St. George's, as also were five of the bells. The rectory of St. John's, valued in K.B. at £18, and that of St. George's, valued in K.B. at £9 13*s.* 8*d.*, are now consolidated, and worth about £175 per annum. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter and the Lord Chancellor are the patrons. The living is now vacant.

St. John's Chapel belongs to St. John's Hospital, as afterwards noticed.

St. Kerrian's Church, in North Street, is a small, ancient, dilapidated building, which has not been used for divine service during the present century. Its rectory is consolidated with that of St. Petrock, and the joint benefices are valued in K.B. at £5 18*s.* 6½*d.*, and are now worth about £240 per annum. In the church is a mural tablet, on the base of which is an excellent carving in relief, representing the resurrection of the dead; it was erected in memory of Jonathan Ivie, 1717. The Dean and Chapter are the patrons, and the Rev. William David is the rector.

St. Lawrence's Church, in High Street, is a neat structure, with a tower and one bell. It was repaired and newly seated in 1847, at the cost of about £600. It has a handsomely carved oak screen. It has been recently re-decorated, and a stained window has been inserted. Over the principal entrance is a small statue of Queen Elizabeth, which formerly ornamented a conduit that stood in the middle of the street. This church is first met with in a deed of about the year 1202, when it belonged to the Abbot and Convent of St. Mary de Valle, in Normandy, and in 1275 it passed, with other English property of this house, to the Convent of Merton, in Surrey, and these new possessors agreed, at the request of Bishop Quivil, to surrender the patronage of St. Lawrence in favour of St. John's Hospital, under a reserved pension of £1 6*s.* 8*d.*, which was regularly paid until the dissolution of religious houses; after which the patronage reverted to the Crown, and the rectory is still in the gift of the Lord Chancellor. The Rev. W. G. Mallett is the present rector.

St. Leonard's Church occupies a pleasant situation at Mount Radford, on the south side of Exeter. The old church was very ancient, but the present fabric, which occupies its site, is a handsome Grecian structure, which was erected in 1833, and has a lofty portico over the principal entrance, supported by two massive columns. It cost about £1400, but was enlarged in 1843, at an additional expense of about £800, of which £500 was given by Sir Thomas Baring, Bart., who owns most of the parish, and whose family were formerly seated at Larkbear and Mount Radford House, the former of which was for many ages the seat of the Hulls; and the latter was built in the 16th century by Matthew Radford, Esq., and was made a fortress in the siege of 1643, when three pieces of ordnance were planted in it by the Parliamentary Governor of Exeter. It was afterwards a royal garrison, and was surrendered to Sir Thomas Fairfax in 1646. The church was fortified at the same unhappy period, and suffered much during the last siege. On August 26, 1876, the Bishop granted a faculty to erect a new chancel to this church, which was opened in May 1877. It is proposed to rebuild the remainder of the church. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £4 19*s.* 4½*d.*, and in 1831 at £195, is in the patronage of Lord Monson, and incumbency of the Rev. George Porter, M.A.

St. Martin's Church, in the Cathedral Yard, is said to have been consecrated in 1065, and has a tower containing one bell. The Perpendicular east window was inserted by Bishop Lacy; and in the church are several monuments. St. Martin's parish had a chapel dedicated to St. Peter, but it was disused before 1265. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 14*s.* 6*d.*, and in 1831 at £77, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter and incumbency of the Rev. — Hedgeland.

St. Mary Arches' Church, in the street to which it gives its name, is a spacious edifice, with a tower and three bells. The nave and aisles are separated by massive pillars, evidently of great antiquity, but the building has undergone many repairs and alterations. The interior is neatly fitted up, and contains many handsome monuments, principally of mayors of Exeter. The tomb of Thomas Walker, who died in 1628, has kneeling effigies of himself and wife. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10, and in 1831 at £187, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter. The day of the dedication of this church was the eve of Trinity Sunday, and Bishop William Brewer, in 1232, granted an indulgence of twenty-four days to all true penitents who, from a motive of piety, should assist at its anniversary. At the eastern end of its north aisle was the chantry of the Holy Trinity, and in the south aisle was another, founded by Thomas Andrew, who was Mayor of Exeter in 1505 and 1510, and who died, as his monument records, on March 9, 1518. The Rev. A. H. Hamilton is the present rector.

St. Mary Major's Church, in the Cathedral Yard, was a very ancient fabric, especially the tower. Over the north entrance was a small tablet, representing St. Lawrence in a state of martyrdom on a gridiron. The nave was separated from the chancel by a handsomely-carved rood screen; and the front of the gallery was ornamented with round-headed arches and a row of figures of angels, &c. The church was reseated in 1816, and contained numerous monumental inscriptions, both ancient and modern. It was found necessary to rebuild this ancient church in the year 1865, and it was finished in 1868, and now consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and west tower, with spire 151 feet in height, and it is extended a little westward beyond the site of the old church. It was designed by Mr. E. Ashworth, architect, and is in the Early English style. Some features of the old church have been preserved in the new. The arcade is supported on columns, with shafts of red and black marble. The cost of the work was upwards of £7000, raised by voluntary subscriptions, chiefly through the exertions of the rector. The dressings of doors and windows are of Bath stone. The Chapel of St. Mary Magdalene is in this parish, and was provided a few years since to meet the requirements of a portion of the parishioners. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15 14*s.* 9½*d.*, and in 1831 at £150, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter and incumbency of the Rev. C. C. Turner, M.A.

St. Mary Steps Church is in West Street, at the foot of Stepcote Hill, adjoining the site of the West Gate. The floor is much elevated above the level of the street, and the church is therefore entered from West Gate by a flight of steps, and hence its adjunct appellation. It is a small ancient fabric, and in its tower is a curious clock, over the dial of which are three small figures;—the centre one, representing Henry VIII., in a sitting posture, bends forward every time the clock strikes; and the other two are in military costume, with javelins in their right hands, and in their left small hammers, with which they alternately strike the quarters on two small bells beneath their feet. These figures are vulgarly called Matthew the miller and his two sons, from the circumstance of an old miller, who formerly lived in the neighbourhood, and passed the clock punctually at stated times. The interior of this church has for some years been undergoing restoration. The rood screen is very beautiful; a portion of it was presented to St. Mary Steps, by the rector and churchwardens of St. Mary Major, upon the demolition of the latter church, and new work has been added to complete it. Four of the figures of saints on the lower panels are original, and of 15th century date. They represent respectively—St. James the Great, St. Simon Zelotes, St. Thomas, and St. Nicholas. There are four bells in the tower, and the church has a handsome pulpit, a very ancient font, and a neat altar piece. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £180, is in the patronage of the Rev. J. B. Strother, and incumbency of the Rev. Joseph M. Cox.

St. Michael's.—This church, dedicated to St. Michael and all Angels, was provided for the accommodation of the parishioners of St. David, upon which church it is dependent. It was erected in 1868 at a cost of £20,000, munificently defrayed by William Gibbs, Esq., of Lyntesfield, who also built the adjoining school. The style of architecture adopted here is Early Second Pointed, and the church consists of chancel, nave with clerestory, and north and south aisles, separated from the nave by an arcade, supported upon circular columns of Ham stone. The chancel has a lofty east window of five lights, filled with painted glass, and the reredos is of Bath stone. The seating is of oak. The incumbent is the Rev. Joseph T. Toye.

St. Michael's Church, Heavitree (see Heavitree parish church).

St. Olave's Church, in Fore Street, was appropriated by William the Conqueror to Battle Abbey, and the benefice being of small value, was many years without an incumbent, and the church shut up. Being in this state, the use of it was granted, after the Edict of Nantes, to the French refugees, many of whom settled here as cloth makers, &c. Divine service was performed here for their accommodation, in the French language, till 1758, when the church was shut up again, and the interior went to decay. After being thoroughly repaired, and enlarged by the addition of an adjoining building, the church was re-opened in 1815. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7 13*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1832 at £92, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. J. Ingle, M.A. The present fabric appears to date from the reign of Edward III., although portions of it may be possibly older. St. Olave was King of Norway, and was martyred in 1028, and it is almost certain that a church was erected in his honour on this site, in the reign of Canute, but of this edifice or of its Norman successor there are no apparent remains. The church consists of chancel, nave and double north aisle, with a tower on the south side 56 feet high. The aisle adjoining the chancel is considerably longer than the other; it communicates with the chancel and nave by an arcade of four bays and with the smaller aisle by two arches. The church has been restored during the last three years, and an interesting discovery was made in the basement of the tower. The lofty tower arch which had been hitherto concealed was laid open, and within it and on the eastern wall a representation of 'The Scourging of our Lord,' executed in relief, and set in a sunken panel, was laid open. There is an hagioscope in the wall of the tower, and the bas-relief was without doubt originally the reredos of a chantry altar. Over the relief is a niche with a square back.

St. Pancras' Church, in Pancras Lane, is a small plain building, only 46½ feet by 16, and bears evident marks of great antiquity. It was shut up for many years, but after being repaired, it was re-opened in 1830. On the floor are some memorials of the Kelly family. The rectory, valued at £60, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter, and is now enjoyed by the Rev. John Cole.

St. Paul's Church, in Paul Street, was rebuilt in the latter part of the 17th century. It contains a fine painted window with a full length figure of St. Paul. It has also several mural monuments, and an oval font of black marble. The tower has a clock and one bell. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 2*s.* 6*d.*, and in 1831 at £174, is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter, and incumbency of the Rev. R. H. Fortescue, M.A.

St. Petrock's Church, in High Street, near the Cathedral Yard, was rebuilt in 1829, and is so closely surrounded with houses that the only part of it visible from the street is the tower with its projecting clock; it consists of chancel, nave, and two south aisles. The sacramental plate is very superb, and comprises two cups dated 1572 and 1640, and two flagons, dated 1692. In the tower are six bells. The rectory is consolidated with that of St. Kerrian. St. Petrock, one of the early propagators of Christianity, was Abbot of Bodmin, and died June 4, A.D. 564, and gave name to Petrockstowe, in Devonshire. The rector is the Rev. W. David.

St. Sidwell's Church stands without the Walls, in the north-eastern part of the city, and from its populous parish the new district parish of St. James has been taken, as already noticed. The original church was a very ancient fabric, dedicated to St. Stativola, or Sidwell, a virgin, who is said to have been beheaded with a scythe, about the year 740, and to have been buried here. It was rebuilt in 1812–13, at the cost of more than £2200, except the tower, which was repaired and surmounted by a handsome octagonal spire, in 1823, at the cost of about £500. It is now a beautiful edifice in the Pointed style, and in its lofty tower are eight musical bells, hung in 1768. The interior consists of a chancel, and a nave, with two aisles, neatly pewed, and having three large galleries. It will seat more than a thousand hearers, and the nave and aisles are separated by the clustered columns of the original church, supporting six arches, studded with rosettes. Each capital is divided into eight compartments, four containing angels supporting shields, and the other four small figures of St. Sidwell. The pulpit is richly carved, and supported by flying arches rising from four buttresses. The font is octagonal, and large enough for immersion. The organ is a fine toned instrument, and in the church are several handsome monuments. St. Sidwell's parish was anciently parcel of the parish of Heavitree, though it has always formed part of the county of the city of Exeter. It includes Hill's Court, which was for many generations the seat of the Hill family, but is now a handsome suburb. It also comprises all houses extending eastward from St. Sidwell Street to the workhouse, Polesloe Park, &c. In the church Register are records of great ravages of the plague, in 1625, and an entry of the burial of Richard Wilkins, who was executed for witchcraft in 1610. The following is the inscription on the brass to the memory of Hugh Grove, who, on May 16, 1655, was beheaded at Exeter. Three days afterwards his friends had permission to inter his body in this church. The original plate became much worn, and was replaced by a new one in the year 1788, but the inscription was literally copied, 'Hic jacet Hugo Grove, de Enford in Comitatu Wills Armiger, In Restituendo ecclesiam, in asserendo regem, in propugnando legem et libertatem Anglicanam captus et decollatus May 16, 1655.' The benefice is a rectory, valued in 1831 at £252. It is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter, and incumbency of the Rev. John L. Galton.

St. Stephen's Church, in High Street, was a very ancient structure, but having been desecrated in 1657, it was rebuilt in 1664. The interior was completely altered in 1826, and has now a neat appearance. The tower has three bells, and is crowned by an octagonal turret. This church is referred to in Domesday, at which period it was the head (or seat) of the Episcopal Barony. 'The Bishop of Exeter has one church in the city, which returns one mark of silver,' &c. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £7 17*s.* 3½*d.*, and in 1831 at only £85, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. John White Hedgeland.

St. Thomas's Parish Church in Cowick Street, originally dedicated to St. Thomas the Martyr, but designated St. Thomas the Apostle since the Reformation, was consecrated in 1412, and rebuilt in 1656, was enlarged in 1828, and has a tower and six bells. It has several handsome painted windows, one in memory of the late vicar, the Rev. W. H. Howard, M.A., representing Our Saviour at the Last Supper, and contains some neat monuments, one of which is from the chisel of John Bacon, Esq., in memory of his daughter Mrs. Medley, wife of the Bishop of Fredericton, formerly vicar of this parish. Major Buller, C.B., is impropriator of the rectorial tithes, and also patron of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £11 2*s.* 8½*d.* and in 1831 at £237, and now enjoyed by the Rev. Maurice Swabey, M.A., who has a good parsonage house, and is also incumbent of Oldridge Chapel, the latter of which was valued in 1831 at £60, now of the value of £75, and was rebuilt in 1789, by the late James Buller, Esq. After the rebellion of 1549, Mr. Welsh, the vicar of St. Thomas, who had been conspicuous in his adherence to the disaffected party, was hanged on a gibbet erected for that purpose, on the tower of his own church, and the body remained there until the accession of Queen Mary.

The Free Church, or Christ Church, in Southernhay, is a proprietary chapel, and is not within the pale of the Established Church. It was opened in 1846, and cost about £5000. It is in the Roman style, with a turret and bell. The interior has three aisles and three galleries, and will seat 1000 persons. The east window is enriched with painted glass.

The Roman Catholic Chapel, in Mint Lane, is a very neat building, erected in 1791-2, on part of the site of St. Nicholas's Priory, as noticed at page 335. The interior is handsomely fitted up, and has a good organ. The Rev. George Oliver, D.D., who held the pastoral office here for many years, in 1821 published a valuable History of Exeter, compiled from original documents, the corporation records, the Bishop's registers, &c In conjunction with P. Jones, Esq., he edited 'Westcote's View of Devonshire in 1630,' which was not published till 1845. The present priest is the Rev. F. G. Hobson.

Dissenting Chapels.—Besides the numerous episcopal places of worship, and the two last named, there are in the city and suburbs seventeen other places of religious worship. The Unitarian Chapel, called 'George's Meeting,' is a large handsome building in South Street. It was erected by Presbyterians, in 1760, and has an endowment of about £200 per annum, from landed property, chiefly in Polesloe. The chapel will seat about 1000 hearers. In the early part of last century, a great controversy arose among the Dissenters of Exeter, which spread over a large portion of the kingdom, and gave rise to numerous pamphlets. The point in controversy was the doctrine of the Trinity, and two of the Presbyterian ministers here embraced Unitarianism, and opened a meeting-house in Mint Lane. The congregations were afterwards united by that eminent divine, Micaiah Towgood, who died here in 1792, in the 92nd year of his age. The Independent Chapel, in Castle Street, was built in 1796, on the site of the old County Gaol, and was enlarged and renovated in 1839; but in April 1870 the congregation removed to a new Gothic structure, erected in Southernhay, and capable of accommodating upwards of 1000 persons. The Chapel in Castle Street has been converted into a Sunday School, which is attended by 800 scholars. The Baptists have chapels in South Street and Bartholomew Street, and one called Zoar Chapel; the Wesleyans at the Mint and Southernhay; the Primitive Methodists in St. Sidwell's, and two chapels called Victoria Chapel and The Tabernacle. The Friends' Meeting-house is in Magdalen Street; the Bible Christians have a chapel, called Providence Chapel, in Northernhay Street; the Plymouth Brethren have two rooms, one in Friernhay Street, and the other at the Market Hall; the Free Methodist Chapel is in Northernhay Gate; and the Countess of Huntingdon's Connection Chapel is in Grosvenor Place. The Jews have a synagogue in Mary Arches Street.

The Cemetery, which occupies nearly 5 acres of hilly ground, on the north side of the city wall between Bartholomew Street and Exe Street, was purchased by the Exeter Improvement Commissioners in 1834, and divided into two portions, one for Dissenters, and the other for members of the Established Church. The latter was consecrated by the Bishop, on August 24, 1837. The whole of the ground is laid out in walks, and planted with flowers and shrubs. Its hilly nature affords room, by a series of arches and catacombs on the upper side, for the interment of 22,000 coffins, and, by building, at any future period, additional arches on the lower parts, space will be obtained for 10,000 more. Upwards of 500 interments take place here yearly, and the total cost of the cemetery has been about £5000. At the head of this beautiful burial ground is a terrace walk, on the top of a long portion of the city wall, on the other side of which is the Old Bartholomew Burial Ground, and the new church of Allhallows-on-the-Walls (see p. 345). It was found necessary about twelve years since to provide a new cemetery, and 10 acres of ground were purchased in the eastern suburbs of the city. Six acres are enclosed, the inner portion of which consisting of 4½ acres, is set aside for members of the Established Church, and the remainder is appropriated to Dissenters. Each portion has a mortuary chapel, built of Heavitree stone, and seats to accommodate forty persons.

Ecclesiastical Institutions, &c.—The Exeter Diocesan Additional Curates Society provides additional clergy in the dioceses of Exeter and Truro. The money granted in 1877 was £570 for 21 parishes, having an average population of 5593. The Bishop is president; W. Barnes, Esq., honorary treasurer; and the Rev. John Manley Hawker, hon. secretary. The Exeter Diocesan Church Building Association was established on January 5, 1859, and on December 31, 1876, had invested sums amounting to £1300, besides £246 6*s.* 3*d.* in the hands of the bankers and treasurer. The grants made in the year amounted to £147 10*s.* Bishop Phillpotts' Church Endowment Fund was created under the will of the late Bishop Phillpotts for the endowment of ill-endowed parochial or district churches in the diocese of Exeter, and consists of £12,388 17*s.* 9*d.* Three per Cents. The fund was augmented in 1874 by a benefaction of £500 through the Dean of Exeter. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are the trustees. The Diocesan Association of the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, was established as early as 1699; and the Auxiliary Bible Society in 1809. Here are also branches of Missionary, Tract, Pastoral Aid, and other societies, for the promotion of religion both at home and abroad. The Exeter Diocesan Architectural Society was established in 1841. The Bishop is patron; Lord Coleridge, president; the Rev. J. L. Fulford, and B. C. Gidley, Esqs., secretaries; J. Hayward, Esq., architect; and P. B. Hayward, Esq., curator. The Guild of Devonshire Ringers has for its objects the cultivation of change-ringing and belfry reform. The Bishop is patron; C. A. W. Troyte, Esq., president; the Rev. J. L. L. Fulford, secretary; and W. B. Fulford, Esq., treasurer.

Educational Establishments.—St. John's Hospital and the late Free Grammar and Blue Schools.—An hospital, under this name, was founded in the 23rd of Henry III., by Gilbert and John Long, for five priests, nine boys, and twelve poor almsmen; and continued till the latter end of the reign of Henry VIII., when it was suppressed, along with the smaller religious houses. The origin of the the present establishment was as follows:—In 1629, the widow and son of Hugh Crossing, alderman and merchant of Exeter, agreeable to his charitable intention, granted to thirteen trustees, and their heirs, the house and precinct of the late dissolved Hospital of St. John, and the church of the said late hospital, and various other buildings, lands, &c., to be employed for an hospital in setting the poor to work. In the same indenture, made between the mayor and Corporation of Exeter, and the aforesaid grantors, it is recited that £350 had been given to the Corporation by Thomas Walker, Elizabeth Dowrich, and Walter Barough, in trust for the foundation of a Free Grammar School, which the Corporation agreed to establish in part of the hospital church. In 1637, the hospital was incorporated by Charles I., 'for the relief, setting on work, and education in good learning and otherwise, of poor children of Exeter; also, for the maintenance of aged poor people inhabiting there, and not able to work.' The mayor, recorder, aldermen, and common council of Exeter, were constituted governors of the charity, and vested with power to establish a Free Grammar School and a Free English School. For supporting the latter, £500, left by Elizabeth Jourdaine, was ordered to be appropriated. Numerous legacies and gifts were afterwards received by the governors for the support of the hospital and schools; and the property of the charity comprises about 1170 acres of land, and many houses and other buildings, in the manors of Clist St. Lawrence and Clist Gerrard; a farm of 179 acres in Teignharvey; 55A. 0R. 12P. in Bovey-Tracey; 26A. 0R. 28P. in Newton-Ferrers; and about forty houses, cottages, and tenements in the city of Exeter. This property was estimated, in 1821, at the clear yearly value of about £4500; but it was held by about ninety lessees, at small reserved rents, amounting to only about £700 a year, besides which, the charity receives occasionally large sums for fines and heriots, paid by the lessees on the renewal of leases, held for lives. More than half of the income is derived from the manors of Clist St. Lawrence and Gerrard, and other property, given by Elize Hele, Esq., in 1632, for charitable uses, and appropriated by his executors for the education and maintenance of poor children, except £32 per annum for two lectures at Exeter College, Oxford. The average annual expenditure of the charity, from 1815 to 1820, was about £900, including the salaries paid to the masters of the Grammar and Blue Schools, and of a school at Moreton Hampstead. At the time of granting the letters patent of Charles I., it seems to have been intended that a part of the building should be allotted for the habitation of aged or impotent poor persons; but that intention has never been carried into effect. The establishment now consists of the Chapel and the Free Grammar and Blue Schools; but it is in contemplation to remove the school to a more convenient site in the suburbs, and in 1878 parliament was applied to for powers to sell and remove the Chapel of St. John's Hospital, Exeter, and to apply half the purchase money towards the erection of a chapel for Church of England services, in connection with any new buildings that may be erected for the purpose of the Grammar School, and the other half for compensation to the Orphanage of St. John's Hospital. By a scheme framed by the Endowed School Commissioners, and approved by Her Majesty in Council on April 28, 1876, the property of St. John's Hospital, was placed under the management of a body, termed the Governing Body of the Trust, and the following is a list of the first Governors, and who have also under their control the Hele Charities, hereafter referred to:—The Mayor of Exeter, ex officio; eight representatives—namely, C. J. Follett, Esq., B.C.L., H. Norrington, Esq., W. G. Rogers, Esq., James Pearse, Esq. (appointed by the Council of the city of Exeter), William Barnes, Esq. (appointed by the Exeter School Board), A. H. A. Hamilton, Esq. (elected by members of School Boards in the Parliamentary Borough of Exeter other than the School Board for the City of Exeter), the Very Rev. the Dean of Exeter, James L. Thomas, Esq. (elected by the Governing Body of the Exeter Episcopal Schools); and eight co-optative—namely, the Rt. Rev. the Lord Bishop of Exeter, the Rt. Hon. Sir Stafford Northcote (named in the scheme), Ralph Sanders, Esq., John Clench, Esq., John Damerel, Esq. (elected by the persons hitherto acting as the trustees of St. John's Hospital), Sir John T. Buller Duckworth, Bart., Edward A. S. Sanders, Esq., William Buckingham, Esq. (elected by the persons hitherto acting as the trustees of Hele's School). John Daw and R. R. M. Daw, Esqrs., are joint clerks.

Exeter Grammar School.—This school has been re-organised under the scheme for the management of St. John's Hospital, and the following is a list of the Governors:—Henry H. Tremayne, Esq. (appointed by the Lord Lieutenant of the county of Devon), the Right Hon. the Earl of Devon, Sir John T. B. Duckworth, Bart., A. H. A. Hamilton, Esq. (appointed by the Magistrates of the County of Devon in Quarter Sessions), C. T. D. Acland, Esq., Sir J. H. Kennaway, Bart., Edward J. Sanders, Esq. (appointed by the Members of Parliament representing the several county and borough constituencies within the county of Devon and county of the city of Exeter), the Bishop of Exeter, W. Buckingham, Esq., Henry S. Ellis, Esq., Charles J. Follett, Esq., Horace C. Lloyd, Esq., The Venerable Archdeacon Sanders (appointed by the Governing Body of the Trust, as constituted under the provisions of Part 2 of the Scheme). Messrs. John Daw and R. R. M. Daw are joint clerks. The course of instruction embraces divinity, English, including history and geography, French, German, Latin, Greek, arithmetic and the other elements of mathematics, drawing, and elementary natural science. Pending the erection of the new buildings, the school is carried on in the old schoolroom, where a temporary chemical laboratory is provided. There is a play-ground at the school, and a cricket-field within a few minutes walk. Boarders are received by Mr. Pearson, the senior assistant master, at 20 Dix's Field, which is close to the school. Scholarships tenable at the school are provided in such a manner that about one in every twenty pupils shall receive his education free of cost; or two scholarships carrying exemptions from not more than half cost may be granted instead of one scholarship carrying entire exemption. These scholarships are awarded according to merit only. Exhibitions to the Universities are attached to the school of the aggregate value of £500 per annum. The exhibitions and scholarships emanated from the following sources: The sum of £16 a year, making two exhibitions of £8 each, given by Sir John Acland, Knight, in 1619, has of late years been augmented to one exhibition of £40 a year, with an accumulating fund to increase it to £70 a year, by the late Sir T. D. Acland, Bart. The two Vilvayne exhibitions of £8 a year each originated in the benevolence of a noted Exonian, already referred to in these pages, and who flourished in Exeter during the period of the Commonwealth. The will of Dr. Stephens, the greatest benefactor the Grammar School ever had, is dated in 1745; but it was not until 1799 that his legacy of £3000 was paid to the trustees. It was owing, says

Carlisle, to the exertions of the late Rev. R. Bartholomew, whilst master of the school, that Dr. Stephens' will was discovered, brought to light, and made public. The sum left by the testator has proved adequate for the provision of six exhibitions of nearly £40 a year each, tenable at either Oxford or Cambridge by natives of Devon and Cornwall. This charity, in 1821, amounted to £7200 Three per Cent. Consols. Dr. Reynolds, head master from 1713 to 1733, left some South Sea Annuity Stock in 1756, to be divided equally between Eton College and Exeter School for exhibitions at Exeter College, Oxford, and three of the value of £40 each came to the share of the pupils of Exeter School, since the exhibitions increased in process of years as the property of the testator increased in value. The other exhibitions are one of £32 a year, founded by John James Stephens, Esq., of Lisbon, and two Vidal scholarships of £26 a year, founded by R. Studley Vidal, Esq., in 1841. The exhibitions above referred to are of the annual value of about £530. The Rev. Edward Harris, M.A., is the head master; and J. E. Pearson, Esq., B.A., the Rev. H. A. Hebb, M.A., W. A. Shenstone, and J. B. Birkmyer, Esqrs., are assistant masters. Amongst those who have been wholly or partly educated at this school, and who have distinguished themselves in after life, may be mentioned the names of Rundle, Bishop of Derry, Conybeare, Bishop of Bristol, General Simcoe, Sir Vicary Gibbs, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph, and the late Admiral Kelly, the founder of Kelly College, the antiquary Weston, Sir W. Follett, Drs. Jacob and Mortimer, late heads of the two largest London schools, the Judge Advocate-General Mowbray, Professor Buckley, of Oxford, General Monteith, Dr. Tozer, the present Bishop of Central Africa, the Indian Judges Norman and Turner, and most probably (as Carlisle says) the late Lord Chancellor King. The Blue School, carried on in another portion of the same premises, is now termed the ORPHANAGE, and is also under the management of the Governing Body of the Trust, and the regulations are set out in the scheme. The school, which contains about 25 orphans, is worked in connection with the St. John's Hospital Elementary School, which gives an elementary education to about 150 boys.

ST. JOHN'S ELEMENTARY SCHOOL FOR BOYS has been remodelled pursuant to the scheme of the Endowed Schools Commissioners, and was opened under the new regulations in January, 1877. The school is open to all boys of good character and sufficient bodily health, residing with their parents, guardians or near relations in or near the city of Exeter. The course of instruction includes reading, writing, arithmetic, algebra, Euclid, mensuration, English grammar, history and literature, geography, drawing, vocal music, and the elements of natural science. The religious instruction is in accordance with the principles of the Church of England; but pupils may obtain exemption therefrom by their parents or guardians making written application to the head master.

HELE'S SCHOOL, situated in the New North Road, was established under Her Majesty's warrant out of funds left by Elize Hele; it was opened in 1849, and is now under the scheme for the management of St. John's Hospital and of certain other charities and endowments. The course of instruction embraces the English, Latin, and French languages, with analysis; mathematics (algebra, Euclid, and mensuration), writing, book-keeping, geography, history, natural science, drawing, and vocal music. The religious instruction is Church of England, but exemption therefrom may be claimed under the 71st clause of the scheme. Boys aged eight years of ages are admitted on passing an examination in reading, writing, the first two rules of arithmetic, and the multiplication table, and on paying an entrance fee. Mr. Charles Long, A.C.P., is the head master.

The HIGH SCHOOL for GIRLS (on Sir John Maynard's foundation) forms part 3 of the scheme for the management of St. John's Hospital. Six governors are appointed by the Governing Body of the Trust as constituted under the provisions of part 2 of the scheme, and there are three co-optative governors. The pupils are instructed in divinity, ancient and modern history, Latin and modern languages, mathematics, logic, political and domestic economy, natural science and needlework. French, German, vocal music, and drawing are extras. Arrangements are also being made for a course of practical instruction in cookery. The religious instruction is in accordance with the doctrine of the Established Church, but exemption may be claimed therefrom according to the scheme. The tuition fee is £15 per annum. Pending the erection of the new buildings, the school is carried on at the house recently provided for the accommodation of the judges, and called Larkbeare, situate in the parish of St. Leonard. The governors are the Rev. F. C. Cook, chairman, and T. J. Bremridge, R. Dymond, W. G. Rogers, E. A. Sanders, H. D. Thomas, Esqrs. The co-optative governors are Mrs. Temple, the Honourable Lady Hotham, and Mrs. Ellis, Fair Park House, Exeter. Messrs. John Daw and R. R. M. Daw are joint clerks: and Miss Hall, head mistress.

The EPISCOPAL CHARITY SCHOOLS were first established under the patronage of Dr. Blackall, then Bishop of Exeter, in 1709. They were originally supported by voluntary subscriptions, and by collections made at the Cathedral and the churches of the city. In process of time sundry bequests were left towards their sustenance, and in 1852 the annual yearly income of this useful charity amounted to about £900. Rev. John Newte in 1715, Walter Rolf 1718, Samuel Daniel 1738, Mary Trelawny and Elizabeth Tuckfield, were all benefactors to these schools, and in 1821 Abel Worth, Esq., left them the munificent legacy of £6000 Four per Cent. Annuities. They are now conducted under the 'Endowed Schools Acts,' and consist of a MIDDLE CLASS SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, situated in Queen Street, of which Miss A. A. Bray is the mistress.

BOYS' ELEMENTARY SCHOOL, Mount Dinham, St. David's, of which Mr. W. Miller is master. GIRLS' ELEMENTARY SCHOOL, Mount Dinham, of which Miss S. Boaden is mistress. The governing body consists of the Bishop (ex officio), the Dean, and the Rev. J. T. Toye, the Revs. C. C. Turner, J. W. Hedgeland, A. H. Hamilton, and J. G. Pearse (appointed by beneficed clergy of the Parliamentary Borough of Exeter); Messrs. J. Pearse, J. L. Thomas and W. Pollard (co-optative governors elected by former trustees); Messrs. H. Wilcocks, J. Geare and H. C. Lloyd (elected by trustees of St. John's Hospital, &c.). W. Miller, Esq., is their clerk.

EXETER DIOCESAN BOARD of EDUCATION was instituted in 1838, to improve the system of education in Church of England Schools, through the medium of well-trained teachers, and an efficient system of inspection. The Board consists of all donors of £10 and all annual subscribers of 10*s.* and upwards. The TRAINING INSTITUTION for schoolmasters was founded in 1840, and its control is vested in a committee of management. The College, with chapel, and residence for the principal, consists of a magnificent block of buildings in the Pointed style, and are situated on the Heavitree Road, about a quarter of a mile distant from the city. They stand in their own grounds, and are surrounded by a low wall. The institution is supported by government grants, pupils' payments, annual subscriptions and donations, and grants from the National Society and the S.P.C.K. There were 60 resident students in each of the years 1876 and 1877; the income from all sources for the year ended December 31, 1876, was £3349 4*s.* 3*d.*, and the total expenditure £3432 5*s.* 11*d.* The Bishop is president of the Board; William Cotton, Esq., hon. treasurer; the Revs. C. C. Turner and W. David and W. J. Battishill, Esq., hon secretaries; the Ven. Archdeacon Sanders, hon. secretary of inspection; the Rev. A. Spencer of Exeter, and the Rev. F. C. Barham, of Truro, diocesan inspectors of religious knowledge. The Rev. J. G. Dangar, M.A., is principal of the Training School; the Rev. W. David, lecturer in theology and ecclesiastical history; Mr. J. Booth, F.R.G.S., vice-principal; Mr. Phillips, tutor and normal master; and Mr. Birkmyer, drawing master.

PUBLIC ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.—EXETER CITY SCHOOL BOARD was formed on January 31, 1871, and now consists of W. Barnes, Esq. (chairman), T. Andrew, Esq. (vice-chairman), and W. Buckingham, F. Clapp, H. Gadd, B. C. Gidley, H. C. Lloyd, T. Rowe, and W. Townsend, Esqrs. The offices are in Bampfylde Street, and Mr. J. Austin is their clerk. They have an Infants' School in Friars' Walk, a Boys' School in Paradise Place, a Girls' School in Ewings Street. ST. THOMAS' SCHOOL BOARD was formed in February 28, 1871, and now consists of the Rev. M. Swabey (chairman), T. Bradbeer, Esq. (vice-chairman), the Rev. W. C. Gibbs, J. Horswill, Esq., J. Stocker, Esq., and Dr. Woodman. Mr. J. Champion is clerk, and has his offices at 42 Cowick Street. They have schools for boys and girls in Cowick Street. The CENTRAL SCHOOLS for boys and girls is in Rack Street; the CENTRAL and NATIONAL INFANT SCHOOL in Preston Street; the CHURCH OF ENGLAND BOYS' and the PAROCHIAL GIRLS' in Heavitree; ST. JAMES'S NATIONAL in St. James's Road; ST. DAVID'S NATIONAL on St. David's Hill; ST. DAVID'S PAROCHIAL in Exe Street. There is a Practising School at the Training College. The BRITISH SCHOOLS, in Paris Street, which were established in 1845 in Coombe Street, and are supported by voluntary subscriptions and the pupils' payments, are now conducted on the mixed system. The WESLEYAN DAY SCHOOL, in the Mint, was opened in 1846. It was built at the cost of about £1200, and is conducted on the Glasgow system. The ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOOL is in the Mint.

WOTTON'S AND GLASS'S SCHOLARSHIPS.—In 1689, William Wotton gave to the feoffees of St. Mary Arches parish lands a farm of about 39 acres at Cullompton, in trust, for the payment of £8 12*s.* a year for the poor of Blackauton, and for the application of the rest of the yearly proceeds in schooling poor children of the city of Exeter, and in buying them Bibles and other books. The farm is let for £85, of which £66 was applied in schooling and clothing about 30 boys of St. Mary Arches and other city parishes. Fifteen other boys were taught free, pursuant to the will of Thomas Glass, M.D., who, in 1784, left £150, secured at four per cent. interest on the Exeter turnpikes, for the education of poor children of the parishes of St. Mary Arches, St. Olave, and Allhallows-on-the-Walls. A new scheme for these charities was issued in 1877, pursuant to which the income (after paying the above mentioned £8 12*s.* to the vicar of Blackauton) is applied in scholarships and exhibitions, not exceeding £8 a year each, to be competed for. The trustees are the Rev. A. H. A. Hamilton, and Messrs. J. Whippell, J. L. Thomas, F. Y. Stephens, H. Rattenbury, C. Mills, J. Geare, and W. Pollard. J. Pearse, Esq., is the treasurer, and W. G. Rogers, Esq., clerk.

EXETER RAGGED SCHOOLS.—The operation of the Elementary Education Acts has gradually lessened, and will eventually remove the necessity for these schools, and the boys' school was therefore closed in 1875. The last report under our notice showed the names of 38 girls, with a steady attendance of about 30 at the morning and evening schools.

The EXETER GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL and SERVANTS' HOME, at 42 Bartholomew Yard, is designed to prepare destitute girls or young servants who have lost their situations from incompetence for domestic service. The cost of the school is about £300 a year, and it is supported by subscription. Mrs. Martyn is the matron.

BEDFORD CHAPEL SCHOOL, in Chapel Street, Bedford Circus, was established in 1835, for the purpose of preparing girls for domestic service. Thirty girls are admitted at the age of ten, and kept under tuition till they are fit to go into respectable situations. They each pay 2d. per week to the clothing fund; and such of them as behave well are provided with clothes on going into service. The school is under the control of a committee of ladies. The Rev. W. J. R. Neame is president, and Miss Foyle, mistress.

The WEST OF ENGLAND INSTITUTION, for the instruction of the deaf and dumb children of the counties of Devon, Cornwall, Somerset, and Dorset, was founded in 1826, and occupies a handsome building in the Egyptian style, pleasantly situated on the south side of Topsham Road, and commanding a picturesque view over the vale of the Exe, as far as Haldon Hills. It is supported by voluntary contributions and the payments on behalf of the pupils, who are in three classes, viz., the poor, who each pay about 3*s.* per week; the intermediate class, who each pay £20 per annum; and the private pupils, who each pay £50 a year. The foundation scholars who partake of the benefits of the charity usually number about 30 boys and 20 girls. They are admitted between the ages of 7 and 12, and may remain till 15. There were in 1877 47 children under education, 23 boys and 24 girls. They are instructed in reading, writing, arithmetic, drawing, &c. The girls are taught needlework, knitting, &c., and the boys are instructed in various trades, such as tailoring, shoemaking, gardening, printing, &c. There is also a fund for apprenticing some of them on leaving the institution. All subscribers of one guinea or upwards, or donors of £10 10*s.* or upwards, are governors of the institution; and subscribers of two guineas are members of the committee of management. Among the legacies bequeathed to it are £2000, left by Nathaniel Gundry, Esq.; £100 each by Mrs Webber, William Tomkins, Lord De Dunstaville, and Miss Luke; and £200 by R. Sanders, Esq. The income of this institution from all sources for the year ending December, 1877, was £1528 1*s.* 6*d.* The apprentice fund was £207 17*s.* 4*d.* The Rev. G. Porter, secretary, E. J. Sanders, Esq., honorary treasurer, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hobbah, master and matron.

The West of England Institution, for the instruction and employment of the blind, was established in 1838, and removed to its present building, on St. David's Hill, in 1843. It is supported by subscriptions, donations, and the payments for board of pupils. The inmates are all of them taught to read and make baskets; and some of them are taught music, mat making, and worsted work. In 1850 this establishment was enlarged by the addition of a right wing, and in 1855 the left wing was built. In 1875-6 there were 21 male and 19 female inmates; besides 16 adult daily pupils. The sale of goods manufactured by the pupils for the same year amounted to £876 15*s.* 11*d.* There are weekly musical rehearsals by the patients, which are well attended. The Rev. F. A. Savile is honorary secretary, Mr. William Townsend, secretary, Mrs. Hurrell, matron, and Mr. John Wyllie, master.

Devon and Exeter Albert Memorial Museum.—The Albert Memorial Museum was erected in memory of the late Prince Consort, on a suitable site in Queen Street, which was presented for the purpose, by the late Richard Somers Gard, Esq., M.P., for the city between the years 1859–64, and he laid the foundation stone of the building on October 16, 1865, and it was completed and opened to the public in 1869. The plan of the building comprehends a centre, and two wings; the total length of the frontage is 140 feet, with a side frontage of 60 feet. The plans of the architect, Mr. Hayward, of Exeter, were judiciously carried out under the superintendence of Mr. Luscombe, already mentioned in these pages in connection with the Cathedral. The style of the building is Early French Gothic, and the total cost was about £10,000, which was raised by public subscription assisted by a Government grant of £500, made in consideration of the provision of a School of Art under the same roof. The central entrance is beneath an arcade of three arches supported upon columns of polished Aberdeen granite. Beyond this, the vestibule is raised six steps above the level of the street, in consequence of the rise of the ground at the back. The Central Hall (30 feet by 24) is well proportioned, and on the ground floor are the zoological collections and the ethnological room. The bulk of the specimens in the former were derived from the collections of the late Mr. Ross, of Topsham; but numerous additions of late years have been made to these by other persons. The ethnological room contains weapons, and other objects illustrative of the natural history of man, from all parts of the world, and there is also a small collection of foreign curiosities, and antiquities, as well as botanical and geological specimens, and some British fossils. The first attempt to establish a museum in Exeter was made in 1813, at the Devon and Exeter Institution in the Cathedral Yard, and the collections from this building have now been removed to the Albert Museum. The Free Library is also on the ground floor; it was opened in 1871, and has now 10,866 volumes. The handsome staircase, 9 feet in width, has a landing supported by an arcade of three arches, with shafts of polished Devonshire marble. In a niche on this landing, is a life-size statue of the Prince Consort, in his robes as Chancellor of the University, by E. B. Stephens, A.R.A. The likeness is good, and the sculpture worthy of every commendation. From this landing, staircases branch off to the right and left; the steps are of Somersetshire grey stone, and the parapet is of Bath stone, capped with Ipplepen marble. The lantern roof is of wood, and is divided into panels and rests upon carved corbels. The upper museum on the first floor has an ante-room, in which are arranged some illustrations of the processes used in manufactures, and in the adjoining gallery are a few good engravings. The large room on this floor is 62 feet by 30 feet, and is assigned to local collections, and here are arranged 835 specimens of birds, 100 over the number exhibited in the lower room. The whole of the upper floor on the north side of the staircase is appropriated to the schools in connection with the department at South Kensington. The elementary class-room is about 38 feet by 29 feet, and is lighted chiefly from the roof; there are also painting-rooms, and class-rooms, and there is also a free reading-room in connection with the library. The building is well ventilated throughout, and is warmed by an apparatus in the basement. The total cost of the building and contingent expenses to February 1, 1871, was £14,741. More space is needed, both in the museum and in the free reading room, 26,378 specimens of various kinds are actually exhibited, and as many more have been stowed away for want of room to display them. The late Mr. Kendall—in whose mayoralty, in 1862, the first steps were taken to carry out the idea of a museum for Exeter—has recently left by his will £500 for its enlargement, on condition that suitable additional buildings are erected within five years of his death. In May 1873 the building was visited by H.R.H. Princess Louise and the Marquis of Lorne, and Her Royal Highness expressed herself well pleased with the building, and with the general arrangements. It is opened daily from 10 a.m. till 8 p.m. in summer, and from 10 till dark in winter, except on Thursday; the average number of yearly admissions being over 100,000.

Exeter School of Art.—The Exeter School of Art was established in 1855, in rooms over the Lower Market. It was removed to the Albert Museum in 1868. It has been a very successful school, and there are only two provincial towns (both with a larger number of inhabitants) which exceed Exeter as to number of pupils. At the examination for 1866, Exeter was placed first for success in the national competition of all towns which may be termed non-manufacturing. About 200 pupils are taught annually in the class rooms.

Exeter School of Science.—The Chemical Laboratory was fitted up in the Albert Museum in 1871. In 1872 an impulse was given to the study of magnetism and electricity, by the gift of a quantity of valuable apparatus, presented by W. R. Bayley, Esq. Other apparatus has since been presented by Winslow Jones, and E. Kensington, Esqrs. The following subjects are at present taught here: chemistry (inorganic and organic), mathematics, physical geography, botany, geology, magnetism and electricity, animal physiology, and theoretical mechanics.

Newspapers.—Four daily and two weekly newspapers are published here, namely:—The Daily Telegram (Conservative), daily, except Friday, when it is published in connection with the Exeter and Plymouth Gazette (Conservative); the latter has been established over a century, and the former was commenced on February 6, 1863: Messrs. Donisthorpe and Brodie are the publishers. The Devon Evening Express (Liberal) was established in 1866, and is issued by the Devon Weekly Times Co. The Daily Western Times (Liberal), established in 1828, and commenced as a daily in 1866, is published by Messrs. Latimer and Granville. The Devon Weekly Times (Liberal), established October, 1861 (with which is incorporated the Exeter Journal, established 1856), is issued by the Devon Weekly Times Co.; and the Exeter Flying Post (Trewman's) (Conservative) was established in 1763, and is issued by Mrs. Catherine J. Bellerby.

The Devon and Exeter Medico-Chirurgical Society, founded in 1872, to afford increased opportunities of social intercourse between its members, and to discuss subjects of professional interest, holds its meetings on the first Friday in each month, at the Devon and Exeter Hospital. Edward J. Domville, Esq., is secretary.

The Cathedral Library, now deposited in the Chapter House, contains about 8000 volumes, including many ancient manuscripts, and a folio edition of Cæsar, printed in 1471, and in good preservation.

The Medical Library, at the Devon and Exeter Hospital, and the Law Library, were established in 1833, and have large collections of works in their respective branches of literature. Mr. J. Knill, librarian.

The Exeter Oratorio Society holds several performances yearly in the Royal Subscription Rooms, and possesses much vocal and instrumental talent.

The Western Counties Musical Association has been formed to advance musical art in the West, the establishment of scholarships in music, and the periodical performances in the larger centres of Devon, Cornwall, and Somerset, of the works of the great masters on a grand scale.

Here is a Botanical and Horticultural Society, which was established in 1829, and holds periodical exhibitions of fruits, flowers, vegetables, &c. It has rooms and a good library at 263 High street; and is supported by a long list of annual subscribers. Mr. Thomas William Gray is secretary.

The Lucombe Nurseries, now the property of Dr. Woodman, have been established over 150 years; they are situated on the Alphington road; about fifty acres constitute what may be called the home nursery, and another fifty occupy a sloping hillside at Exminster. This out-door department is covered with ornamental forest trees, shrubs, conifers, and fruit trees in every stage of development. The Rock and Italian Gardens will well repay a visit. At the entrance to the grounds there are two magnificent oak trees, the trunk of the largest being eleven feet in circumference. There is a large extent of glass here, and the grand conservatory or show house is fully 150 feet long by 14 feet in width. Dr. Woodman's exhibits are a source of great attraction at the meetings of the Horticultural Society.

The Athenæum, in Bedford Circus, is a large and handsome building erected in 1835, by a society then consisting of fifty-three shareholders, but it is now the sole property of Mr. James Knill, who purchased the shares at various periods. The large room, capable of seating 400 hearers, is occasionally used for public lectures, &c.

Exeter Literary Society, at 10 Bedford Circus, was established in 1841, and has a reading room, a weekly lecture, and classes for discussion and for instruction in French, Latin, drawing, &c. It has about 550 members, and a library of more than 1300 volumes. Mr. A. Southey is secretary.

Devon and Exeter Institution, in the Cathedral Yard, was established in 1813, by a number of gentlemen of the city and neighbourhood, for the promotion of science, literature, and the arts. It occupies a spacious building, handsomely fitted up. The large reading room is well supplied with modern publications, newspapers, magazines, &c., and the library comprises about 20,000 volumes. In the large room there is a very interesting model of Exeter, showing the old fortifications; and also one of the Cathedral. The institution is supported by 224 proprietary shareholders, who subscribe £2 each per annum. Sir John Kennaway, president; Rev. T. Mozley and Dr. Shapter, vice-presidents; Richard Dymond, Esq., hon. sec.; and Mr. Edward Parfill, librarian.

The Theatre, near Bedford Circus and Southernhay, is a commodious building, with a handsome stone front. Except the latter, it was destroyed by fire in 1820, and soon afterwards rebuilt. At the Hotel in the Close is an Assembly Room, which was the only room for such purpose in the city before 1820, when the Royal Subscription Rooms, opposite the New London Inn, were erected at a great expense. The ball room in this large and elegant building is 92 feet by 41, and 40 feet in height. It is tastefully fitted up, and lighted by a handsome dome. The building also contains tea-rooms and other suitable accommodations for balls, assemblies, concerts, exhibitions, &c., and is now the property of Miss Congdon.

The Victoria Hall was built in 1873, in Queen Street, by a limited liability company. This company was formed in order to provide a room capable of accommodating 2000 people. In consequence of the projected visit to the city of the British Association, a building of this kind was rendered necessary, and the Association therefore offered a subsidy of £600, and upon this basis a company was formed, and the Victoria Hall was built at a cost of about £7000, raised by the citizens in £5 shares. The rooms are used for concerts, entertainments, public dinners, balls, &c., and public meetings. The large hall is also used as a drill room by the 1st Devonshire Rifle Volunteers, and the cellars are employed as bonded stores. Mr Fred Pollard is the secretary. The building consists of the following rooms, besides ante-rooms, offices, &c.:—Victoria hall (ground-floor), 112 feet by 65; lecture room (first-floor), 56 feet by 38; committee room (ground-floor), 23 feet by 23; sale room (ground-floor), 31 feet by 25.

Devon and Exeter Hospital is an extensive brick building in Southernhay, and was founded in 1741 for the relief of the sick and lame poor, both as in and out patients. This benevolent institution is one of the largest and oldest county hospitals in the kingdom. In 1643 and 1656 James Tucker and Thomas Ford, Esqrs. left £350 towards the foundation of such a charity. What they ineffectually attempted was carried into effect on a more enlarged scale in 1741, by the zealous exertions of Dr. Clarke, then Dean of Exeter. Through his indefatigable industry and the generous contributions of the nobility, clergy, and gentry of the city and county, this truly charitable work was promptly begun and rapidly accomplished. The first stone was laid August 27, 1741, and in January 1743 the hospital was opened with 30 beds, but it was enlarged in 1748, 1753, 1762, and 1790, and there have been very considerable additions within the last twenty years. John Tuckfield, Esq., M.P. for the city, gave the site for the hospital. Up to 1852, the total cost of the building and furniture had been about £7000. The funded property in 1877–8 amounted to £3639 14*s.* 7*d.* The institution of 'Hospital Sundays' has been a great source of income to this valuable institution, and it derived in that manner during the last year the sum of £854 1*s.* 7*d.* The total income for 1877–8 was £8162 4*s.* 10*d.*, and the total expenditure £6867 11*s.* 4*d.* From Lady-day 1876, to Lady Day 1877, there were 1285 patients admitted into the hospital, of whom 497 were discharged cured, 110 were benefited, and 187 remained in the institution. The average daily number of in-patients for the year is 164; the average time of continuance in the hospital, 47 days; and the average cost of each patient, £5 8*s.* 1*d.* The number of in-patients admitted since the foundation of the hospital to Lady-day 1877 was 123,447; of out-patients, during the same period, 59,233: total number of accidents admitted since the foundation, 54,898; and of these 410 were admitted as in-patients during last year. In addition to the many benefactions and legacies to this hospital several funds have been from time to time provided for special purposes. The Samaritan Fund is applied by the weekly board to the relief of deserving poor patients, who have had the benefit of the hospital, but stand in need of further assistance. The recipients must not be in receipt of parochial relief. Clothing Fund for Children, created by J. C. Bowring, Esq., 1866, provides that no child under the Bowring Gift shall be refused admission to the hospital for want of sufficient clothing, but that such clothing shall be provided out of the above fund. Holmes's Gift, for procuring New Testaments for patients on their discharge. Golsworthy's Fund.—James Golsworthy, Esq., who departed this life January 27, 1851, gave the residue of his estate, £1177, to the hospital; the dividends to be applied to the general and ordinary expenses. An unknown donor gave the sum of £100, to found a fund for the supply of instruments in orthopedic cases. A Chapel was erected in 1866 through the munificence of the late Arthur Kempe, Esq. This chapel was opened on August 31, 1869, and Divine Service is held there daily. A handsome stained glass window, the gift of Mr. Bullivant, in memory of Mr. Kempe, has been placed in the west end of the chapel. Mr. Bullivant has also given an harmonium. The chaplain is paid out of the fund known as the 'Chaplain's Fund,' which consists of the interest on £3000 Debenture Stock in Bristol and Exeter Railway, and the Rev. James Ford's Gift, which amounts to £80 13*s.* 4*d.* a year, and Mrs. Anthony's (of Darlington) bequest, £22 4*s.* 7*d.* The Dean and Chapter also contribute £20 to this fund, and there are several smaller subscribers. There is a chaplain's house attached to the hospital. Annual subscribers and benefactors recommend patients, according to the amount of their subscriptions and donations. Presents of old linen and calico are very acceptable to the hospital. In the board-room there are portraits of John Tuckfield, Esq., of Little Fulford, holding in his hand the deed of gift of the site of the hospital, painted by Hudson; of Dr. Alured Clarke, Dean of Exeter (the founder), by James Wills, then a professional artist, but who died rector of Little Stanmore, Middlesex, in 1777; of Michael Lee Dicker, M.D. (by Hudson), who left a legacy of £50 in 1752, for wainscoting the board-room, and desired that his picture might be placed there; of Ralph Allen, Esq., of Prior Park, Bath, painted by Hudson; of John Patch, sen., elected surgeon of the hospital, September 24, 1741, and first of the profession in the West of England who practised lithotomy, by Gandy; of John Patch, jun. (son of the last), also a surgeon of the hospital, by election in 1741—this picture, painted by Opie, was engraved by Ezekiel; of John Sheldon, F.R.S., a first-rate anatomist, elected a surgeon of the hospital 1797—this portrait, painted by Keenan, was afterwards engraved by Barnard; and, lastly, of Thomas Glass, a learned and scientific physician, who died in 1786—James Opie painted this likeness at the expense of the medical gentlemen of Exeter; it was engraved by Ezekiel. A. H. A. Hamilton, Esq., is president; the Rev. W. K. Mott, vice-president; John Bullivant Esq., treasurer; Dr. Shapter, Dr. Budd, and Dr. Lewis Shapter, are physicians; Dr. Drake is consulting physician; Messrs. C. H. Roper, A. J. Cumming, T. W. Caird, and James Bankart, are surgeons; the Rev. W. Hockin is chaplain; H. G. Cumming, house-surgeon; Mr. Townsend, secretary; Mrs. Lucy Bell, matron; and Mr. John Hayward, surveyor.

The Dispensary in Queen Street was established in 1818, but the neat and substantial building which it now occupies was erected in 1840–1. The total cost of the new building, including the ground, furniture, &c., was about £2400. This useful charity supplies the poor of the city and suburbs with medicine and surgical aid as out-patients, and is supported by voluntary contributions. Richard Challice is resident dispenser and secretary; Dr. Drake, physician; and six surgeons attend gratuitously.

The Humane Society was instituted in 1790 for the purpose of restoring suspended animation in those who are apparently dead by drowning. The receiving house is in Exe Street.

The Homœopathic Dispensary, 98 Queen Street, was established in 1849. About 700 patients attended during last year. The Hon. and Rev. H. H. Courtenay is president; H. Bowden, Esq., secretary; Dr. Woodgates, and Dr. Edgelow, medical officers; and Mr. J. M. Rendall, dispenser.

The West of England Eye Infirmary, in Magdalen Street, was founded in 1808 for the cure of diseases in the eye, and is supported by funded property, annual subscriptions, and donations. Its total income for last year was £1619 1*s.* 3*d.*, and of this £400 was raised by subscriptions, and from a share of the collections on Hospital Sunday. The total number of patients under treatment for the year ending Michaelmas, 1876, was 1045; of those 905 were discharged, and 140 remained under care.

The total number of patients from the foundation of the hospital to Michaelmas, 1876, was 58,940. W. Barnes, Esq., treasurer; Mr. R. C. Cole, secretary; and Miss Collins, matron.

Wonford House, an hospital for the insane, is situated on elevated ground in the parish of Heavitree, a mile to the east of the city, and has been erected to replace the old institution, Bowhill House, which was founded in the year 1801. Wonford House is of Elizabethan architecture, and commands extensive views of Haldon, the estuary of the Exe, Wonford village, and the Cathedral and suburbs of the city. The pretty little chapel was opened in November, 1876. The external grounds are without confining wall, and the general appearance of the house and grounds, about twenty acres in extent, is that of a nobleman's residence. The cost of the building, furniture, and land, has been about £40,000. The affairs of the institution are under the direction of a committee of donors, and though the affluent seek admission, the institution has a charitable foundation, and former contributions to its funds, commenced as early as 1798, have allowed of the admission of a large number of poor professional men, and others of a similar social position, at reduced rates, and in some cases entirely free. The Rev. Prebendary Acland is president; Lewis Shapter Esq., M.B., and Augustus Drake, Esq., M.B., consulting physicians: Arthur James Cumming, Esq., consulting surgeon; Thomas Lye, M.B., resident medical superintendent; T. W. Gray, Esq., is treasurer; the Rev. J. L. Kitchen, chaplain; and Miss Louisa Matthews, lady superintendent.

The Devon and Exeter Female Reformatory and Refuge for Discharged Prisoners, Polsloe Road, established in 1835, for the employment and instruction of discharged prisoners, was extended and certified as a reformatory school on June 26, 1858. When the reformatory was inspected on August 2, 1876, the number of inmates was: girls 35, and four on license. The average number maintained 36; total cost for 1876, £851 3*s.* 10*d.*; comparative cost per head on ordinary maintenance and management, £23 12*s.* 11*d.*: net cost per head, including profit or loss on industrial departments, £22 5*s.* 2*d.*; industrial profits, £107 7*s.* 8*d.* Of 46 discharged in 1873-5, there are doing well 35, dead 1, doubtful 4, convicted of crime 2, unknown 4. W. Townsend, Esq., is hon. secretary; Miss Gee, matron; and Miss Arnold, schoolmistress.

Devon and Exeter Female Penitentiary, near the Holloway, was established in 1819, and in the following year a house was purchased for it, at the cost of £1400, and fitted up for the reception of about 50 penitents. The total income for 1876-7 was £909 9*s.* 9*d.*, and the expenditure £848 8*s.* 4*d.*, exclusive of £61 12*s.* 8*d.* due to the treasurer of the previous year. The total earnings were £332 19*s.* 1*d.* for the year, or over £9 for each inmate after making deduction for laundry expenses. It is supported by subscriptions and donations. The Bishop is patron; Rev. W. G. Mallett, honorary chaplain; F. W. Reynolds, Esq., treasurer; W. Townsend, secretary; Dr. Shapter, physician; C. H. Roper, Esq., surgeon; and Mrs. Macdonald, matron.

Exeter Lying-in Charity, 47 Holloway Street, was established in 1801, to assist women whose husbands' earnings do not exceed 18*s.* a week. It is supported by voluntary subscriptions and the interest of £750 and £36 a year. The number of women admitted from the opening of the institution in May 1801 to the end of 1876 was 12,530, of which 277 were admitted in 1876. Mrs. Frances Kinwell is the matron.

The Institution for Trained Nurses, at 7 Magdalen Street, was established in 1866, to provide a staff of trained nurses to visit, as far as circumstances would permit, the poor gratuitously. Nurses are also provided for private families for the sum of £1 1*s.* a week, excepting in infectious cases, when the fees range from 30*s.* to £2 2*s.* a week. The applications of subscribers and donors have preference. Persons who wish to be trained as nurses are admitted between the ages of 25 and 40, except under special circumstances. On completing a probationship of three months in the Devon and Exeter Hospital, they are expected to enter into an engagement to serve the institution for three years, which engagement may be renewable for periods of three years. In 1875 the nurse's visits in the parish of St. James amounted to 2537, and in the parish of St. Mary Major to 2522, the committee having undertaken the care of those large and important districts. Frederick Pollard, Esq., is secretary.

St. Martha's Orphanage, Summerland Crescent, was founded in 1863 for 12 girls, orphans of one or both parents; of these children, 4 are free, and elected by subscribers; the remaining 8 are either paid for by their friends, or admitted by subscribers of £12 and upwards. There are at present 3 thus admitted, and 5 paid for by their friends. In connection with the Orphanage is a day nursery for children of mothers who go out to work. Sick dinners and beef-tea can be obtained on certain days; for these tickets are sold to subscribers. Mrs. Mary Dobson is the matron.

The West of England Fire and Life Insurance Company was established in 1807, and empowered by Act of Parliament, in 1813. It has a subscribed capital of £600,000, in £100 shares, of which £45 16*s.* 6*d.* is paid. Its chief office is a large and elegant building at 237 High Street, erected in 1833. The façade of this edifice is of Portland stone, and is about 50 feet wide and 26 high. It has a portico in the centre surmounted by a pedestal, on which stands a figure of King Alfred. Behind this is a large building, erected in 1820, and containing an excellent board-room, and the secretary's residence. This provident institution ranks among the principal insurance companies of Europe, and has a large establishment in London, and agencies in Paris, Edinburgh, Dublin, and almost every town in the kingdom. Charles Lewis, Esq., is the actuary. The London office is at 20 Bridge Street, Blackfriars.

The Western Provident Association was established here in May, 1848, for the purpose of assuring to the industrious classes of both sexes, in return for their small monthly contributions, weekly stipends and medical aid, during sickness and old age; also payments of £5 to £100 at death; and endowments of from £5 to £50 for children. This mutual assurance society affords to the tradesmen and the working classes all the benefits, without any of the risks and evils of the old benefit and friendly societies. Its rules are enrolled under the Act of Parliament relating to such institutions, and its tables have been most carefully calculated by that eminent statist, Mr. Neison. The benefits of the association may be extended by the board to any part of the West of England, by the formation of branches, with the assistance of local committees; and any existing benefit society may be incorporated with it, on equitable terms. During the first ten months of its existence, 663 members enrolled themselves as subscribers for 857 assurances, and their number has since been greatly augmented. The benefits paid now exceed £78,000, and the accumulated funds £45,000. Branches have been formed at Plymouth, Devonport, Crediton, Torquay, Ashburton, Bovey-Tracey, Teignmouth, Exmouth, Ottery St. Mary, Liskeard, and other places in Devon, Cornwall, Somerset, &c. Lord Fortescue is president, and the Bishop vice-president. Mr. W. Mortimer is the secretary, and the office of the association is at 14 Bedford Circus.

Devon and Exeter Savings Bank, in Bedford Circus, was established in 1815. The large and handsome building which it now occupies was completed in 1839, at a considerable expense, paid out of the surplus fund. The principal office, or banking room, is 60 feet long and from 40 to 60 broad, and is very lofty. The building comprises also residences for the actuary and cashier, a board-room, and other offices. The whole is warmed by hot water, heated by stoves on the basement floor, and passed through copper pipes into each compartment. The operations of this savings bank extend over a very large portion of the county of Devon, by means of more than 130 branches. It is under the direction of 41 trustees, and about 200 managers; and the amount of its deposits invested in the Bank of England, on November 20, 1877, including a year's interest, was £1,168,301 19*s.* 4*d.*, belonging to about 37,030 depositors, charitable societies, and penny banks. The total sum which it had then received on 181,129 accounts, during the 62 years of its existence, amounted to £8,222,329 19*s.* 2*d.*, and the sums withdrawn and interest paid during the same period amounted to £7,054,027 19*s.* 10*d.* This institution is empowered, under the provisions of 16 & 17 Vict., c. 45, to grant Government Annuities, immediate or deferred, for life, or for a certain term of years; and the sum of £62,946 6*s.* 4*d.* has been invested by it in the purchase of annuities of from £4 to £50 each, payable half yearly. Mr. Richard Pike is the actuary.

Upwards of seventy fire and life insurance companies have agencies here. The Western Annuity Society was established in 1871, for providing a fund for paying annuities to widows, children, parents, brothers, sisters, nephews, nieces, and all other relatives, also sons and daughters, and brothers and sisters-in-law, on the death of the members; each annuity at present is £15. Mr. Thomas S. Mortimer is the secretary, and the offices are at 14 Bedford Circus. The Exeter Benefit Building and Freehold Land Society was incorporated in 1857. The secretary is Mr. F. D. Twigg, and the offices are in Upper Paul Street. The Plainworkers' Society was established in 1852; the offices are at 23 Cathedral Yard. The business of the Society is carried on upon the principle of devoting the whole of the profits—reserving only a sufficient working capital—to the benefit of the needlewomen. This is given in the form of relief in sickness, weekly allowances to the superannuated—coals, &c., during the winter months to the most necessitous—and to all, of a dividend paid at Christmas on their wages, calculated upon the profits of the year.

The 1st Devon Militia has its headquarters at the old Sheriff's Ward, which was built in 1820, and which is situated in St. Thomas. Robert T. White-Thomson, Esq., is lieutenant-colonel; William Arnold, John T. Davy and J. W. Savile, Esqrs., are majors; Richard Anson Brine, Anthony Martyn, H. B. T. Wrey, H. Walrond, Charles Robert Collins, Edward Kitson, Edward O'Neill and Edward Seale, Esqrs., are captains; John F. Tuthill, George H. T. White, Elford Pearse, John S. G. Harding and John J. Thomson, Esqrs., are lieutenants; Edward A. Palk, Esq., Sir James H. W. Drummond, Bart., and Joseph Chichester, Esq., are sub-lieutenants; — paymaster; Captain H. Walrond, regimental instructor of musketry; Captain Henry H. Skill, adjutant; and Henry T. Hartnoll, Esq., surgeon.

The Royal 1st Devon Yeomanry Cavalry has its headquarters at Exeter. Sir J. T. Buller Duckworth is lieutenant-colonel commandant; the Earl of Devon, lieutenant-colonel; Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, Bart., major; E. A. Sanders, James Templar, Thomas H. Newman, Richard Marker, Henry R. Courtenay, Charles A. W. Troyte, F. Garratt and Edward Trood are captains; Henry W. Clarke, Law H. Palk, William Barnes, John H. F. Ley, A. C. Chichester, O. Bradshaw, Edward J. Sanders, A. K. Hamilton, Aug. W. B. Daniell, lieutenants; Edward F. Studd, Esq., Sir John Shelley, Bart., and John F. Daniel, sub-lieutenants; Captain W. V. Greetham is adjutant; W. C. Hunt, Esq., surgeon; and Joseph A. Collins, Esq., veterinary surgeon.

The First Administrative Brigade of the Devonshire Artillery Volunteers has its headquarters adjoining the South Western Railway Station. The Brigade comprises—1st (Lympstone), 3rd (Teignmouth), 4th (Torquay), 5th (Exeter), 7th (Exmouth), 8th (Heavitree), 9th (Paignton), 11th (Brixham), 14th (Ilfracombe). Sir Lawrence Palk is honorary colonel; Henry C. Adams, Esq., lieutenant-colonel; Arthur Wyatt-Edgell, Esq., major; Patrick A. Keating, Esq., adjutant; W. B. Shears, Esq., quartermaster; J. S. Perkins, Esq., surgeon; George Pyecroft, Esq., assistant surgeon; and the Rev. B. F. Elrington, acting chaplain. Of Exeter (5th) Corps, William Brock, Esq., is captain commandant; Courtenay H. Edmunds, Esq., captain; John Horswell, Esq., lieutenant; Richard K. Norris, sub-lieutenant; and John Perkins, Esq., acting assistant surgeon.

The First Administrative Battalion of Devonshire Rifle Volunteers has its headquarters at Exeter, and comprises 5th (Cullompton), 8th (Buckerel), 11th (Bampton), 13th (Honiton), 14th (Tiverton), 25th (Ottery St. Mary), and 27th (Colyton) Corps. The 1st (Clyst) Devon Mounted Rifle Volunteer Corps, of which C. T. D. Acland, Esq. is captain, has been attached to this Battalion. Sir T. D. Acland, Bart., is lieutenant-colonel; Charles A. W. Troyte, Esq., and Sir John H. Kennaway, Bart., majors; Captain William H. Deedes, adjutant; Charles Read, Esq., quartermaster; Charles William Whitby, Esq., surgeon; and Eustace B. Thomas, assistant surgeon. Of the 1st (Exeter and South Devon) Corps, the Earl of Devon is lieutenant-colonel; John S. Swann and W. H. Walrond, Esqrs., majors; William J. Richards, G. L. Crofton, W. L. Collins, Henry Wilcocks, H. W. F. Greatwood and William S. Mortimer, captains: William Davy, jun., Esq., lieutenant; William B. Fulford, W. N. Parson, G. B. E. Dennis, C. T. K. Roberts, J. G. Drew, and Thomas A. Redway, sub-lieutenants; George Henry Courtenay, Esq., adjutant; John D. Harris, Esq., assistant surgeon; and the Rev. R. H. Barnes, M.A., acting chaplain.

CHARITIES, &c.—The inquiry into the endowed charities of Exeter occupies about 300 pages of the late Parliamentary Commissioners' Reports, printed between 1815 and 1839, and of which the following pages comprise the substance. Those under the control of the CORPORATION (commonly called the Chamber of Exeter) were transferred, in 1836, to upwards of thirty CHARITY TRUSTEES, many of whom are also city magistrates, aldermen or councillors. These trustees are divided into two lists, one for the management of the General Charities, and the other having the control of the Church Charities. The yearly income derived from the former charities, in 1837, was about £1500, but now, under the management of the General Charities Trustees, realise nearly £2900; and from the latter about £3000, of which £1276 was the income of St. John's Hospital, and the Grammar and Blue Schools. The Parliamentary Commissioners found that most of the charity estates were let on leases for lives, at considerably less than half the yearly value, in consideration of fines paid to the old Corporation for granting and renewing the leases. These fines are far from being equivalent to the loss in rents; and the late Commissioners found much difficulty in their endeavours to distinguish the Charity from the Corporation Property—the 'Chamber' having for many ages strangely intermixed the accounts of several charities with the municipal receipts and expenditure, as will be seen at subsequent pages.

The GENERAL CHARITY TRUSTEES are Dr. Drake, and W. Cuthbertson, H. S. Ellis, J. W. Harris, G. Hirtzel, K. Kingdon, C. H. Kingdon, C. Lewis, W. Miles, J. W. Petherwick, E. A. Sanders, T. M. Snow, J. Trehane and W. Vicary, Esqrs. Mr. R. W. Best, of Queen Street Road, is their clerk and surveyor. The charities they have under their control are Grendon's (Ten Cells), Hurst's, Palmer's, Atwill's, Magdalen, Calwodeley's, Blundell's and White's, Amerideth's, Buckenam's, Tuckfield's, Chapman's, Martyn's, and Lant's. From the balance sheet for the year ended December 31, 1877, it appears the balances in favour of the charities amounted to £2102 3*s.* 2*d.*—namely, £491 4*s.* 10*d.* from Grendon's; £249 15*s.* 5*d.*, Hurst's; £21 9*s.* 7*d.*, Amerideth's; £2 12*s.* 1*d.*, from £94 14*s.* 10*d.*; £50 17*s.* 10*d.*, Lant's; £1172 9*s.* 8*d.*, Magdalen; £5 17*s.* 10*d.*, Martyn's; £13 1*s.* 1*d.*, Blundell's and White's; and against, £1788 16*s.* 8*d.*—namely, £353 12*s.* 5*d.*, Palmer's; £1216 11*s.* 5*d.*, Calwodeley's; £218 12*s.* 10*d.*, Atwill's; thus leaving a balance in the treasurer's hands of £313 6*s.* 6*d.*

The TEN CELLS, in Preston Street, are almshouses for ten poor widows, and were built by Simon Grendon, who, in 1406, endowed them with 4A. 2R. 8P. of land in St. Sidwell parish, called Culverlands. They have since been endowed with other land and buildings by the following donors, viz.:—Alice Heyth, in 1556; William Buckenam, in 1563; David Hensley, in 1566; William Herne, in 1562; John Baker, in 1603; and Miss Copp, in 1867. The property thus acquired is worth about £400 a year. The weekly stipend paid to each almsperson is 6*s.*, and in addition they receive 15*s.* each per annum from Miss Copp's gift to this charity, and medical attendance and coals during winter. It is in contemplation by the trustees to erect new and more commodious almshouses in a better situation than the present.

WILLIAM HURST'S ALMSHOUSES, for 12 poor men, comprise a row of 12 tenements, with a small garden to each. They are situated in Spiller Street, and were built in 1821, in lieu of as many old decayed almshouses, which stood without the East Gate, and were built and endowed by William Hurst, in 1567, and Miss Copp, in 1867. The endowment consists of various houses and building sites in the parishes of St. David and St. Sidwell, now let on leases, at rents amounting to £127 a year, besides which the charity has the interest of about £1000, derived from fines paid on the renewal of leases, &c., and dividends on £4975 0*s.* 4*d.* invested in the Three per Cent. Consols by the Charity Commissioners, and being the proceeds of sales of portions of the lands, &c., making the present total annual income about £311. The almspeople have each a stipend of 7*s.* 6*d.* per week if married, and 6*s.* if single. They have also 15*s.* annually from Miss Copp's gift, and the trustees provide them with medical attendance, and an allowance of coals during the winter. When a married man dies, his widow is sometimes permitted to remain in the same house till her death. The Devon and Exeter Subscription Rooms (built in 1821) stand upon part of the hospital land, which is held on lease, at the yearly rent of £60. These rooms form a handsome public building, standing on the site of the old Bristol Inn, and their original proprietors pulled down the old, and built the present almshouses, pursuant to the terms of their lease.

PALMER'S ALMSHOUSES, in Magdalen Street, consist of four tenements, with garden, inhabited by as many poor widows, who each receive 5*s.* (with the aid from Calwodeley's charity, hereafter mentioned) weekly, and the sum of 15*s.* each per annum from Miss Copp's gift; medical attendance and coals during the winter are also provided by the trustees. They were founded in 1487, by John Palmer, who endowed them with two houses, a cottage and garden, &c., in Trinity parish, now worth £112 a year.

BONVILLE'S and LANT'S ALMSHOUSES, in Bartholomew Street.—In 1408, Sir William Bonville, Knight, left several tenements in Exeter, and 300 marks, for the endowment of an hospital for 12 poor people. In 1675 Richard Lant left a farm of 68A. 1R. 1P., at Buckland, in Dorsetshire, for the benefit of the poor in these almshouses and in the Ten Cells. The old almshouses went to ruin about 1700, and the present almshouses, near the North Gate, were built in 1764, at the cost of £746, derived from the savings of income. The farm left by Mr. Lant is now let for £121 a year. The only other property belonging to the almshouses is £1260, lent on mortgage at 4 per cent. per annum; and the sum of £314 1*s.* 4*d.* Stock in the Three per Cent. Consols, the proceeds of Miss Copp's gift. The 12 almspeople here receive, with the aid from Calwodeley's charity hereafter mentioned, 6*s.* per week each if married, and 5*s.* per week if single; each almsperson also receives 15*s.* a year from Miss Copp's gift.

ATWILL'S ALMSHOUSES, in New North Road, are neat stone dwellings on an elevated site. In 1588 Lawrence Atwill left about 320 acres of land, and several houses, &c., in the parishes of St. Thomas, Whitstone, and Uffculme, to the Corporation of Exeter, upon trust to apply the yearly profits thereof n setting the poor to work. As the charitable intentions of the testator could not be strictly or beneficially carried into effect, a new scheme was sanctioned by the Court of Chancery in 1771, directing that in future the rents and profits of the charity estate should be applied in the erection and support of almshouses for the reception of poor aged woollen weavers, &c., of the city, who should be provided with looms, &c., and small weekly stipends. Accordingly, 12 almshouses were built in 1772. In consequence of the increased income of the charity, these almshouses were enlarged in 1815 at the cost of £425, and again in 1839 at the cost of £160. They are now occupied by 24 almspeople, who are provided with coals in winter. medical attendance, and, with the aid from Calwodeley's charity, hereafter mentioned, the sum of 6*s.* per week to each married almsperson, and 5*s.* per week to each single. There are also 15 almshouses endowed by this charity in Northernhay Street, occupied by as many poor people who enjoy equal privileges to those in the New North Road. By an order of the Charity Commissioners, dated March 13, 1866, Atwill's Almshouses were thrown open to all poor aged and infirm people, male or female, residents in Exeter.

Magdalen Hospital, in Magdalen Street, was founded at an early period for the reception of leprous persons, and its endowment was augmented by a charter of the Bishop of Exeter about 1170. It until lately consisted of an ancient building, containing eight rooms, occupied by as many poor persons, and of a more modern building of six rooms, divided into three houses, occupied by three poor people and their families. In the year 1863 the trustees built, in the place of the ancient building above referred to, a row of 12 commodious almshouses on the Magdalen Hill. The almspeople are selected from the poor inhabitants of Exeter, men or women, married or single. They have 5*s.* per week each single almsperson, and 6*s.* married couples, from the interest of £1500, derived from fines paid on renewing the leases of the hospital lands and tenements, and from the said lands and tenements, which are now let to 36 tenants for £446 2*s.* 8*d.* per annum.

Calwodeley's Gift.—By letters patent of the 12th of Henry VII., we find that Thomas Calwodeley granted to the mayor, bailiffs and commonalty his manor of Awliscombe, to provide for the payment of two fee-farm rents, and the relief of poor citizens and inhabitants of Exeter. The property thus granted to the Corporation comprises 11 houses and about 207 acres of land, let on leases at rents amounting to £421 5*s.* 2*d.* per annum. The Council of Exeter pays two fee-farm rents, one of £20 15*s.* 4*d.*, to Earl Somers; but it is not known whether these are or are not the rents alluded to in Thomas Calwodeley's grant. At present the funds from this charity are, by order of the Charity Commissioners, used in augmenting the sums paid weekly to Lant's, Palmer's and Atwill's almspeople.

Sir Thomas White's Loan Fund.—In 1556 Sir Thomas White gave £2000 to the Corporation of Bristol, on condition that they should purchase an estate, and out of the rents pay yearly the sum of £104 in succession to 24 cities and towns named in the deed, one of which is Exeter. Of each annual payment the donor directed £100 to be lent in sums of £25 each to four young men 'of honest fame,' free of interest, for ten years, and the remaining £4 to be divided among the trustees for their trouble. The Corporation of Exeter and Trustees have now received £1352 in thirteen periodical payments, at intervals of 24 years. This charity is now, by order of the Commissioners, incorporated with Blundell's, and the combined charities used in paying the premiums required for apprenticing poor and deserving boys and girls of the City of Exeter; also for paying fees at the Exeter School of Science and Art for such poor boys and girls, thus apprenticed, to attend the science and art classes there. Peter Blundell left by will, in 1599, the sum of £900 for purposes similar to Sir Thomas White's charity; but most of the money was lost by being lent on loan, and not repaid. What remains is now granted to Sir Thomas White's loan fund, as just noticed.

In 1556 Griffith Amerideth left £1 18*s.* per annum, to be applied in finding shrouds for criminals executed at Ringswell; but since the erection of the new gaol executions have taken place there, and no shrouds have been provided from this fund. This charity is now used in supplying poor and deserving women with petticoats at Christmas time. The present income is £12 6*s.* per annum. In 1567 Elizabeth Buckenam left a house in St. Petrock's parish, then let for £2 16*s.* 8*d.* per annum, in trust to pay 14*s.* 2*d.* yearly to each of the parishes of St. Lawrence, St. Paul, Holy Trinity, and Allhallows-on-the-Walls, for five poor householders of each parish. This house is now worth £60 a year, but was let in 1800, on lease for their lives, at £3 1*s.* per annum, in consideration of a fine of £360. The income of this charity is now over £17 per annum, and is still used as the founder directed, but in larger sums. In 1568 Mrs. Joan Tuckfield left three houses, then worth £6 a year, in trust for the distribution of 50 dozen penny loaves on Christmas-eve, and the same quantity on Easter-eve, among the poor of the city and suburbs, and to divide the remaining 20*s.* among the mayor and officers for their trouble. These houses were let in 1821 for £66 13*s.* 4*d.* per annum, and it is supposed that the donor intended the poor to have the clear yearly profits. The income from this and other charities of the said Joan Tuckfield amounts to about £14 4*s.* per annum, and has, by order of the Charity Commissioners, bearing date August 17, 1876, been appropriated as follows:—One fourth part in bread to be distributed yearly to the poor at Easter and Christmas; one fourth part in yearly distribution of gowns and clothing among poor women of Exeter; one fourth part in yearly prizes for children who have fulfilled certain conditions laid down by the Education Department—these prizes to be called 'Joan Tuckfield's Rewards.' The remaining fourth part of the income to be appplied in connection with the schools of the City of Exeter, to enable deserving girls to acquire the art of lace-making, or cooking, or other instruction tending to profitable occupation—such rewards to be bestowed by way of apprenticeship or otherwise, and to be also called 'Joan Tuckfield's Rewards.' For distribution among the poor citizens, Christiana Chapman, in 1470, left a rent-charge of £5 out of land in Westgate quarter, which is now added to Palmer's charity. In 1821 the Parliamentary Commissioners found that there was upwards of £2000 owing by the Corporation to Hurst's, Heyth's, Grendon's, Buckenam's and Palmer's charities, arising chiefly from fines received on the renewal of leases, and unapplied rents, &c.

John Martyn, in 1669, left £400 to the Corporation, in trust, to apply the yearly proceeds in appren-ticing poor boys of the city. The greater part of this legacy was laid out in the purchase of land and tenements in Exe Island. There is also a sum of £551 13*s.* 4*d.*, invested in Consols, and the income of the charity now amounts to £99 11*s.* 4*d.* The premiums paid with apprentices in 1876 amounted to £70.

Thomas Cooke, in 1810, left to the Corporation the following sums of Three per Cent. Consols, in trust, to divide the dividends yearly among the poor of the almshouses named with each sum, viz., £2100 to Magdalen Hospital; £1750 to the almshouses called the Ten Cells; and £700 to Palmer's Almshouses.

The Church Charity Trustees are Sir S. H. Northcote, Bt., R. Sanders, Esq., T. Shapter, M.D., the Lord Bishop of Exeter, Sir T. D. Acland, Bt., A. H. A. Hamilton, Rev. Canon Lee, and C. Tucker, W. Kendall, H. S. Ellis, T. Blackall, F. Milford, H. Ford, J. Damerel, J. Geare, and T. J. Bremridge, Esqrs. J. Daw & Son are clerks, and have their offices in Bedford Circus. Mr. C. E. Ware, is surveyor. The charities they have under their control are Dr. Bodley's gift, Sir John Acland's gift, Flaye's, Lethbridge's and Davye's united charities, Seldon's gift, and Bodley's and Mogridge's gift for Sunday lectures.

Flaye's, Lethbridge's and Davye's Almshouses.—Flaye's Almshouses, in St. Sidwell's, were founded and endowed by Thomas Flaye, in 1634, and enlarged and further endowed by his widow, Elizabeth Flaye, in 1667, for the reception of six poor widows, two of them to be the widows of clergymen. The property belonging to the charity comprises three houses and about 8 acres of land. There is a money payment to each of the inmates. Davye's Almshouses are in Clifton Road, and were founded by John Davye, who endowed them, in the 42nd Elizabeth, with a yearly rent-charge of £16 out of the rectory of Mariansleigh; 6*s.* 6*d.* yearly out of the George Inn; and with five tenements worth £30 a year, but let for only £6, in consideration of £200 paid in fines on the renewal of the leases. Lethbridge's Almhouses for six poor people were founded by Christopher Lethbridge, who endowed them, in 1669, with £15 12*s.* yearly out of two houses, and about 18 acres of land, worth about £100 per annum, but they were let, about 1790, on leases for lives, at rents amounting only to £12 1*s.*, in consideration of £510 paid in fines. This property is held by the Corporation, subject to the above-named annuity, for division among the almspeople, who have also £7 14*s.* yearly from the charity of John Lethbridge, who left £216 to the Corporation, upon trust that they should pay that annuity and also the following yearly sums, viz. 10*s.* to the poor debtors in the city prison, and 50*s.* towards the maintenance of poor boys in St. John's Hospital. These charities are now united; the Almshouses are called 'Lethbridge and Davye's' Almshouses, and are situated in Walton Place, Clifton Road. There is accommodation for ten poor persons, who receive 5*s.* each weekly.

For a Weekly Lecture on Sundays, in such a church in Exeter as may be thought most beneficial £400 was vested with the Corporation by the Rev. Lawrence Bodley, D.D., in 1615, and £200 by Thomas Mogridge, in 1617. These legacies were laid out in 1631 in the purchase of the impropriate rectory and parsonage of Hennock, and the advowson of the vicarage of that parish. The rectorial tithes now amount to £186 a year, which is paid by the Corporation for the Sunday evening lectures, known as the Bodleian lectures.

Sir John Acland, in the 13th of James I., granted the rectory of Churchstowe to feoffees, in trust, to pay £75 8*s.* per annum for weekly distributions in bread, in 27 parishes; £23 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly to the vicar of Churchstowe, and £16 yearly to two exhibitioners at Exeter College, Oxford. The rectory has often yielded a clear annual profit of £320; and in 1821 there was a balance of unapplied income, amounting to about £1300, held by the Corporation. The three Exeter parishes participating in this charity are St. Thomas's, St. Lawrence's and Allhallows, Goldsmith Street, the former having 52*s.*, and the two latter 26*s.* yearly for weekly distributions of bread.

In 1598, Lawrence Seldon, left a cottage and 26 acres of land at Sowton, in trust for the weekly distribution of 2*s.* 6*d.* in bread and meat among the prisoners in the gaol, Sheriff's Ward and Counter of Exeter; and the following sums weekly in bread among the poor of the parishes specified, 1*s.* in each of the parishes of St. Mary-the-More, Holy Trinity, and St. Sidwell; 8*d.* in St. Thomas's; 6*d.* in St. Lawrence's; 4*d.* in Sowton; and 6*d.* among the prisoners in the High Gaol.

Nicholas Spicer, an Alderman of the City, in 1609, vested with the Corporation of Exeter a farm of about 106 acres of land in Halberton parish, in trust, after making certain annual payments for charitable and other uses, that they should apply the remainder of the yearly proceeds in loans of £10 to £20 each to poor industrious and honest citizens. The rents having in process of time accumulated to a considerable sum, a scheme was formed in 1830 by the Court of Chancery, in accordance with which this charity is now administered. The property consists of real estate worth about £220 a year, and a sum of about £6100 Consols. The income is applied, to the extent of £70 a year, among the poor people of Halberton, and after payment of 10*s.* each, a year, towards the repairs of the parish churches of Halberton and St. Mary Arches in Exeter, and providing bread and clothing for poor people in Exeter, the balance is distributed among necessitous freemen in Exeter, in sums of not less than £5 each. The present trustees are—The Very Rev. Dr. Boyd, Archdeacon Woollcombe, Rev. Canon Lee, Aldermen R. T. Head and C. J. Follett, and Mr. William Cuthbertson. The clerk is Mr. B. C. Gidley.

Rebecca Borough, in 1649, granted £30 a year out of Nadder estate, in Whitstone, to be given in sums of £3 to £5, to honest poor householders of Exeter, who have never received parochial relief, either old decayed tradesmen above 60 years of age, or young men under 30 years, born in the city, or such as have served a lawful apprenticeship therein, to enable them to purchase tools and materials the better to work for and support themselves and their families. The owner of the Nadder estate always deducts £3 a year as for land and income tax. The present trustees are—The Rev. J. Corfe, Rev. Canon Lee, Rev. J. W. Hedgeland, Rev. J. B. Strother, and Messrs. R. T. Head, C. H. Turner, F. Milford, W. Kendall, W. M. Snow, and W. Cuthbertson. The clerk is Mr. B. C. Gidley.

Thomas Floud, Esq., one of the aldermen, gave to the trustees of Rebecca Borough's gift, £50 vested in the Exeter turnpikes, at 4 per cent. interest; and directed them to apply the yearly proceeds in the relief of one poor man about thirty, and under sixty years of age, upon the same conditions as are expressed in regard to Borough's charity. The interest paid by the turnpikes is now only £3 per cent.

Miss Copp left in 1867 the sum of £1900, of which £1600 is for the benefit of the almspeople for the time being residing in the almshouses of Exeter, known as Ten Cells, Hurst's, Palmer's, Lant's, Magdalen, Davye's, Lethbridge's and Flaye's, by increasing the pensions or allowances to such almspeople in equal proportions; £100 to Tuckfield's bread distribution, £50 to Seldon's ditto, £100 to Calwodeley's charity, and £50 to Dr. Bodley's lecturer.

Wynard's Hospital, in Magdalen street, was built by William Wynard, in 1436, on the site of an ancient building, called God's House, without the South Gate of the city, for the residence of a priest and twelve infirm poor people, for whose support he left two yearly rent-charges of £40 and £50, out of his estates, vested with twelve trustees and the Mayor of Exeter; the latter of whom, for the time being, is appointed as special visitor by the founder. The hospital and many adjacent houses were destroyed during the sieges of the city in the civil wars of the 17th century; and in 1654 a bill was filed in Chancery by the mayor and bailiffs of the city, against the owner of the founder's estates, who, after nearly four years' litigation, was compelled to rebuild the hospital, and to charge his property with the weekly payment of 2*s.* to each of the twelve almspeople, and with £12 per annum for equal division among them. He was also obliged to charge his estates with the maintenance and reparation of the hospital and chapel, and with the payment of the yearly salary of £6 13*s.* 4*d.* to the chaplain for reading prayers to the almspeople. Eight of them are to be poor men of the city, nominated for appointment to the patron for the time being by the Mayor and Aldermen, and the other four are to be poor men of Devonshire or Somersetshire, appointed by the patron for the time being, the owner of the founder's estates. Divine service is performed in the chapel every Sunday, Wednesday, and Friday evening. The Rev. J. G. Davis, M.A., is the chaplain.

Tailors' Company Trusts.—In 1568 Joan Tuckfield left to the Corporation of the Tailors' Company, in Exeter, all her lands and tenements in the parish of St. Paul, on condition that they should distribute 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly among the poor of the Ten Cells and Magdalen Almshouses, and the prisoners in the City and County Gaols; and that they should repair the walls of the burial ground of Ringswell, formerly the place of execution. The Tailors' Company consists of a master, head warden, three under wardens, and twelve assistants. They hold their Hall in Goldsmith street, and several houses and gardens adjoining it, under Mrs. Tuckfield's will; and they also receive £6 6*s.* per annum from the city Corporation, for distribution among the poor freemen of the company, or their widows and children. This annuity is supposed to be paid as the interest of £300, left by Mrs. Tuckfield, for the purpose of being lent on bond to needy tradesmen. A yearly rent-charge of £2 8*s.*, left by Amniel Knight, out of land at Upton-Pyne, is distributed in shirts and shifts among twelve poor freemen of this company, or their widows and relations.

The Incorporated Company of Weavers, Fullers, and Shearmen, who received their first charter in 1490, have the management of the following charities for the benefit of the poor freemen of the company. In 1676 John Pince gave an annuity of 20*s.* out of a house at Topsham, to be bestowed in hose and shoes for four poor freemen. Another yearly rent-charge of 20*s.*, left by Humphrey Bowden, in 1678, out of a tenement in St. Mary Arches parish, is divided among poor widows and children of freemen; as also is one of 40*s.*, out of the Star Inn, left by John Reed, in 1687. An estate called Rowe's Barn, comprising 27A. 1R. 16P., was purchased by the company in 1730, for £733, which arose as follows:—£550 given by Andrew Jeffery; £60 by Augustine Drake, in 1642; £50 by Henry Newcombe, in 1693; £10 by William Marker; £20 by Nicholas Munckley; and £43 from the company's stock. In consideration of Jeffery's gift, £4 is paid yearly to the dissenting minister of Ford Chapel in Stokenham parish, and about £33 is expended in providing coats, hats, shirts, stockings, and shoes, for fourteen poor freemen of the company, and six poor parishioners of Ottery and Stokenham. The rest of the clear yearly income from Rowe's Barn estate is distributed in money, shoes, &c., to poor freemen, or their widows and children. The rent of a farm, called Chilleton, in Aveton-Gifford parish, comprising 20A. 2R. 39P., let for £30, is applied in apprenticing the sons of poor freemen of the company, pursuant to the will of Thomas Crispin, dated 1689. A premium of £5 is given with each boy; and those who can produce a certificate of good behaviour from their masters are presented with £5 at the end of their apprenticeships. The company meet at Tucker's Hall, Fore street, on the last Thursday in August and November 5, when a distribution of the several charities takes place. It was anciently a chapel, dedicated to the Virgin, and came into disuse at the Reformation; the exterior has been restored at some expense, but with little taste. The interior was divided into two rooms in 1632, and the upper room or hall was then wainscoted with carved panel work, which still remains. The members of this company elect a master, and senior and junior wardens yearly. Mr. H. M. James is their clerk, and Mr. R. S. Ganniclift is the beadle.

Phipps's Gift consists of a yearly rent-charge of £30, out of land and houses left by Robert Phipps, in 1676, in trust for the relief of ten poor tradesmen of Exeter, who do not receive parochial aid.

Potter's Gift.—In 1694 Thomas Potter left £600, to be laid out in land, and the yearly profits thereof to be distributed among eight tuckers and weavers of Exeter, not receiving parochial relief. The land purchased consists of 52A. 2R. 10P. in Ottery St. Mary, and 10A. 2R. 30P. at Farringdon. H. Collins-Splatt, R. Sanders, and W. Kendall, Esqrs., are the trustees, and give £10 to each of 8 poor tuckers and weavers who have not received parochial relief for one year, nor this charity for five years. Mr. C. B. Sanders, of Gandy Street, is the clerk.

Pengelly's Gift.—In 1700 Francis Pengelly gave for charitable uses the Dolphin Inn, and two adjoining houses, which were sold in 1806 for £650, which was laid out in the purchase of £1095 19*s.* 6*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, still standing in the names of the six trustees. Out of the dividends £20 is divided yearly, in equal shares, among ten poor people, preference being given to such as are related to the donor or his wife. Out of the remainder yearly payments are made for educating six or seven poor boys, and to the Devon and Exeter Hospital.

The Society for the Relief of the Sober and Industrious Poor, was established in 1799. It sells coal to the deserving poor in winter at reduced prices. William Cotton, Esq., is treasurer, and James Shillson, of Bartholomew Street, is store-keeper. The Relief Society was formed in 1838, in lieu of the old Mendicity Society, for the relief of travelling poor and residents. The Blanket Society was established in 1817, for supplying the destitute poor with blankets. The Clothing and Dorcas Societies supply the poor with articles of clothing, at greatly reduced prices; the former established in 1833, the latter in 1840. The Strangers' Friend Society was established about 1806, for visiting and relieving the destitute poor. Here are several other societies supported by voluntary subscriptions for the relief of the indigent poor of the city.

The following is a brief statement of the Church and Parish Lands, and the various Charitable Funds, &c., belonging separately to the different parishes.

Exeter Free Cottages, St. David's Hill, were founded in 1860, by John Dinham, to provide a home for persons in reduced circumstances, but having an income of not less than 5*s.* a week, but who have never received parish relief. The trustees are the very Rev. the Dean, Rev. J. T. Toye, William Miles, Thomas Blackall, James L. Geaves, Joseph Wippell, John Daw, Edward Force, Charles H. Kingdon, and Winslow Jones. W. Townsend, Esq., 65 Magdalen Street, is their clerk.

Allhallows, Goldsmith Street.—The Church Lands comprise 2A. 0R. 22P. at East Teignmouth, and 1A. 2R. 12P. in St. David's parish, which were given in 1451 and 1527 by Richard Attehole and John Yeo. The poor parishioners have 6*d.* in bread weekly, from Sir J. Acland's charity.

Allhallows-on-the-Walls.—The ancient parish church, and some of the adjoining buildings, were taken down in 1770, by the Commissioners of the Act for rebuilding and repairing Exe Bridge, who pay £6 per annum to this parish in consideration of two tenements which belonged to the church and poor, and were taken down at the same time. In 1602 Richard Bevys left 20*s.* a year to be given to a poor maiden on her marriage, provided she has lived in service in the parish during the two preceding years. The poor have a weekly distribution of 1*s.* 6*d.* worth of bread from Sir J. Acland's and Hester Reed's charities. They have also 30*s.* in two rent-charges, left by Nowell Pearce and Christian Wills.

St. David's.—For distribution in bread, the poor parishioners have the interest of £100, left by John Jordaine, in 1775, secured on the tolls of the Liskeard turnpike; and also 20*s.* a year from Tooker's Gift, noticed with the parish of St. Mary Major.

St. Edmund's.—The Parish Lands, &c., which have been vested in trust from an early period, comprise various tenements. The feoffees have also £850 Navy Five per Cent. Stock, purchased with money derived from fines, and £100 in two deeds poll of the Exeter turnpikes, obtained from the sale of a house, which was taken down when Exe Bridge was rebuilt. The income is all applied in the service of the church, except 20*s.* per annum, which is distributed in weekly doles of bread among the poor, as also are the three following yearly rent-charges, viz., £4 left by John Gubbs, in 1670, out of a house in Exe Island; 20*s.* left by Joseph Pince, in 1689, out of the land now held by the Gas Company; and 10*s.* left by Matthew Axe, out of a house in Frog Lane. In 1767, £80 received as arrears of Gubb's rent-charge, and £18 from the parish stock, were laid out in the purchase of £112 10*s.* Old South Sea Annuities, the dividends of which are distributed among the poor parishioners, in sums of 2*s.* 6*d.* to each. The deserving poor not receiving parochial relief have the rent of 3 acres of land in St. Leonard's parish, purchased with £150 left by Rebecca Leach, in 1713. Four poor widows have the dividends of £81 19*s.* 8*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £50 left by John Dewdney Worthy, in 1797.

St. George-the-Martyr.—The poor of this parish have thirteen penny loaves every Sunday, from a rent-charge of 52*s.*, left by Richard Shilston, in 1645, out of a house at the bottom of Fore Street Hill. They have also the following yearly sums, viz.: 6*s.* 8*d.* left by the above-named donor; 3*s.* 4*d.*, by John Baker; 20*s.* by Thomas Gist.; 20*s.* left by Johanna Cole; and 20*s.* by Iseat Peachy.

Heavitree.—The Parish Lands, &c., which were mostly purchased with poor's money, in the 16th and 17th centuries, comprise about 27A. 3R. 18P.; and the church-house, occupied by paupers. Ducke's Almshouses consist of four dwellings, built in 1603 by Richard Ducke, who endowed them with a yearly rent-charge of 26*s.*, out of the marsh in Clist St. Mary's. The almspeople have also the rent of the Parish Field (1½ acre). The Livery Dole Almshouses were rebuilt in 1849, and contain ten distinct dwellings for as many poor women, and a house for the chaplain. Attached to them is an acre of garden ground, and a small chapel. They were founded in 1591, by Sir Robert Dennis, and are endowed with a yearly rent-charge of £45, out of Whitechurch Farm, in the parish of Winterbourne. Of this annuity the chaplain receives £9, and the remaining £36 is divided in equal portions of £3 12*s.* to each of the almspeople, who are appointed by Lady Rolle from the poor women of this or any other parish. The poor of Heavitree have the dividends of £55 10*s.* 10*d.* Four per Cent. Stock, purchased with £50 left by Wenman Nutt, in 1800. They have also the interest of about £131 18*s.* 10*d.*, derived from the bequest of Ann Serle, in 1810. The interest of Spicer's gift of £427 11*s.* 5*d.*, and half of the dividend of Collingwood's gift of £217 1*s.* 11*d.*—total income, £21 10*s.* 7½*d.* The income of the Charity lands is now about £50. It is vested in trustees chosen from the parishioners, and inhabitants, who appoint the inmates of the almshouse, and dispense the income arising from the estate. The purpose of the trust is: first, the repair of the tenement and estates; second, payment to the inmates of the almshouse; third, payment to a master and mistress for the education of poor children of the parish nominated by the trustees; fourth, relief of aged persons of the parish not in receipt of parochial relief; fifth, repair of the parish church, and occasional gifts for the benefit of the poor of the parish.

St. Kerrian's Church Lands, given by Richard Foldhay and John Wilford, in 1816–17, now comprise several tenements and an acre of garden ground.

St. Lawrence.—The churchwardens have a house, garden, and a field of 2 acres, in Northgate, given by Michael Dennys and Richard Wagott, in 1478; and a house in High Street, given by William Grigge, in 1587. They are let for only £4 12*s.* per annum, which is applied with the church rates, together with the sums levied in fines on the renewal of the leases. The poor have a yearly rent-charge of £16 out of a cottage, and 16 acres of land at Whitstone, derived from £100, left by Judge Jermin, John Jermin, Thomas Willing, and Peter Risden. For weekly distributions of bread, they have the interest of £25, left by Robert Dawe, in 1735; and £2 12*s.* yearly from the charities of Sir John Acland and Lawrence Seldon. They have also 20*s.* worth of bread, from the interest of £20 left by Nicholas Abell, in 1742. Five poor widows have 13*s.* 4*d.* yearly from Elizabeth Buckenam's charity.

St. Mary Arches.—The Church Lands, &c., given by John Taylor, Gilbert Kirkeby, and Gervase Luyshant, in the reigns of Henry VII. and VIII., now comprise several tenements; to which is added 11*s.* 8*d.* derived from four chief rents; and also 10*s.* a year from Nicholas Spicer's charity. The yearly income is expended in the service of the church, as also are the fines received on the renewal of the leases. This parish participates largely in the benefits of Wotton's and Glass's Charity School, as already noticed at page 352. A house and stable, left by Richard Poyntell, in 1611, for the poor of this parish, were let in 1806, for 99 years, at 20*s.* per annum, in consideration of a fine of £138, which was laid out in the purchase of £215 3 per Cent. Consols. The income of this and C. & J. Lethbridge's charities is dispensed in a weekly distribution of 5*s.* 8*d.* in bread. Christopher Lethbridge, in 1669, left to the poor a yearly rent-charge of £3 0*s.* 8*d.*, out of a house in Fore Street. To this gift are added the dividends of £90 Old South Sea Annuities, purchased with about 50 years' arrears of the rent-charge; and the dividends of £60 in the same stock, purchased with £52 left by John Lethbridge in 1701. A yearly rent-charge of 20*s.* was left by Richard Bevys, in 1602, to be given to poor maidens of this parish on their marriage. The Parsonage House was given by Joan Tucker, in 1709, for the residence of the rector or his curate, charged with the yearly payment of £1 12*s.*, for a weekly distribution of 1*s.* worth of bread every Sunday among the poor parishioners, who have also a yearly rent-charge of 20*s.* out of an estate called Star Barton, in Brampford-Speke parish, supposed to have been left by Charles Watts, in 1722; and the dividends of £25 12*s.* 2*d.* 5 per Cent. Stock, left by Joseph Green in 1807. The trustees of the bread charities are the rector, churchwardens, and sidesmen, F. Y. Stephens, R. Sully, S. Loram, and S. Payne. There are weekly doles of bread, coal, &c., to poor parishioners.

St. Mary Major.—The Parish Lands, &c., comprise six houses, a large warehouse, 2A. 1R. 9P. of land, and five small chief rents. Of the sums derived from fines on renewal of leases, £330 was laid out in new seating the church, in 1816–17; and in 1811 £100 was paid to the rector, to assist him in obtaining Queen Anne's Bounty for his benefice. Out of the rents the feoffees pay an annual salary to the organist; £4 10*s.* to the three following charities; and they apply the remainder in the service of the church. In 1686 Roger Endibrook left a clear yearly rent of £5 out of his tenements here, for distribution among the poor not receiving parochial relief. This annuity is distributed in bread and beef at Christmas; as also are the five undermentioned yearly sums, viz., £3 from part of the parish land, purchased with £50 arising from arrears of the above-named rent-charge; 30*s.*, as interest of £30 left by John Martyn and Thomas Southcombe, and laid out in the parish land; 20*s.*, left by John Peter, in 1576, out of the great tithes of Cornworthy; and 20*s.*, left by Thomas Tooker, in 1640, out of Culver Park and other land in St. Sidwell's and St. David's parishes. The poor of this parish have 2*s.* worth of bread weekly from Seldon's and Acland's Charities, and 3*s.* worth weekly from three annuities of 52*s.* each, left by John Reed, in 1680, out of the Star Inn; by Charles Cunningham, in 1685, out of a house on Bell Hill; and by Samuel Daniel, in 1738, out of property given by him to the Episcopal Charity Schools. This parish is entitled, under Gilbert Keate's gift, to have two boys maintained in St. John's Hospital, and two girls in the Blue Maids' Hospital.

St. Mary Steps.—The Parish Lands, &c., comprise five houses, and several tenements, gardens, &c. After deducting for repairs, &c., the net income is applied in the service of the church. The property has been held by the parish officers from an early period, and part of it, consisting of two cottages and gardens on Stepcote Hill, was left by Felicia Selman, in 1462. Four poor women have the use of a house rent free, and the dividends of £175 Old South Sea Annuities, which arose from the gift of James Slade, in 1769. For distribution in bread the poor have an annuity of 20*s.*, left by Nicholas Evans, in 1618, out of a foundry in Ewin's Lane; and another of 20*s.*, left by Thomas Gist, out of tenements on Stepcote Hill.

St. Olave.—The parish has two houses, which have been vested from time immemorial for the use of the church. Some land which had been long held for the same use, was sold for £290, which was laid out in repairing the church, which, after being shut up many years, was reopened in 1815. In 1602 Richard Bevys left an annuity of 20*s.*, to be paid to a maid servant of this parish on her marriage. The poor have 16*s.* yearly, out of the poor rates, as the interest of £20, left by James Atkins, in 1730.

St. Paul.—This parish has held, from time immemorial, for the use of the church and poor, three houses and several tenements, with gardens, &c. In respect of Henry Gandy's gift, this parish can claim to send two poor boys to be maintained and educated at the Blue School, in St. John's Hospital. For distribution in bread, at Christmas, &c., the poor parishioners have the following yearly doles, viz.:—£3, left by Thomas Binford, in 1780, out of an estate here; 25*s.* as interest of £25, left by John Pillet; and 30*s.* paid out of a plot of building ground, which was purchased with £50, left by John York, in 1707. For distribution in shirts and shifts, they have £1 7*s.* yearly, left by Paul Phillips in 1714; and 20*s.* yearly, as the interest of £20 left by Mary Pillet. Ann Salford left £200 in 1825, invested in 3 per Cent. Consols; the interest to be divided every Easter-day amongst five parishioners (poor women), after paying for the repair of two tombstones in St. Bartholomew's churchyard. Dr. Nathaniel Rogers, in 1873, gave in trust £10 India 5 per Cent., the interest to be used in the service of the church. Samuel Mortimer, solicitor of this parish, gave in 1857 £1000 3 per Cent. Consols, the dividends to be laid out annually in the purchase of beef, mutton, pork, peas, bread or fuel, any or either of them to be distributed among the poor on Christmas-day. Elizabeth Tomkins left in 1842 £50, the interest to be distributed amongst the poor on Christmas-day at the discretion of the minister, churchwarden, and overseers.

St. Petrock.—The Parish Lands, &c., comprise about 5 acres, and ten houses and cottages, and four almshouses in Magdalen Street, occupied by poor women. The property was mostly derived in the 15th century, from various donors, and the rents are applied chiefly towards the payment of the churchwardens' expenses. In 1799, £100 paid in fines by the lessees of part of the property was laid out with a sum from Queen Anne's Bounty, in purchasing a field called Marsh Barton, for the augmentation of the rectory. The almspeople have the interest of £100, left by William Pitfield, in 1794. The feoffees are Messrs. T. Kerslake, H. Braund, H. C. Lloyd, R. Milton, W. H. Blacking, J. Huggins, E. Fouracres, and the churchwardens ex-officio. Mr. T. Floud is clerk.

St. Sidwell.—The Parish Lands, &c., comprise about 15 acres, and 22 houses and cottages, let at small reserved rents, amounting to only £14 4*s.* per annum, but subject to large fines paid on the renewal of the leases. This property has been vested in trust from an early period, for the use of the church and poor. The greater part of the income derived from rent and fines is applied in the service of the church. In 1771 the feoffees laid out more than £400 upon the church bells; and in 1803 they erected an organ and a gallery, at the cost of £265. The rent of 3A. 3R. 30P. of land, called Summerlands, is applied in apprenticing poor children, pursuant to the gift of Chpr. Sandford, in 1689, except £2 10*s.*, which is yearly distributed among the most needy poor, as the interest of £50, left by Ann Baker, in 1689. Near the church are four almshouses for four poor widows, founded by John Webb, who endowed them in 1676, with about 5½ acres of land. The almswomen have also a yearly rent-charge of 20*s.*, out of three fields at the top of St. Sidwell Street, left by an unknown donor. In 1717 John Moffatt left £100 for the benefit of the poor, and it was laid out in 1733 and 1741 in the purchase of 2½ acres of land, of which £5 is given to ten poor people not receiving parochial relief, and the remainder is distributed in sums of 2*s.* 6*d.* each to other poor parishioners. The poor have 4*s.* worth of bread weekly, from four yearly rent-charges of 52*s.* each, left by Lawrence Seldon, Sir John Acland, John Cheeke, and Ralph Herman. An annunity of 9*s.*, left by William Chapple, in 1729, is given in as much linen as will make two shirts or shifts. The poor have also, in linen and money, £4 5*s.* yearly, arising from four annuities, left by Thomas Tooker, Thomas Smalridge, and Thomas and Hester Bussel. They have likewise £21 per annum, as the interest of £420, paid by the Dean and Chapter, in 1630, as arrears of charity money, and vested with the Corporation. St. Ann's Almshouses, with a small antique chapel adjoining, was formerly an ancient hospital, as noticed at page 336, but is now the asylum of eight poor persons, who receive 2*s.* 6*d.* each weekly from the Dean and Chapter.

St. Stephen.—In 1654 the Countess of Pembroke gave to this parish 4½ acres of land near St. Ann's Chapel, then worth £12 a year, in trust, to apply £10 thereof in apprenticing a poor boy or girl yearly, and to distribute the remainder in sums of 2*s.* each among the poor parishioners, and there is now £150 Three per Cent. Consols belonging to the charity, purchased with money derived from the sale of timber on the land, and from unapplied income. In 1662 George Potter left £500 towards rebuilding the church, and a house for the use and residence of the successive rectors. The house is in King's Alley. In 1672 John King left £125 in trust, that the interest should be paid yearly to the rector for preaching a sermon on the last Sunday in each month. This legacy was laid out in the purchase of £152 12*s.* 2*d.* Three per Cent. Consols. The poor parishioners have the dividends of £65 13*s.* 11*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £50 left by James Green in 1807. They have also the interest of £10 left by Thomas Vigurs, at an unknown date.

Holy Trinity.—The churchwardens have a cottage, stable, and 1A. 0R. 33P. of land, given by Robert Were in 1465. The Lamb and Flag public house was purchased in 1684 for £65, given by Wm. and John Mathew, Henry Fitzwilliams, and Alice Hele, two-thirds for the use of the church, and one-third for the poor. In 1817 this house was sold for £160, which was invested in the purchase of £190 18*s.* 3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities. The churchwardens have also three annuities amounting to £1 12*s.*, left by Henry Fitzwilliams, Margaret Parker, and John Palmer. The poor parishioners have 2*s.* worth of bread weekly from Seldon's and Acland's gifts; and five poor widows have a share of Elizabeth Buckenam's charity, as already noticed. They have also the following yearly doles, viz., 15*s.* in two rent-charges left by John Hance, in 1625; 20*s.* out of two closes, left in 1629, by Roger Selsby; 20*s.* out of a house in Exe Island, left in 1629 by William Mathew; 52*s.* for a weekly distribution of 1*s.* worth of bread, left by John Cheeke in 1678; £4 out of a house in Southernhay, left by Thomas Facy, in 1700, for distributions of shirts and shifts; £5 13*s.* 4*d.* from £190 Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £100 left by Sarah Spry, in 1788, for similar distributions; and 10*s.* left by Alexander Pope, in 1816, out of three houses in the Mint. The sum of £163 6*s.* 4*d.* left to the poor by James and Thomas Clutterbuck, and Ann Baker, was laid out in 1696 in the purchase of two fields, which were sold in 1799 for £1500 Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities. The yearly dividends of this stock (£44 16*s.* 4*d.*) are received by the churchwardens, and carried to their general account, out of which they pay yearly £4 to four poor parishioners, and £2 for apprentice fees, as the gift of J. and T. Clutterbuck; and £2 10*s.* for distribution among the poor at Easter, as the gift of Ann Baker. The residue of the dividends is applied in such manner as the trustees think most beneficial to the poor.

St. Thomas the Apostle.—The two Church Houses are occupied rent-free by paupers, and stand on the site of two houses which were destroyed with the church, during the civil wars of the 17th century. A house, given by the Rev. Walter Battyn, in 1564, for the repairs of the church, was rebuilt by the parish after the civil wars, and was occupied by the vicar till 1801, when it was let for 99 years, at the yearly rent of 10*s.*, in consideration of a fine of £280, which, with £105 raised by a parish rate, was given to the then vicar (Rev. J. B. Copplestone) towards the erection of the present vicarage-house, which cost more than £1000. The poor parishioners have 8*d.* weekly, left by Lawrence Seldon, and 12*d.* weekly left by Sir J. Acland, for distribution of bread. In 1635 Bartholomew Berry left a house and half an acre of land in trust, to pay 20*s.* yearly for two sermons, and to divide the residue of the rents among the poor. The house was rebuilt after the civil wars. An annuity of £10 was left by William Gould, sen. and jun., in 1632 and 1642, out of the Barton of Hayes, and was paid to a schoolmaster; but there is now a school board for this parish. The poor have £4 a year out of the same estate, left by William Gould, sen. Two annuities are payable out of the Barton of Cowick, pursuant to the will of Robert Pate, sen. and jun., viz., 20*s.* for the poor, and 30*s.* to a schoolmistress, for teaching four poor children. The poor have also the dividends of £150 Three per Cent. Consols, left by Elizabeth Painter, and two annuities of 20*s.* each, left by John Peter, in 1570, and Nicholas Evans, 1618.

Reynolds' Charity.—Mr. Frank William Reynolds, of Exonville, who died on June 8, 1878, gave, by a document dated April 4, 1873, the sum of £10,000 Stock in foreign securities (the value then being £9200) to the Trustees of the Ewing's Lane School and Mission Society. The interest upon this sum is to be devoted to annual payments, commencing from the date of his decease, to the following institutions, viz.:—The Exeter branch of the Church Missionary Society, £20; Bible Society, £20; Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, £10; Devon and Exeter Hospital, £5 5*s.*; Eye Infirmary, £5 5*s.*; Dispensary, £10 10*s.* (provided the usual recommends be always given to the Trustees for distribution); Blind Institution, £5 5*s.*; Deaf and Dumb Institution, £5 5*s.*; and the Female Penitentiary, £5 5*s.* The residue to be devoted to the temporal and spiritual welfare of the poor in the city and neighbourhood, especially the sick, the aged, and the helpless. For the erection of a Mission Hall, &c., a sum not exceeding £2000 may at any time be advanced upon loan, and be repaid by annual instalments from the current income. Mr. Reynolds had, during his lifetime, taken great interest in the charitable institutions of the city. He established the Soldiers' Institute, in Holloway Street, and built the Mission Hall at Exe Island almost at his sole cost.

Joanna Southcott, sometimes called the Exeter Prophetess, was the greatest of all the religious fanatics and impostors of the present century. She resided many years in this city, but is said to have been born at Gittisham; and she was certainly baptized at Ottery St. Mary in 1750, as appears from the parish register. She was for many years cook in the family of George Hirtzel in Holloway Street, Exeter. She was an illiterate woman, could neither read nor write, but drank beer and took snuff very freely. She proclaimed herself here as a prophetess early in 1800, and afterwards removed to London, where she died in December 1814, to the consternation of her deluded followers, who amounted to many thousands, in various parts of the kingdom, and had been led to believe that she would not die, and was about to give birth to the promised Shiloh, under whom they were promised a patriarchal existence upon earth of at least a thousand years. To raise money, under the guise of ensuring them the full enjoyment of this millennium, she visited her ignorant proselytes in the populous parts of the kingdom in 1803, and subsequent years, and distributed among them her 'celestial seals.' At one time she promised her foolish followers a miraculous translation to the New Jerusalem, and hundreds of them gave up their employment, and distributed their goods and chattels among their unbelieving relations and neighbours, on the eve of their expected journey. This failing, she declared that the promised land was at home, and that she was about to give birth to Shiloh, for whose reception a splendid gilt cradle was subscribed for, and exhibited to the gaze of the credulous and curious at a small sum per head. Her enthusiastic adherents were generally among the most vulgar and illiterate, though some of them were people of property, and one of them was George Turner, a Leeds merchant, who, in 1809, published an appeal to the public in defence of Joanna Southcott, her believers, and her 'Book of Wonders,' which extends through several volumes. Even after the death of herself and many of her 'sealed faithful,' hundreds still lived in her 'light,' believing her to be 'not dead, but translated.'

Worthies.—Among the eminent men who were born or flourished at Exeter may be enumerated Bartholomew Iscanus, Bishop of Exeter, who wrote the life of Guy, Earl of Warwick; Joseph Iscanus,* who was born here about the close of the 12th century, and is styled by Wharton 'the miracle of his age in classical compositions;' Baldwin, Archbishop of Canterbury, the patron of Geraldus Cambrensis; Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury and Cardinal; John Hooker, who was born here in 1524, and wrote a history of Exeter and many other valuable works; Sir William Petre, a distinguished statesman, who was secretary and privy councillor to Henry VIII., Edward VI., and to Queens Mary and Elizabeth; Sir Thomas Bodley, the great patron of learning, who was born here in 1544, and founded that extensive and valuable collection of books and manuscripts at Oxford University, called the Bodleian Library, to which he left a yearly income for the purchase of books, the support of the librarian, &c.; Sir Peter Carew, who was governor of the City after the siege in 1549; William Tucker, Dean of Lichfield, who wrote upon the king's evil, &c., and was born about 1550; William Martyn, recorder and historian of Exeter, born about 1562; Dr. Barkham, Dean of Bocking, a learned antiquary, whose heraldic and historic works came before the public in the 16th century, under the names of Gwillim and Speed; Sir Simon Baskerville, an eminent physician and anatomist, born in 1573; William Hakewill, a learned lawyer, who wrote on the liberty of the subject; his brother, Dr. George Hakewill, author of a popular work on the 'Providence of God,' and sometime chaplain to Prince Charles—a portrait of this worthy in oil, well preserved, is in possession of Mr. W. Cotton, of Alphington; John Reinolds, author of 'God's Revenge against Murder,' &c.; Sir William Morice, Secretary of State to Charles II.; Matthew Locke, the celebrated musical composer; Sir John Acland, Knight, born in the reign of James I.; Thomas Long, a controversial writer among the Separatists in the 17th century; Sir Peter King, the son of a grocer at Exeter, and nephew of the great Locke, was born here in 1669, and became a learned lawyer and statesman, and was Lord Chancellor of England from 1725 till his death in 1733; Sir Bartholomew Shower, an eminent lawyer and reporter; his brother, John Shower, a learned Dissenting minister, and author of several religious treatises, born 1657; Thomas Yalden, the poet, born 1671; Simon Ockley, the learned orientalist, and author of a 'History of the Saracens,' born 1678; Dr. Dodderidge, Judge of the Court of King's Bench, died 1628, and was buried in Exeter Cathedral; Dr. Richard Walker, author of the 'Sufferings of the Clergy'; Dr. John Foster, a Dissenting minister, who was complimented by Pope for his pulpit oratory, and wrote a defence of the Christian Revelation against Tindall; Andrew Brice, the printer, who published a Topographical Dictionary; William Jackson, an eminent musical composer, who died in 1808, and has a monument in St. Stephen's Church; Dr. Wesley, Mus. Doc., who died 1877; Samuel Walker and Richard Hole, two learned divines; the late Chief Justice, Sir Vicary Gibbs; Nicholas Hilliard, a painter in the reign of Elizabeth; Charles Hopkins, a dramatic writer, son of the Bishop of Derry, born 1664; Tom Durfey, a celebrated dramatic writer of the 17th century; Eustace Budgell, an eminent writer of last century, and a contributor to the 'Spectator,' said to have been born at St. Thomas's, about 1685; Robert Pullein, who, in the reign of Henry I., acquired great fame by his lectures on the Scriptures at Oxford, and was reputed the reviver of learning in that university; Hugh Crossing, founder of the Grammar School, died 1620; Sir William Periam, Lord Chief Baron, temp. Eliz.; Atwell, Tuckfield, Spicer, and Hurst, founders of charities, temp. Eliz.; John Davis, the navigator, may fairly be claimed as an Exeter man; John Blackaller, Mayor of Exeter during the siege of 1549—he held the city for five weeks against 10,000 rebels, until it was relieved by Lord William Russell; Sir John Bowring-Cradle, of the Baring family, represented by Lord Northbrook; Northcote and Gandy, painters; Chief-Justice Giffard, died 1826; Dr. Blackall and Samuel Barnes, eminent medical authors of the last generation; Dr. Musgrave, the antiquary, and Dr. Downman, the poet, resided several years at Exeter as practising physicians; Richard Hooker, the learned author of the 'Ecclesiastical Polity,' was a native of Wonford; and Sir Arthur Ducke, author of the 'Life of Archbishop Chichele,' was born at Heavitree, and was an eminent civilian in the reign of Charles I.

* His poem on the Trojan War has often been reprinted in Germany, under the name of 'Cornelius Nepos.' He wrote his 'Antiocheis' after attending Richard I. to the Holy Land.

Railways.—The new large, commodious and handsome station belonging to the Bristol and Exeter Railway Company, was commenced on October 2, 1861, and completed June 1, 1864, at a cost of £27,000. Garibaldi (who was then visiting England) was the first person who passed through the new station, and he was received with great demonstration on the new platform by the citizens, on May 25, 1864. The Bristol and Exeter, and South Devon Railways have been worked by the Great Western since 1876. A mixed broad and narrow line was commenced in June, 1875, and finished in February, 1876, completing the Great Western system of narrow guage from Exeter to London, Manchester, Liverpool, and the North of England. The present superintendent of the St. David's Station, Mr. Mears, has been in charge of it since April 21, 1851. This station is connected with the lower part of the city by the Prince's Road, which was made by the Bristol and Exeter Company, at a cost of £6000, and was opened on April 15, 1863; it passes along the left bank of the river Exe, and enters the town on the city side of Exe Bridge. The St. Thomas Station, in Cowick Street, was built by the South Devon Company, and is a large and convenient structure, erected on the lofty viaduct which spans the Cowick Valley. The necessary offices are underneath, and the platform, (furnished with refreshment rooms, waiting rooms, &c.) is approached by broad flights of stone steps. The London and South Western Railway Company have extended their line from Salisbury to Exeter, viâ Yeovil, in 1860, and have a large and handsome station in Queen Street. This line was further extended (from Yeoford) to Devonport, viâ Okehampton, Lidford, Tavistock, and Plymouth, in April, 1876. Exeter has now direct communication by rail with nearly every town in the county, and with a very large proportion of the villages.

Post Office.—The old Post Office, in Bampfylde Street, which consisted of a small circular room, being inadequate for the requirements and progress of the city and district, it was removed to Queen Street to the fine premises now occupied by Messrs. Allsop & Sons, and was from there removed in 1864 to the present building (adjacent to the Albert Memorial Museum), which was erected for the purpose. For the convenience of Telegraphy, an upper story was added for the reception of the instruments in 1871, since which date the public business has so largely increased in every branch of the postal service that additional space has been found necessary, and the present building has therefore been condemned, and a new post office has been decided upon, and is to be erected in some central position in the city. Charles Bennett, Esq., is postmaster; Mr. Robert S. Mannings, chief clerk; Messrs. J. Spencer, D. Bane, and A. H. Roper, sorting superintendents; Mr. Thomas Denmead, superintendent of telegraphs; Messrs. J. W. Lusty, C. H. Woollen, and G. Callaway, assistant superintendents; Adolphus A. Burckhardt, Esq., surveyor of the Western District; J. B. Ellen. F. H. Maberly, P. V. Turner, and A. Blomefield, Esqrs., assistant surveyors; Mr. William H. Pinchin, superintending district engineer for telegraphs; and Mr. G. N. Partridge, assistant ditto.

The head-office, Queen Street, is open for the transaction of ordinary postal business—i.e. the sale of stamps, registration of letters, &c.—from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m. on week days; and on Sundays, Good Friday, and Christmas-day from 7 until 10 in the morning only. Money Order, Savings Bank, Government Annuity and Insurance business.—Money Orders are issued and paid, and Savings Bank, Government Annuity and Insurance business transacted, and Inland Revenue licences issued, Monday, Tuesday Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Postal Telegraph Office open always.

Town Deliveries.—1st, 7 a.m.; 2nd, 11 a.m.; 3rd, 3 p.m.; 4th, 5.30 p.m. Letters, &c., for delivery in the town must be posted at the head-office half-an-hour before the delivery is due to commence.

EXETER STREET DIRECTORY,

CONTAINING

THE NAMES OF THE PRINCIPAL INHABITANTS ARRANGED IN THE ORDER OF THE NUMBERS OF THE DOORS.

In this arrangement the particulars are abbreviated; but on referring to the names of Persons or Firms in the ALPHABETICAL DIRECTORY the Addresses will be found in full, with the latest additions and corrections. It has been the aim of the Publisher to make the following a complete STREET GUIDE, and the situations of the respective premises are indicated by printing in italics the titles of the principal streets, places, and terraces in the order in which they occur; streets and roads which intersect being placed in the middle of the line. Private houses are distinguished from places of business by inserting the professions or trades of the occupants in parentheses.

The CONTRACTIONS most frequently used are the usual abbreviations of Christian names; H., Heavitree; Mt. R., Mount Radford; P., Pennsylvania; St. D., St. David's; St. T., St. Thomas'; and bdg., bridge; bldgs., buildings; comsn., commission; ct., court; dlr., dealer; gn., green; gt., gate; h., or hs., house; insce., insurance; (j), journeyman; ln., lane; mfr. or manfr., manufacturer; mkr., maker; mkt., market; mert., merchant; pl., place; rd., road; shopr., shopkeeper; solr., solicitor; sq., square; st., street; ter., terrace; vict., victualler; vlas., villas; whsman., warehouseman; and yd., yard.

EXMINSTER is a parish and large straggling village, pleasantly situated, 4 miles S.E. by S. of Exeter, on the western side of the vale of the river Exe, opposite Topsham, and near the South Devon Railway, and Exeter Canal, which here falls into the estuary at Turf lock. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Lower Shillingford, Matford, and Little Silver, is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Exminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 1922 inhabitants (892 males, 1030 females) in 1871, living in 245 houses, on 5817 acres; of these acres 370 were water. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor of Exminster, and his ancestors are said to have anciently had a magnificent mansion here, in which Archbishop Courtenay and his brother Sir Peter are said to have been born. After being held by several other families, this manor was repurchased by the Courtenays about 1752. Sir L. V. Palk is lord of the manor of Shillingford, and owner of the estates called Little Bowhay, Breinton, and Lower and North Shillingford, or Shillingford Abbots. Kenbury House, a neat mansion, with pleasant grounds, is the seat of A. W. B. Daniell, Esq.; and Peamore House, a fine old mansion, encompassed by wooded hills, is the secluded seat of T. Kekewich, Esq., J.P., each of whom has a large estate here. Part of the parish belongs to a few smaller owners. The CHURCH (St. Martin) is a large structure, with a fine tower, containing a clock, chimes, and six bells. The chancel end has lately been rebuilt. The organ and loft were erected in 1839, and the new marble font and stone altar-piece in 1843. The Governors of Crediton Church Corporation Trust are impropriators of the tithes and patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £12, and in 1831 at £253. The Rev. James Deans, M.A., is the incumbent, and has 15 acres of glebe, and a pleasant residence, commanding a fine view of Topsham and the estuary of the Exe. All the tithes were commuted in 1839 for £850 per annum, out of which the impropriators pay a yearly stipend of £350 to the vicar, and £15 per annum in aid of the NATIONAL SCHOOL. The Church House has long been vested for the use of the poor. The Poor's Land (3¼ acres), and two houses, with gardens, &c., were given to the poor by unknown donors; and they have also 20*s.* a year left by Margaret Taverner, in 1629, out of Church Stile tenement. On the Poor's Land are eight almshouses built about twenty years ago.

The DEVON AND EXETER BOYS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL was founded in March 1863, and is now situated at Exminster. It was certified on August 7, 1869. When the school was examined on August 3, 1876, the number of inmates was: boys, 51, and three on licence. The average number maintained is 51. Total cost for 1876, £990 14*s.* 6*d.* The comparative cost per head on ordinary maintenance and management, £19 8*s.* 6*d.*; net cost per head, including profit or loss on industrial departments, £17 17*s.* 9*d.* The industrial profits were, £161 19*s.* 9*d.* Of 42 boys discharged in the years 1873–5, there are doing well, 33; dead, 1; convicted or recommitted, 8. Mr. and Mrs. Bosomworth are master and matron; and Mr. Gale, assistant secretary.

The DEVON COUNTY LUNATIC ASYLUM, an extensive and handsome building, is pleasantly situated about half a mile north of the village, and 3½ miles south of Exeter. The first stone was laid on June 27, 1842, and the building was finished in 1845, at a cost of about £60,000, including the money paid for the 24 acres of land on which the asylum stands. The wing on the female side has been recently extended, giving additional accommodation for 130 patients, thus making the asylum capable of accommodating 830 patients; a sanatorium, capable of containing 20 patients, and fitted up with all the appliances of an hospital, has been erected; and a new chapel, detached from the main block of buildings, has been built, in the style of the 13th century, from designs by Mr. Joseph Neale, of Bristol, to hold about 450 persons; the total expense of these improvements was about £12,000. George James Symes Saunders, Esq., M.B., is resident physician and superintendent; and Mr. Frederick Saunders, clerk.

POST OFFICE at Mr. William B. Gale's. Letters, viâ Exeter, are received at 5 a.m., and despatched at 7.50 p.m. Topsham is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office.

RAILWAY (Great Western)—James Frederick, station master

CARRIERS from Star Cross, Dawlish, and Teignmouth pass through daily

EXMOUTH, 10 miles S.S.E. of Exeter, and about 167 W.S.W. of London, has its name from its situation at the mouth of the broad estuary of the river Exe, opposite Star Cross Railway Station, within the jurisdiction of the Port of Exeter. It is a market town, and one of the handsomest and most fashionable sea-bathing places on the southern coast of Devonshire, and is mostly in the parish of Littleham, and partly in that of Withycombe Rawleigh. The portion in the former had 3408 inhabitants (1442 males, 1966 females) in 1871, living in 706 houses, and that in the latter 2252 inhabitants (952 males, 1300 females) in 1871, making a total of 3660 persons. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 80.) The Local Board of Health district had 5614 inhabitants in 1871. Until the early part of last century, the town of Exmouth consisted of a few straggling houses running down the side of the hill to the east, from the spot where the ancient chapel of the Holy Trinity stood, towards the Cross, and a few more towards the west, called the Strand. The sea at this time covered most of the ground on which the north-western part of the town is now built, and washed the base of the cliffs on the left-hand side of the turnpike at the entrance to the town from Exeter. The first improvement, by which this ground was rescued from the sea, commenced by an embankment made by the late W. T. Hull, Esq., in 1808. A number of neat houses, built near the Parade and Beacon, first gave Exmouth the name of a watering place, and led to the erection of the handsome buildings on the brow of the cliff called Beacon Hill. The manor of Littleham-cum-Exmouth has been long held by the Rolles, and the late Lord Rolle and his present surviving relict have been liberal patrons of the town. The commodious church, built in 1825, and the market-house in 1838, the plantations and walks under the Beacon, the new sea-wall, and most of the public improvements carried out during the last forty years, have been at their suggestion and expense. The aspect of the town is south-west, and its altitude above the sea and the estuary is sufficient for all the purposes of health and convenience. The promenades are numerous, but the principal is on Beacon Hill, which is tastefully planted, and commands a charming view of the opposite shore of the noble estuary, studded with luxuriant woods and gentlemen's seats, and traversed by the South Devon Railway. Below the town is a gradually sloping sandy beach, enlivened on one side by the rolling sea, and adorned on the other by the woody summits of unequal heights, barren rocks of various shapes, interspersed with craggy cliffs of fantastic forms, and embellished with tasteful plantations. The situation for bathing is excellent, the machines being within the bar, and well protected by hills from the north-east and south-east winds. The Bar, which contracts the entrance to the haven, consists of two shoals of sand, projecting from either side of the broad estuary. A great portion of the sandbank on the western side is called the Warren, and has been considerably reduced by tides and south-westerly gales during the last forty years. The soil round Exmouth is dry and well-wooded, and the climate is so mild that winter seldom sets in till after Christmas, and does not often continue above six weeks; but, though deep snow is unknown and severe frost uncommon, this part of the coast is not exempt from the piercing winds of March. The night air is generally dry and warm, and the skies during summer resemble those of Italy, and the place is remarkable for the splendour of the sunsets in July and August. Another circumstance of great importance to invalids is the excellent medical aid which may always be procured here, from the vicinity of the town to Exeter, and the very frequent trains daily between the two. The gentlemen's seats and other objects of interest in the vicinity are noticed in this volume with Withycombe-Rawleigh, Lympstone, Powderham, Mamhead, Bicton, and other neighbouring parishes, to which the walks and rides are beautifully diversified and picturesque. Though it is one of the oldest and best frequented watering places in Devon, it was, about 175 years ago, only a small hamlet occupied by fishermen. It was then brought into repute by one of the judges of the circuit, who retired hither to bathe, when in a very infirm state of health, and received great benefit. But we are told that in early times it was one of the principal ports of the county, and that in the reign of Edward III. it sent two members to the Council of State held at Westminster, and furnished ten ships and 193 mariners for the expedition against Calais. This return, no doubt, included the ships and men furnished by Topsham and some other places within the present limits of the Port of Exeter. (See page 329.) Hollinshed says there was a castle here to defend the entrance to the haven, and tradition affirms it to have stood on the Gun Point, where some slight vestiges of embrasures may still be seen. The Earl of March sailed from Exmouth in 1459. Exmouth Fort, then garrisoned for King Charles, was blockaded by the Parliamentarians under Colonel Shapcote in February 1646, and was taken in the following month, with 19 pieces of cannon and a great quantity of arms and ammunition. (See page 325.) In 1814 the late Admiral Sir Edward Pellew was created Baron Exmouth, of Canon-Teign ; and in 1816, after his expedition to Algiers, he was raised to the dignity of Viscount Exmouth. He died in 1833, when the title descended to his eldest son, the present viscount, who resides at Treverry, in Cornwall.

The late Lord Rolle died in 1842, after which, as the estates were vested in trustees for a minor, no further improvements could be effected. The opening of the South Devon Railway on the other side of the estuary caused an influx of visitors to that side, and thus caused Exmouth to make but little progress until 1861, when the South-Western Railway branch line from Exeter to Exmouth was opened. Soon after (in 1863) an Act of Parliament was obtained by the trustees, in conjunction with the Hon. Mark Rolle, the present owner, for the improvement of the town. In the following year (1864) 300 old buildings in the centre of the town were removed, and handsome new streets formed. A plot of ground in the centre of this area, about half an acre in extent, has been tastefully laid out, and planted with trees and shrubs, and forms a delightful promenade.

A good macadamised road, 3330 feet long and averaging about 40 feet wide, with a good footpath, was made in 1870, when a parapet, 2½ feet high, was built on the Sea Wall, which was begun in 1841-2, under the direction of John Smeaton, Esq. The wall was extended the entire length of the road; this road is called the Esplanade. The modern parts of the town are composed of terraces, surrounded by good houses, mansions of considerable size, and villas pleasantly detached, but so placed as to present to the spectator a continuous and unbroken neighbourhood. Nearly the whole command views which, for beauty and extent, are not to be surpassed in any part of England; indeed, the bay of this part of the English Channel is said to be inferior only to that of Naples. Louisa, Trefusis, and Beacon Terraces on Beacon Hill, and Alexander Terrace, are lined with large and handsome buildings, mostly built within the last forty years. Moreton Crescent is now in course of erection, and will consist of 25 houses, in the Italian style of architecture, and will be approached by three carriage entrances; it will be one of the finest terraces on the south coast.

The Local Board was formed in 1850; H. C. Adams, Esq., is clerk; George Blackmore, Esq., treasurer; Mr. I. Rake, inspector; and Mr. James Blackmore, collector. Under the auspices of the Board the town has been well drained, many roads made, and the streets much improved.

The market, held every Saturday, is well supplied with provisions, and there are also large supplies every Tuesday. Mackerel, turbot, salmon, herrings, soles, whitings, crabs, lobsters, shrimps, and a great variety of other fish, are caught in the estuary and the adjacent parts of the coast, and give employment to a number of men and boys; while about 300 females are employed in making Honiton and point lace. The old MARKET HOUSE, erected in 1830, was pulled down in 1869, when a new building was erected in Rolle Street. It was built by the lord of the manor, under an Act of Parliament, dated May 3, 1867, which repealed the old Act, dated April 11, 1838.

Exmouth Docks were constructed by a company of shareholders in 1867 at a great expense, but unfortunately the undertaking has proved unsuccessful, and the company is now in the Court of Chancery. Mr. R. W. Aldridge, of 21 Cannon Street, London, is the receiver, and Mr. George Ellett, deputy receiver. It is anticipated that the company will be reconstructed, and the docks put in a thorough state of repair, great facilities being afforded by the South-Western Railway Company. Mr. Henry C. Adams is secretary to the Dock Company.

The COASTGUARD STATION, near the sea wall, has dwellings for a lieutenant and 13 men; and on the Point is the station for the custom-house officers, consisting of a landing waiter and nine boatmen. Mr. William Matthews is the chief officer. Vessels take in pilots here for Topsham and Turf, the latter of which is the entrance to Exeter Canal. Exmouth is now the head quarters of the Exmouth division, which includes Budleigh Salterton and Sidmouth to the east, and Dawlish and Teignmouth to the west. Here is a battery for the naval reserve, on which is mounted nine guns. At the station is a fixed indicator, about 30 feet high, which is regulated daily by the barometer, and which can be seen at a distance of 30 feet. A new lifeboat was built in 1867, and given to the station by the Right Hon. Lady Rolle. W. T. Quigley, Esq., is hon. secretary.

The GAS WORKS, originally constructed in 1842, now belong to the Exmouth Gas Company, incorporated by Act of Parliament in 1865, under whose management the works have been greatly extended. There are 19 retorts and three gas holders, capable of containing about 30,000 cubic feet of gas. The number of public lamps in the town is 110. Mr. George Blackmore is manager and secretary.

WATER WORKS.—A new Water Company was incorporated in 1864, the old reservoir, covering 1½ acre of ground, and constructed in 1847-8 by J. Trenchard, Esq., being found inadequate for the wants of the town. The Company is termed the Exmouth and Budleigh Salterton Water Works Company, and its objects are to supply Exmouth, Budleigh Salterton, and the adjoining districts of Littleham and Withycombe Rawleigh. The original capital of the company is £8000, but it has been considerably increased. The source of supply is from a spring, called Golden Well, on the top of Woodbury Hill, and the water is collected in a reservoir, near Mr. Brice's fish pound. The reservoir covers ten acres, and the water, which is only 1·4 deg. in hardness, is thence conveyed in pipes to the consumers. Mr. Henry C. Adams is secretary to the company.

The IMPERIAL HOTEL, a large and handsome edifice on the Promenade, was erected in 1868, by the Hon. Mark Rolle. It stands in its own grounds, of about 3 acres, which are tastefully laid out, and the hotel is fitted with elegance and every convenience for families. Mr. Edward Payne is manager.

The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) is a chapel of ease under the parish church of Littleham, and was erected by the late Lord Rolle, at the cost of £13,000, in 1824–5. It is a handsome structure in the Perpendicular style, standing on the Beacon Hill, and has a lofty nave with clerestory of 5 bays, north and south aisles, chancel, and tower, 104 feet high, containing a clock and one bell. The whole length of the building is 140 feet, and its breadth 84. The interior is handsomely fitted up, and has sittings for 1500 hearers. It has a fine toned organ, and over the altar table is a fine canopy of Beer stone, in the florid Gothic style, ornamented with crockets, pinnacles, &c. The chancel has been restored by Lady Rolle, and a great portion of the nave was reseated in 1873; the old square pews yet remaining are about to be reconstructed and a new organ and organ-chamber added, principally at the expense of the Hon. Mark Rolle. The east window, of five lights, is filled with stained glass representing ten events in the life of our Lord, and was the gift of the present Lady Rolle. The church was consecrated on the condition that one half of the seats should be the property of the founder, the other half being allotted to the parishioners. The nave is surrounded by a gallery seating about 300 persons. The curacy has a small endowment, given by the founder, and is annexed to the vicarage of Littleham. There was a chapel dedicated to the Holy Trinity, standing in 1412, but all traces of it disappeared some centuries ago. EBENEZER CHAPEL was erected by Wesleyans in 1807, but now belongs to the Independents, who also have a chapel near Exeter Road, built in 1867, in lieu of the old chapel, erected in 1777, by Lady Glanorchy. The PRIMITIVE METHODISTS occupy the chapel on the Parade, which was built by Wesleyans in 1844. The handsome WESLEYAN CHAPEL, in Brunswick Square, was erected in 1872, at a cost of £1500. The PLYMOUTH BRETHREN Chapel was built in 1843, at the expense of W. H. Hull, Esq. EXMOUTH SCHOOL BOARD, for the united parishes of Littleham and Withycombe Rawleigh, was formed on March 22, 1875, and now consists of Mr. H. C. Adams (chairman), Mr. D. Teed (vice-chairman), and Messrs. G. P. Benmore, T. Hine, J. D. Farrant, F. Freeman, and W. J. Hooper; F. E. Carter, Esq., is clerk. The new BOARD SCHOOL, on Exeter Road, built at a cost of £2000, has accommodation for 300 scholars. The NATIONAL SCHOOL has an average attendance of 140 boys, 100 girls, and 100 infants. Large day and Sunday schools were erected in 1871 by J. S. Thomas, Esq., in connection with and adjoining the Plymouth Brethren Chapel; this day school has an average attendance of 70 mixed scholars. EXMOUTH DISPENSARY, Manchester House, Imperial Road, was established in 1868, and is supported by voluntary contributions and patients' payments. Mr. David Teed is dispenser and honorary secretary. The SHIPWRECKED FISHERMEN and MARINERS SOCIETY have a branch office at Beacon Place; Mr. Henry George Tupman is honorary agent. The ALBERT HALL, erected in 1874 to seat 500 persons, is used for entertainments, &c. In connection with the hall is a Skating Rink; Mr. George Warren is proprietor. The EXMOUTH UNITED CRICKET CLUB was formed in 1860, and is provided with a good cricket ground and a pavilion; it is considered one of the best in the West of England. Mr. George Foster is honorary secretary. The Sun Lodge of Freemasons (No. 106) was formed at Newton Abbot in 1759, and removed to Exmouth in 1784; it now numbers about 100 members, who meet on the second Monday in each month at the Royal Beacon Hotel. A chapter of Royal Arch-Masons is attached to the Lodge. The charities are noticed with their respective parishes in other parts of this work.

POST, MONEY ORDER, and TELEGRAPH OFFICE, and SAVINGS BANK, Strand; Mr. John Melluish, postmaster. There are WALL LETTER BOXES at Fore Street, George Street, Claremont Terrace, Carlton Hill, and Ferry Road.

EXWICK. (See Exeter.)

FARINGDON, or Farringdon, is a parish and small scattered village 6 miles E. by S. of Exeter, and is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. It had 308 inhabitants (162 males, 146 females) in 1871, living in 59 houses, on 2015 acres of land. The tithing of Clyst Satchfield is partly in this parish and partly in that of Sowton. The parish is bounded on the east by the hills which separate it from the Otter valley. At Domesday Survey Faringdon was held by Fulcher Archibalistarius, or the chief bow bearer, and it was afterwards held for a long period by a family of its own name. The manors of Faringdon and Bishop's Clist now belong to John Garratt, Esq., who resides at Bishop's Court, which is on the east side of the river Clist, and is noticed with Sowton. FARINGDON HOUSE, a large mansion with a handsome front, standing in a small park, and commanding extensive and beautiful views of the surrounding country, is the residence of Edward Johnson, Esq., J.P. John Garratt, Esq., J.P., and Edward Johnson, Esq., J.P., own most of the parish. The estate called Crealy, or Craley, was formerly held by St. James's Priory, Exeter, but is now the property of King's College, Cambridge. The CHURCH was rebuilt in 1871, and is a small structure comprising chancel, nave, north aisle, and tower surmounted by a broached spire containing one bell. There are choir stalls in the chancel, but the rest of the church is provided with chairs. There are mural monuments to the Colwick, Ellicombe, and Rous families; and also one in memory of the Rev. John Sleech, for 52 years rector of this parish, who died in 1788. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 8*s.* 1½*d.*, and in 1831 at £262. The Bishop of Exeter is patron, and the Rev. William Francis Gray is the incumbent, and has a handsome residence and about 60 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1837. The NATIONAL SCHOOL is attended by 50 mixed scholars. Poor husbandmen of Faringdon, not in receipt of parochial relief, have the dividends of £1089 18*s.* 4*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £1000, left in 1856 by Mary Challice, of Thorveton. There was a chapel near Bishop's Court, dedicated to St. Gabriel, founded by Bishop Bronscombe, and to which Bishop Stapeldon annexed an hospital for twelve poor infirm clergymen. They were suppressed by Edward VI., but their revenues were given to the priest-vicars of Exeter by Queen Elizabeth. Faringdon has £3 a year for schooling poor children from Weare's Charity. (See Clist Honiton.) The schoolmaster has also the interest of £56 left by Walter Wotton, in 1790, and the poor have the interest of £20 left by John Hornbrook. The schoolmaster's house was purchased about 1710, by subscription, together with £40 left by Walter Wotton.

LETTERS are received from Exeter at 8.45 a.m. Honiton Clist is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX by the National School, cleared at 4.45 p.m. week days only.

FARWAY, or Fairway, a village and parish, on a pleasant southern declivity, 3 miles S. of Honiton, and 5 miles E.N.E. of Ottery St. Mary, is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Colyton hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery rural deanery. The parish, which includes the small hamlets of Netherton, Sallicombe, and Woodbridge, had 375 inhabitants (189 males, 186 females) in 1871, living in 73 houses, on 2578 acres of land. Richard Marker is lord of the manor of Farway, formerly held by the Pole, Putt, and other families. Lady Prideaux is lady of the manor of Netherton, and resides at Netherton Hall, which was built in the reign of Elizabeth, by Sir Edmund Prideaux, an eminent lawyer, who was created a baronet in 1622. It is a neat, substantial mansion, with pleasant grounds. R. H. Tuckfield, Esq., and the Sweet and other families have freehold estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a small structure, and has a tower containing three bells. The tower was restored in 1872 at the sole cost of Sir E. Saunders Prideaux, Bart. The church has been recently restored. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £295, is in the patronage of Richard Marker, and incumbency of the Rev. John Hawkes Mules, M.A. The glebe is 25 acres; and the rectory house is a good residence, in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1847. The tithes were commuted in 1838, for £295 per annum. The SCHOOL was built by the Rev. Thomas Putt, the late lord of the manor of Farway. In 1795 Hannah Atkinson left £250 Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, in trust, to pay the dividends yearly to the schoolmaster, for teaching twelve poor children to read. The poor have the interest of £20, left by Elizabeth Cox, in 1784, the interest of which is distributed to the poor in bread.

FENITON, or Fenyton, a parish and small village in the Otter valley, 4 miles W.S.W. of Honiton, N. by E. of Ottery St. Mary, and 1 mile from the Sidmouth Junction Railway Station, which is in this parish. The parish includes the small hamlets of Corscombe and Colestocks, and is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery rural deanery. It had 333 inhabitants (170 males, 163 females) in 1871, living in 75 houses, on 1822 acres of land. The manor was anciently held by the Malherbe family, who were seated here for thirteen generations, and had the power of beheading criminals. It now belongs to many freeholders, the largest of whom are Jonathan Rashleigh, Esq., Sir John Kennaway, Bart, M.P., William Porter, Esq., John Mathew, Esq., J. Pynsent Mathew, Esq., the Rev. G. Barons Northcote, H. J. Lansdown, Esq., and Mr. Henry Toogood. The CHURCH (St. Andrew), a plain structure with a tower containing five bells, has been recently restored at a cost of £1300. Among other curious things in the interior is an escutcheon, displaying nettle leaves on a chevron, the badge of the Malherbe family; and another of three horseshoes, the badge of the Ferrars; there is also the stone effigy of a skeleton recumbent on the south side of the chancel within the rails of the altar. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £16 8*s.* 6½*d.*, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. G. Barons Northcote, M.A., who has a good residence and 74 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £288 a year, whereof £8 is charged upon the glebe. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built at the expense of Miss Patteson. The poor have 4½ acres of land, purchased with benefaction money in 1717 and 1737, and now let for £8. The Church land 3 roods, is let for £2.

FENN OTTERY. (See Venn Ottery.)

FILLEIGH is a parish in South Molton union and county court district, South Molton polling district of North Devon, petty sessional division, Barnstaple archdeaconry and South Molton deanery, and Braunton hundred. It had 370 inhabitants (175 males, 195 females) in 1871, living in 74 houses, on 2038 acres of land. Filleigh village is pleasantly situated 3½ miles W. of South Molton, and 8 miles E.S.E of Barnstaple. The Devon and Somerset Railway has a station in the parish, called Castle Hill. The parish, which is bounded on the east by the small river Bray, includes CASTLE HILL, a finely wooded park of about 826 acres, the seat of Earl Fortescue, who has another seat at Ebrington Hall, Gloucestershire. The grounds, and the old mansion of Castle Hill, were much improved about 1740, by Hugh Fortescue, Lord Clinton, who, in 1746, was created Earl Clinton and Baron Fortescue, and died without issue in 1751, when the earldom became extinct; but the Barony of Fortescue passed to his half-brother, Matthew Fortescue, who died in 1785, and was succeeded by his son, Hugh, who was created Earl Fortescue and Viscount Ebrington, in 1789. The latter died in 1841, and was succeeded by his son, the late Right Hon. Hugh Fortescue, Earl Fortescue and Viscount Ebrington, K.G., who was lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of Devonshire, and Colonel of the East Devon Militia. He was born in 1783, and distinguished himself in the House of Commons, in the debates on Parliamentary Reform. He died September 14, 1861, and was succeeded by his eldest son, the present (third) earl. The large and handsome mansion of Castle Hill, which was altered and enlarged by the Earl in 1842, stands in the park, on a well wooded eminence, whose summit is decorated with the artificial semblance of a ruined castle, and commands a prospect of very considerable extent. The grounds in front of the house are disposed into various pleasing slopes, which gradually descend from the terrace. Across the valley the ground again rises, and the view is terminated by a handsome triumphal arch on the top of the hill. In the shrubbery are some remarkably large Portugal laurels, and a fine Douglasia and other firs. The Earl is lord of the manor of Filleigh, which formerly belonged to a family of its own name, in the reign of Henry II., and it afterwards passed with the heiress of the Densells to the Fortescues. The CHURCH (St. Paul) was rebuilt in 1732 by the first Lord Clinton and Baron Fortescue, and was restored and enlarged, at the cost of Earl Fortescue, in 1877; it is of Norman architecture, with a Gothic aisle, and contains some good painted glass windows and other family monuments. A handsome brass lectern, a lectionary, a crimson velvet altar cloth, with kneeling cushions to match, and new alms dishes, have been presented by various friends. The Register dates from 1685. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of Earl Fortescue, and consolidated with that of East Buckland, as noticed at page 310. Here is a good rectory house, and 88½ acres of glebe. The tithes of Filleigh were commuted, in 1839, for £97 per annum. The SCHOOL is on the South Molton road, about a quarter-mile E. of the church. It was commenced by the late and finished by the present Earl Fortescue as a memorial to the Hon. John Fortescue, who died in Madeira in 1859. The first Earl Clinton left £100 for the foundation of an almshouse. About 1810 the late Earl Fortescue built four dwellings, at the cost of £300, and gave them, with four gardens, in lieu of the old almshouse. The poor parishioners have the interest of £27, left by various donors.

FREMINGTON parish includes the villages of Bickington and Loveacott, is in Barnstaple union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Braunton petty sessional division, Barnstaple polling district of North Devon, and gives name to a hundred. It had 1324 inhabitants (637 males, 687 females) in 1871, comprised in 274 families, living in 273 houses, on 6810 acres of land. Fremington village is pleasantly seated on an acclivity south of the estuary of the Taw, 3 miles W. of Barnstaple, and was anciently a borough sending members to Parliament in the reign of Edward I. In 1547 it was considered a part of Instow parish; in the reign of Edward the Confessor Bickington belonged to Tawstock parish. In Domesday Book Fremington is called Fremantone, Freeman's Town. Merchant vessels trading with Barnstaple usually anchor in the small creek of the Taw estuary, called Fremington Pill, or Pen-hill; and coal vessels discharge cargoes there. The Bideford and Barnstaple extension, now belonging to the South Western Railway, was opened in 1855, and has a station in the Creek, and large quantities of coal are thus sent to many parts of the country. The parish was at an early period celebrated for its pottery manufacture, which still continues on a small scale. In Saxon times the manor belonged to Earl Algar, and afterwards to Earl Harold; it was granted by William I. to Geoffery, Bishop of Constance, who was William's lieutenant at the battle of Hastings; it afterwards belonged to the Traceys. It reverted subsequently to the Crown, and was granted by Richard II. to John Holland, Earl of Huntingdon. In 1487 Margaret, Countess of Richmond, had a grant for life. It was given by Edward VI. to Bernard Hampton, who sold it in 1556 to Hugh Sloly, from whose family it passed by marriage in 1666 to Richard Hawkins. About 1682 the manor was purchased by Richard Ackland, Esq., whose grand-daughter brought it in marriage to William Barbor, Esq. It now belongs to W. A. Yeo, Esq., whose father inherited it from the Barbor family. He is also owner of a great part of the parish, and resides at FREMINGTON HOUSE, a large handsome mansion with extensive gardens, greenhouses, hothouses, &c., containing a valuable collection of exotics. BICKINGTON LODGE, standing in pleasant grounds of about 4¼ acres, is the seat and property of Lieut. J. B. Irving, who purchased it in 1877, and restored it at great expense. (For other seats see the subjoined Directory.)

The CHURCH (St. Peter), which dates from the early part of the 14th century, was enlarged and repaired in 1813, and consists of nave, chancel, south aisle, and tower containing four bells, which are very old, one bearing the date A.D. 1400. It was entirely restored in 1866 under the superintendence of Sir G. G. Scott, R.A., at a cost of £1517. The ugly pillars which divided the nave from the aisle were replaced by new columns and arches with carved capitals. The reredos is of alabaster and Caen stone, with a marble cross beautifully carved by Poole, of Westminster, and was the gift of Mrs. Yeo. On removing the floor the upper portion of a very handsome stone pulpit was discovered, much mutilated; but it has been repaired, and now forms part of the pulpit. The latter is octagonal, and five of the panels have niches with canopies; these niches are occupied by statuettes of Christ and the four Evangelists, the former being in the centre compartment. The lectern, which is of oak, was presented by Miss L. G. Wray. The font, octagonal in form, was new at the Restoration, and has richly carved panels. The chancel is divided from the aisle, which runs the entire length of the building, by a handsome wrought-iron screen. The seats are open and of pitch pine. The east window is filled with stained glass representing the Ascension, executed by Messrs. Ward and Hughes, and the gift of the Rev. T. B. B. Robinson, a former curate; the east window of the aisle has been similarly enriched by the same firm in memory of Dr. Yeo (who died in 1862), and represents the Good Samaritan. In the church are several memorials of the Sloly, Paige, Pollard, Hardinge, May and Barbor families. The Registers are in good preservation, and date from 1602. One of the entries is as follows:—'Georg, an Ethiopian, converted to ye faith of Christ, and openly at ye font making confession of his faith, bap. 18 Sept., 1631.' The handsome Communion plate, on which are the Paige arms, was presented by William Paige, Esq., in 1723. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £20 0*s.* 5*d.*, in the patronage of the trustees of Mrs. T. W. Pigot, and incumbency of the Rev. John Tayleur Pigot, M.A., rural dean of Barnstaple. The glebe is 96 acres, and a handsome vicarage house was built in 1831. The tithes were commuted in 1842—the vicarial for £359, and the rectorial for £421 a year. The latter belong to W. A. Yeo, Esq., subject to the yearly payment of £50 for the support of a lecturer, and £10 for the support of a scholar at one of the Universities, pursuant to the bequest of John Doddridge in 1658; but the latter is not now paid. The great tithes were formerly appropriated to the Priory and Convent of Hartland, having been given to that institution by Oliver de Tracey, and in the 17th century the impropriation was vested in the Doddridge family. A handsome lych-gate was erected at the Restoration at a cost of £38. The SCHOOL-CHURCH at Bickington was erected of brick with stone dressings in 1870, at a cost of £600. The school is under Government inspection. Divine Service is held in the room on Sunday afternoons. The school at Fremington was built by W. A. Yeo, Esq., in 1875, and is rented to the parish for £26 a year. It is attended by forty children.

The COTTAGE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY was formed in 1861 under the auspices of the vicar and principal inhabitants. The exhibition is held yearly in a field, and many prizes are awarded. The old schoolroom is used as a PARISH INSTITUTE, under the management of the vicar: it is supplied with newspapers, periodicals, &c., and in connection with it is a small lending library. There is a flourishing CHURCH OF ENGLAND TEMPERANCE SOCIETY, which was formed in 1876. The WESLEYANS have chapels in Fremington village and in the hamlet of Hunnacott, and the BAPTISTS in Loveacott. A Sunday School was added to the last in 1867 at a cost of £100. In the churchyard is a tomb in memory of John Penrose, Esq., a native of Fremington, who founded an almshouse at Barnstaple, and was buried here in 1624. The poor have about £24 a year from land and money derived from the gifts of John Penrose, Esq., and others, and £4 in three rent-charges, left by Grace Tew, Eleanor Thorne, and Samuel and Elizabeth May.

POST OFFICE is at Mr. Edward Withecombe's. Letters are despatched at 7.25 p.m. daily. Barnstaple is the nearest Money Order Office; the Telegraph Office is at the Station. Letters should be addressed Fremington, North Devon, only.

CARRIER—Mrs Eliz. Parish, to Barnstaple and Bideford daily

FRITHELSTOCK, a parish and village, 2 miles W. of Great Torrington, is in Torrington union and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry and Torrington rural deanery. Its parish, which includes the hamlets of Frithelstock Stone and Milford, had 594 inhabitants (289 males, 305 females) in 1871, living in 116 houses, on 4382 acres of land. There was a small Priory of Austin Canons here, founded by Sir Roger Beauchamp in the reign of Henry III. It was subsidiary to Hartland Abbey, and was valued at the Dissolution at £127 2*s.* 4½*d.* a year, and was granted to Viscount Lisle. The estate now belongs to Lord Clinton; but the representatives of the late Mrs. Stevens, the Hon. Mark Rolle, John How, Esq., and others have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Mary and St. Gregory) is an ancient structure consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, south porch and tower. The church has been put into a state of good repair during the last few years by the vicar. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of Captain Martin, and incumbency of the Rev. George Augustus Brine, M.A., who has a good parsonage house. Part of the Priory Church, with lancet shaped windows, still remains near the church. The BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL was erected in 1852, and the BAPTIST CHAPEL in 1872; the latter cost £230, and will seat 120 persons. The PARISH SCHOOL was built in 1873 at an expense of £220, on land given by Lord Clinton. It will accommodate sixty children, is managed by a committee appointed by the parish, and is under Government inspection.

GEORGEHAM, a parish and small straggling village in a valley 8 miles W.S.W. of Barnstaple, is in Barnstaple union and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, Barnstaple polling district, and Barnstaple archdeaconry and rural deanery. It had 716 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 4059 acres of land, and 170 of water. The parish extends westward to Croyde and Morte Bays, and the long, narrow promontory called Baggy Point, where the rocky cliffs rise boldly from the Bristol Channel. Many of the parishioners are in the village of Croyde and in the hamlets of North Buckland, Darracott, and Puttsborough. Croyde is a pleasant sea-bathing place, with a fine bay, having a beautiful sandy beach, and there is much romantic scenery in its vicinity. Earl Fortescue is lord of Georgeham manor; C. H. Webber, Esq., of Croyde, or Cride manor; but part of the soil belongs to the Dunning, Richards, Hole, and Prole families, and a number of smaller owners, partly free and partly leaseholders. Pickwell, formerly the seat of the Harris family, one of whom was twice M.P. for Barnstaple during the last century, was purchased by the present owner, Earl Fortescue, about 45 years ago, from the Newtons, to whom it had been sold by the Harrises. The CHURCH (St. George) was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower and some small portions of the walls, in 1876–7, at a cost of £3500, defrayed chiefly by T. Hole, Esq., of Ilfracombe, and his relatives, under the direction of Mr. Fowler, of Louth. A church appears to have existed here as early as the 12th century, and to have extended further to the north than the present building, or the one which it replaced. Evidences of a doorway were found on pulling down the north wall, and during the necessary excavations outside the church on this side, portions of an ancient tiled floor were also discovered; these were carefully preserved, and are in the possession of the Rev. W. G. Morcom. The church now consists of chancel and nave, the latter being separated from the south aisle and Pickwell Chapel by an arcade of five arches; and at the west end is a lofty tower containing six bells, which have been recently re-hung. The roof of the nave is of English oak relieved with bosses, some of which are restored from the former church; and the new ones are exact copies of the old. The seats of the nave and aisle are open and of pitch pine; and the floor is paved with Minton's tiles, as is that of the chancel; but the tiles of the latter are of a more elaborate pattern. The handsome carved Caen stone pulpit, which with appropriate book-rests is the gift of Mrs. Crawshay, stands at the north-east corner of the nave, and has beautiful alabaster panels, on which are carved John the Baptist preaching in the Wilderness, The Sermon on the Mount, and Paul at Athens. On the north side of the pulpit is the entrance to the ancient rood-loft, which was discovered while pulling down the north wall and has been preserved. The lectern and the chancel fittings are of oak. The reredos is a bas-relief of the Last Supper, and has been most beautifully carved in stone by Messrs. Ruddock & Son, of London; at the sides are four tablets of Caen stone with pillars of Devonshire marble. The east window is filled with stained glass, designed by Messrs. Lavers, Barraud & Westlake, in memory of the Rev. Francis Hole, rector of this parish, who died October 4, 1866, and was erected by his widow. In the south wall of the chancel is a window depicting the Good Samaritan, in remembrance of Capt. Geo. Chichester (died March 26, 1872), by whose widow it was inserted, and in the north wall is a small quatre-foil window, found in the wall of the old church, and which has been filled with stained glass by Mr. D. Bell, at the expense of the rector. On removing the north wall, there was also found the remains of a stone carving, representing a Calvary group, which had, in all probability, at one time formed a portion of an altar piece: it was preserved as it was discovered, and now forms the back of a credence table. A piscina was found in the south wall of the chancel, and another in the Pickwell Chapel. This chapel belongs to the Fortescue family, and has been restored at their expense. In a recess in the south wall is the recumbent figure of a Crusader, carved in stone, and supposed to be a memorial of Sir Mauger St. Albyn; and here are also monuments to the Harris, Hole, and other families. The font, which stands beneath the tower, is of stone handsomely carved. The west window, of four lights, is filled with rich stained glass, executed by Mr. D. Bell, in memory of the Rev. Francis Hole, the late rector, who died Aug. 10, 1871, and was erected by his widow, Mary Brooking Hole, who died May 9, 1874. In the churchyard are buried Simon Gould, and his wife Julianna, who died in March 1817, each in the 101st year of their age, and having been married upwards of 75 years. The Register dates from 1538, and under the date of 1746 is the following entry:—'All those marked * died of a violent pleurotic fever, or peripneumone, most of them in four or five days after their seizure.' This mark is affixed to the names of twenty-one persons who died in 1746–7. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £40 17*s.* 11*d.*, and now at £600, in the patronage of Thomas Hole, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William Genn Morcom, M.A., who has a handsome residence and 28A. 3R. 29P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £500 a year. The MISSION CHURCH (St. Mary Magdalene) at Croyde, erected in 1874 at a cost of £500, is a plain, substantial stone edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and schoolroom, separated from the former by an arcade of four arches. In the village is a WESLEYAN CHAPEL, erected in 1834, and seating 90 people; and at Croyde is a BAPTIST CHAPEL, with accommodation for 200 people, which was erected in 1816, and rebuilt in 1838 at a cost of £100. The CHURCH SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was erected in 1868 at a cost of £713, and is attended by 100 children. In 1778 John Richards left £5 a year out of Tucker's and Hartnoll's tenements, for two schoolmistresses, at Georgeham and Croyde; £50 was left by John Richard Middleditch, in 1798, and £57 by various donors. These charities came under the control of the Charity Commissioners in 1867, and the interest (£20 7*s.* 2*d.*) arising therefrom is now distributed among the poor parishioners and in payment of school fees.

GEORGE NYMPTON (See Nympton St. George.)

GERMANSWEEK, or Week St. Germans, on a bold acclivity, 11 miles W. by S. of Okehampton, is a parish and village in Okehampton union and county court district, Lifton petty sessional division, Lifton polling district of South Devon, Lifton hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Okehampton rural deanery. It had 305 inhabitants in 1871 (164 males, 141 females), living in 57 houses, on 2594 acres of land. The parish includes Heyworthy hamlet. — Carlyon, Esq., is lord of the manor, and he and Messrs. Seccombe, Palmer, and Abell are the principal owners. The Seccombe family has lived here since the Conquest. The CHURCH is mostly in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, and south transept. It was restored by subscription at a cost of £775, in 1874, when among other improvements the three bells were recast, and by the addition of new metal formed into a peal of five bells. The living is a vicarage, valued at about £105, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol, who are appropriators of the tithes; there is no incumbent, but the Rev. Samuel Andrew, of Halwell, is curate-in-charge. The tithes are now leased to Captain C. H. Luxmore, and commuted for £117 a year. The Bible Christians and the Baptists have chapels here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on March 30, 1874, and consists of the Rev. Samuel Andrew (chairman and honorary clerk), and Messrs. R. Seccombe (vice), J. Northcote, and W. Symons. The cost of the original building, now used as the schoolroom, and its adaptation for use, amounted to £200, and was opened as a Board School in 1875.

GIDLEIGH, or Gidley, is a parish and small scattered village, on the eastern declivities of Dartmoor Forest, near one of the tributary streams of the river Teign, 7½ miles S.E. of Okehampton, and 17 miles W. by S. of Exeter. The parish, which includes two small hamlets called Chapple and Forder, is in Okehampton union and county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Chagford polling district of East Devon, Wonford hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Okehampton rural deanery. It had 154 inhabitants (77 males, 77 females) in 1871, living in 29 houses, on 3449 acres of land. More than half of the parish is open common, &c. in Dartmoor. The parish is watered by the Teign and two of its tributaries, which have their sources a few miles westward, among the rude hills and dales of Dartmoor. The manor belonged, from the reign of William the Conqueror till that of Edward II., to the ancient family of Prouz or Prous, who had a castle here, and an extensive park. Some remains of the castle keep are still standing near the church. With the heiress of the Prouz family, the manor passed to the Mules; and from them it passed to the Damarells. It afterwards passed to the Coad, Gidley, and Rattery families, and was purchased with the advowson, under a decree of the Court of Chancery, by the late Rev. Thomas Whipham, and now belongs to the Rev. Arthur Whipham, who is the principal owner of the soil; but there are nine small proprietors besides the feoffees of church lands. GIDLEIGH PARK comprises in its ancient bounderies an extensive tract of rocky ground, 'fruitful only in rabbits, but curious from its singular appearance.' A steep descent from the park to the river Teign is studded by enormous rocky protuberances, whose level summits display many of the excavations called rock-basins. The roaring stream at the bottom of this descent, the wooded front of the bold bank that rises on the opposite side, and the vast masses of rock on either hand, grey with moss, or dark with ivy, render this part of the park truly romantic. The park is now occupied by Mr. Henry Gregory. In 1848 L. Prinsep, Esq., built a house and two towers on the highest hill in the parish, but they are now in ruins. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) is an antique, Late Perpendicular structure, with a tower and four bells. Its very fine old screen was cleansed and repaired in 1848. There is a granite reredos, and the East window is filled with stained glass. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £14 19*s.*, and now at about £112, is in the patronage of the Rev. A. Whipham, and incumbency of the Rev. Owen Owen, and has 29A. 1R. 39P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1843 for £87 10*s.* a year. Two houses and 24 acres of land have been vested from an early period for the repairs of the church.

GITTISHAM is a parish and small straggling village on a picturesque declivity, near the source of the river Sid, about 3 miles from Ottery St. Mary, 2½ miles from Honiton Railway Station, and 14 miles E.N.E. of Exeter. It is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery rural deanery. It had 376 inhabitants (182 males, 194 females) in 1871, living in 78 houses, on 2067 acres of land rising in bold hills from the Otter and Sid valleys. The knightly family of De Lumine held the manor in the reign of Henry II., and it afterwards passed to the Willingtons, Beaumonts, and the Putts. It passed from the late Rev. Thomas Putt to the Rev. Henry William Marker, and from him to his nephew, Richard Marker, Esq., the present lord of the manor and owner of all the parish, who has a pleasant seat here called COMBE HOUSE, a large stone mansion in the Elizabethan style, standing on a commanding eminence in a well-wooded park, overlooking the Otter valley. Thomas Putt, who resided here, was created a baronet in 1666, but his son dying without issue in 1727, the title became extinct. The CHURCH consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, and transept. The chancel was restored by the late rector, the Rev. R. Kirwan, and a window filled with stained glass in 1869, by Mrs. Marker, in memory of her husband, the Rev. Thomas John Marker. On the south side are two other windows similarly enriched, in memory of members of the Marker family. The church contains some fine monuments belonging to the Beaumont and Putt families. One of them has kneeling effigies, and is in memory of HenryBeaumont, who died in 1591. Near the churchyard is a large elm tree, the hollow trunk of which is 30 feet in circumference. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £21 8*s.* 11½*d.*, in the patronage of Richard Marker, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick Thomas Salmon, who has a large residence with pleasant grounds, and 47A. 1R. 6P. of glebe. Beaumont's Charity, for the poor of this parish, was derived from a legacy of £800 left by Henry Beaumont, Esq., in 1590, and now comprises several tenements, and 174 acres of land, let for about £220 a year, and including Wampford Farm and mills, at King's Nympton. The net income is applied in weekly payments to the aged poor parishioners of good character, who are not receiving parochial relief. There are also cottages belonging to the trust, occupied by the poor at nominal rents. The Charity Commissioners allow £15 a year for the support of the school.

GOODLEIGH, nearly 3 miles E. by N. of Barnstaple, is a small village and parish in Barnstaple union and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Braunton hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Sherwell rural deanery. The parish had 261 inhabitants in 1871, living on 1167 acres of land, including the hamlet of Northleigh. The manor belongs to the Misses Incledon, whose family mansion, called Yeotown, is now a farm house, and was new fronted in the Gothic style by the late R. N. Incledon, Esq. This house is in the sequestered, woody valley of the small river Yeo. Gage Hodge, Esq., and several other proprietors have estates in this parish, which was formerly celebrated for its cherry orchards, but the land is now mostly let for farming purposes. The CHURCH (St. Gregory), an ancient Gothic structure consisting of nave, aisles, chancel, and short tower containing six bells, has some stained glass in its windows, and a richly ornamented screen. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £14 19*s.* 4½*d.*, and in 1831 at £302, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. John Harding, M.A., who has a good residence and about 30 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £184 19*s.* 2*d.* per annum. Here is an INDEPENDENT CHAPEL, and schools are attached to the church. The Parish School was built in 1873 at a cost of £260, raised by subscription; it is managed by a committee elected annually by the parishioners, and is attended by 47 children. The poor have 26*s.* a year out of land at Westacott, left by Hugh Acland, in 1620; and the interest of £10 left by Richard Squire, in 1735.

GREAT TORRINGTON is a parish, well built market town, and ancient borough, pleasantly seated on a bold eminence, on the north-east side of the picturesque valley of the Torridge river and canal, 34 miles N.W. by W. of Exeter, 6 miles S.S.E. of Bideford, 10 miles S.S.W. of Barnstaple, and 196 miles W. by S. of London. The parish includes Moortown, Norwood, Staple Vale, Beam, gives name to, and is the head of a poor law union, county court district, petty sessional division and rural deanery, Great Torrington polling district of North Devon, Fremington hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 3529 inhabitants (1550 males, 1979 females) in 1871, living in 729 houses, on 3456 acres of land; of the inhabitants, 108 were paupers in the union workhouse. The parish contains commons, the enclosure of which is opposed by the inhabitants. The Hon. Mark Rolle is lord of the manor and barony, and owner of most of the soil; and the rest belongs to Wellington Furse, Esq., and a few smaller owners. The barony of Torrington belonged anciently to a family of its own name, and after being for some time divided among their co-heiresses, it passed to the Crown, of which it was subsequently held by the Hollands. Queen Mary granted it to James Bassett, Esq., whose son sold it to Sir John Fortescue, from whose family it passed to the Rolles. The celebrated General Monk, Duke of Albemarle, was created Earl of Torrington in 1660, but the title became extinct on his death in 1668. In the following year Arthur Herbert was created Earl of Torringtou, but, dying without issue in 1716, the title again became extinct. In 1716 Thomas Newport was created Baron Torrington, but the title died with him in 1719. Sir George Byng was created Viscount Torrington in 1721, and it is now held by the Right Hon. George Byng, Viscount Torrington, and Baron Byng, who resides at Yorkes Place, Kent. Torrington Castle, which appears to have been erected in 1340, by Richard de Merton, who married an heiress of the Torrington family, stood on the south side of the town, near the edge of a high and steep precipice, overlooking the river Torridge. Its site is now a bowling-green, and near it is a column, commemorative of the battle of Waterloo. There are now but few vestiges of the castle; and its chapel, which had been converted into a schoolhouse, was taken down in 1780. Beam House, which was formerly a seat of the Rolles, is now occupied by A. R. Hole, Esq.

Torrington was formerly a parliamentary borough, but the burgesses were exonerated from the burden of sending members to parliament, at their own request, in 1368. They stated in their petition that they had never been subject to this burden till the 21st of the then king's reign, when the sheriff, to their great injury, summoned them to send two members to parliament. Their prayer was granted, but it is recorded that the borough sent members to parliament sixteen times before the 21st of Edward III., although they had not been summoned from the 15th till the 21st of that reign. Torrington was incorporated by Queen Mary, and a charter of the 15th of James I. It received another charter in the 2nd of James II. The CORPORATION formerly consisted of a mayor, 8 aldermen, 16 capital burgesses, and an indefinite number of freemen, with a recorder, town-clerk, and other officers. At the period of the municipal inquiry in 1833, the court of record had been disused for 50 years, and the view of frankpledge was also in disuse. The gaol was then an insignificant building, containing five cells, with unglazed windows. Under the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, the borough is included among those not to have commission of the peace, and is governed by a Town Council, consisting of a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The mayor and ex-mayor are justices of the peace, and the borough comprises the whole parish. The Corporation derives £40 a year from fairs and markets; and the borough expenditure is made up by rates and contributions from the charity called 'the Town Lands.'

TOWN COUNCIL (1877-8).

MAYOR—James Baldwin, Esq.

ALDERMEN—J. S. Farleigh, Nathaniel Chapple, E. Handford, and J. B. Kingdon.

COUNCILLORS—William Ashplant. W. C. Heywood, W. Jones, H. L. Mallett, who retire in 1878; J. Jackson, jun., J. Adams, R. L. Tapley, and H. Slee, who retire in 1879; and J. Balsdon, Thomas Jackson, J. D. Bastard, and T. Copp, who retire in 1880.

George Doe, Esq., is town clerk; Mr. Philip Rousham is superintendent of county police, and inspector of weights and measures; Messrs. John Shaddick and Philip Dovey, serjeants-at-mace; Mr. John Rew, beadle; Mr. John Vickery, surveyor and inspector of nuisances; and Charles Richard Jones, Esq., M.D., medical officer.

Torrington appears in old records as Chepintoriton, and is also written Toritone, Torintone, Toyreton, and Toureton. Brown Willis calls it Chipping Toriton. It is described as Toryton Magna cum Sancto Egidio in the ecclesiastical survey of 1536. In 1484 a session was held here, at which Bishop Courtenay and others were indicted for treason against Richard III. In 1590 the Michaelmas quarter sessions for Devon were held here on account of the plague being at Exeter. Torrington was visited by the plague in 1591, and in the 17th century it was the scene of some of the important actions of the civil war. In 1643 Colonel Digby took up his quarters here for the king, and was reinforced by some of the Cornish royalists. After several skirmishes, he took the forts of Appledore, Bideford, and Barnstaple. About the middle of February, 1646, Lord Hopton had scarcely stationed his army here and fortified the town, when he was attacked by Sir Thomas Fairfax, and totally defeated, after a severe action, in which both himself and Lord Capel were wounded. The famous Hugh Peters, who was then chaplain to Fairfax's army, preached in the market place after this victory, and made many converts to the parliamentary cause. On February 19 the general left Torrington, the quarters being inconvenient on account of the church having been blown up.

There was formerly a considerable manufacture of woollens carried on at Torrington; glove making is carried on very extensively, and there are four tanneries in the town. The market is held by prescription every Saturday, and is well supplied with provisions, corn, &c. Here are cattle fairs on May 4, July 5, and October 10, and a great cattle market on the 3rd Saturday in March. In 1841-2 a commodious New Market House was erected at the cost of £2990. Over the butchers' shops, &c., is a large hall, let for a subscription reading room. The market belongs to the Corporation, subject to certain mortgages in the shape of Poll Deeds, which are held by several persons in the town and neighbourhood. The tolls, &c., of markets and fairs are let at present for £125 a year. The Corporation receive £30 a year out of the income as compensation for the old market; the remainder of the income after cost, &c., together with the rent of the market-hall (£16 a year), is divided among the owners of the poll deeds. GAS WORKS were established in 1836, at the cost of £2000, raised in £10 shares. Mr. James Badcock is manager.

PETTY SESSIONS are held in the Town Hall, on alternate Saturdays, for Great Torrington petty sessional division, which comprises Alverdiscott, Beaford, Buckland Filleigh, Dolton, Dowland, Frithelstock, Great Torrington, High Bickington, Huish, Huntshaw, Langtree, Little Torrington, Merton, Peters Marland, Petrockstow, Roborough, Shebbear, St. Giles-in-the-Wood, Wear Gifford, and Yarnscombe. The magistrates usually sitting here are the Right Hon. Lord Clinton, the Hon. Mark Rolle, Alfred Robert Hole, Esq., Wm. A. Deane, Esq., John G. Johnson, Esq., M.P., John C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., Thomas Fisher, Esq., and Wm. Cory, Esq. George Doe, Esq., is their clerk. The Town Council resolved in June, 1878, to employ a superintendent of police and one man, instead of the county staff.

TORRINGTON COUNTY COURT DISTRICT comprises all the places in Torrington union (which see). The Court is held in the Town Hall, in the middle of each alternate month. Mr. Serjeant Petersdorf is judge; Mr. W. E. Price, clerk; and Mr. Frederick Holwill, high bailiff.

TORRINGTON UNION comprises 23 parishes, &c., and had 16,334 inhabitants (7793 males, 8541 females) in 1871, living in 3326 houses, on 81,472 acres of land; there were 203 houses uninhabited, and 13 building when the census was taken. The annual average expenditure on their poor before the formation of the union was £7500; and for the year ended Lady-day 1878, it was £7034. The WORKHOUSE is a neat stone building, erected in 1837, at the cost of £4000, and has accommodation for 250 paupers, but there are seldom more than 180: at the census of 1871 there were 108. Infectious wards were added in 1867, at a cost of £700; and in the same year a handsome new chapel was erected in the grounds by J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., and presented by him to the union. P. B. Glubb, Esq., is union clerk and superintendent registrar; Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Mary Cann master and matron of the Workhouse; the Rev. H. O. Francis, M.A., the chaplain; Charles Richard Jones, Esq., union medical officer. The RELIEVING OFFICERS are Messrs. James Tanton and J. S. Friend. The MEDICAL OFFICERS are Charles Richard Jones, William Lait,

S. Michell, T. H. Norman, and L. R. Rouse, Esqrs. Mr. William Frederick Glubb is registrar of marriages; the registrars of births and deaths are Messrs. James Tanton, J. S. Friend, W. S. Bishop, A. Friend, and E. Walter.

The following enumeration of the parishes, &c., shows their territorial extent, and the population and inhabited houses in 1871, and their present rateable value:—

NOTES, &c.—Marked 1 are in High Bickington sub-district; 2, Winkleigh; 3, Dolton; 4, Shebbear; and 5, Great Torrington.

The PARISH CHURCH (St. Michael), which was mostly rebuilt in 1651, after being nearly destroyed by fire during the civil wars, is a large handsome structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, transepts, and lofty tower containing six bells, and crowned by an octagonal spire. The tower and spire were erected in 1830, when the curious old tower and spire, which were on the south side of the church, were taken down. The church was restored at a cost of about £2500 in 1862, when the unsightly galleries on the north, south, and west sides were taken down, the tower arch opened, and the church refitted with open seats; the organ has been lately considerably much improved. At the restoration, the east windows of the north aisle, the chancel, and the south aisle were enriched with stained glass by Messrs. Lavers and Barraud—the first at the expense of Mrs. Davys, in memory of members of the Callon family; the last at the cost of J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq.; and the second was inserted by subscription. The window in the tower is the gift of the Rev. C. Palmer, in memory of members of his family; a window in the south aisle was added in 1868 in memory of the Colby family, the window was given by the Rev. Hugh Fowler, in 1870, in memory of his father and mother. A handsome reredos, by Hems, of Exeter, was added by subscription, in 1877, at a cost of £250, the centre containing a representation of the Last Supper in Caen stone. The picture, given by Lady Rolle, which formerly hung over the centre of the communion table, is now placed in the north transept. The pulpit is said to be the same as that occupied by that celebrated Nonconformist, John Howe, who was appointed to the living in 1635, but was ejected in 1662. Among the monuments in the church is one to Samuel Gooding, who died in 1698. The Dean and Chapter of Christchurch, Oxford, are appropriators of the tithes and patrons of the living, which is a vicarage. The incumbent is the Rev. Samuel Buckland, M.A., who has a good residence, standing in 5 acres of land, and built in 1844. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £120, and the rectorial at £493. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL, at the top of Mill Street, erected in 1832, was reseated and refitted in 1876–7 at the cost of £240, thus providing accommodation for 450 people; a handsome house for the minister was erected a few years ago at the expense of £700. The INDEPENDENT congregation was formed in the early part of the last century. and their present chapel, in Castle Street, was built in 1858 at the cost of £2200; it contains a good organ and will seat 400 persons. The BAPTISTS have a chapel in New Street, erected in 1827; the BIBLE CHRISTIANS one in South Street. The latter was built in 1866 at a cost of £1250, from designs by Mr. R. T. Hookway, of Bideford. It has a small gallery and will seat 35 persons. A spacious schoolroom was erected behind the chapel in 1867.

The BLUE COAT SCHOOL was given by Denys Rolle, Esq., who endowed it in 1709 with £220, to which £730 was added by the donations of the Rolle family. As interest of the £950 the trustees of the late Lord Rolle pay £47 10*s.* a year, out of which the master has £16 for teaching 22 poor boys, who are provided with clothing once a year. The Church and Blue Coat Schools occupy the schoolroom in Castle Street, which was erected in 1834 by the late Lord Rolle; the school is supported by the Hon. Mark Rolle, with the exception of a nominal charge of 1*d.* a week for each scholar. Since 1852 the 22 Blue Coat scholars have been taught free of charge in the Barley Grove National School, and are provided with blue clothing once a year, and shirts and shoes twice a year—the cost in excess of the aforementioned sum being given by the Hon. Mark Rolle in consideration of the above bequest.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed in 1871, and consists of Mr. Nathaniel Chapple (chairman), Mr. J. B. Kingdon (vice-chairman), the Rev. Samuel Buckland, M.A., and Messrs. William Price and William Vaughan. Mr. R. C. Tapley is clerk to the Board. The handsome school in Halsdon Road was erected in 1873, and class rooms added in 1876 at a total cost of about £2500. The SCHOOL was opened on July 2, 1873, by the Earl of Portsmouth.

The MIDDLE SCHOOL was opened in 1867, to prepare boys for the local examinations in connection with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The school-house is a large and commodious building in South Street, standing in about 2½ acres of grounds, overlooking the valley of the Torridge. Mr. S. Doidge is head master.

The BURIAL BOARD was formed in July 1854, and the Cemetery at the end of New Street, near the Common, was opened in 1855. The cemetery, half of which is consecrated, is about 6 acres in extent, and was enclosed from the common at a total cost of £1600 (including £60 paid for common rights). Mr. George Doe is clerk to the Board, and Mr. Philip Norman is sexton.

The GREAT TORRINGTON VILLA and GENERAL BUILDINGS COMPANY (limited) was formed in 1870, with a capital of £5000 in £50 shares, for erecting villas, &c., in the town and suburbs of Torrington. The offices are in South Street, and Mr. W. H. Turrall is secretary. The NORTH DEVON PERMANENT MUTUAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY was established in 1850; in February 1877 there were 851 members holding 1617 shares. The offices are in High Street, and Mr. W. C. Medland is the secretary.

The poor parishioners had upwards of £30 a year from 13 benefactions, mostly bequeathed in the 17th century. Fifty acres of common land were enclosed, under the sanction of an Act of Parliament in 1777, for the establishment of the Staple Vale Woollen Manufactory, which was discontinued many years ago. The property is now leased under the Act for three lives, at £2 10s. per annum, with right of renewal on fine of £30 for each life. The rent and fines are applied in apprenticing poor children. The poor have still common right on about 400 acres of open land called Hatchmoor, Wester, and South Commons, about 50 acres of which are let to the poorer inhabitants in quarter-of-acre allotments at low rents.

The TOWN LANDS, &c., have been vested from an early period in trustees for the repairs of the church, and other public uses. They now comprise a great number of houses, cottages, gardens, fields, &c., the income of which is over £500 a year. A large portion of the income is expended in the service of the church, and in paying salaries to the organist, clerk, sexton, vestry clerk, and serjeants-at-mace. The MAGDALEN LANDS, granted to the Corporation, for the relief of the poor of the borough, by Tristram Arscott, in 1665, had previously formed part of the endowment of the lepers' hospital at Taddiport. They comprise 13 acres and three houses, let for £46 a year. The ALMSHOUSES, formerly on the north side of the churchyard, were founded at an early period, and vested in feoffees for the residence of ten poor people. John Huddle erected or rebuilt one of the houses, and their endowment was augmented by him and other benefactors. It now consists of land and houses, &c., let for only about £1500 a year. The CHARITY TRUSTEES are Messrs. J. Adams, W. Ashplant, J. Balsdon, S. Buckland, N. Chapple, T. Haverfield, J. Holwill, T. Jackson, J. B. Kingdon, H. L. Mallet, H. Pridgeon, W. E. Price, L. H. Penhorwood, J. Rude, E. Rudd, R. Sandford, R. L. Tapley, S. G. Tapley, and S. White. W. E. Price, Esq., is steward.

CONVEYANCE—Two omnibuses, in connection with the principal hotels, meet all the trains

HACCOMBE, 3 miles E. by S. of Newton Abbot Railway Station, is a small parish in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Newton Abbot polling division of East Devon, Wonford hundred (detached portion), Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 7 inhabitants (4 males, 3 females) in 1871, living in 3 houses, on 363 acres of land. It is the seat and property of the Misses Carew, by whose family it has been held for many generations; and one of the Carews was created a baronet in 1661. Part of this manor is in the parish of Combeinteignhead. The present mansion, called HACCOMBE HOUSE, was built on the site of the ancient hall, in 1805. It is a large plain building, standing in a well-wooded lawn, at the bottom of a gradual descent, near the church, on the door of which two horseshoes were fastened, 'in memory of one of the Carews, who won a wager of a manor of land, by swimming his horse a vast way into the sea, and back again.' At Domesday Survey the manor was held by Stephen de Haccombe, under Baldwin the Sheriff. It passed successively to the Archdeacons and Courtenays. In the 13th century it passed with the heiress of the latter to Nicholas Lord Carew, one of whose descendants, George Carew, was created Baron Carew and Earl of Totnes in 1625, but, dying without issue, in 1629, his titles became extinct. Another member of the family was created Lord Carew of Ireland in 1834, and of the United Kingdom in 1838. The CHURCH (St. Blaize) is a small ivy-clad structure, consisting of two aisles, and has a bell turret, and contains some ancient monuments of the Haccombe and Carew families. In 1821–2 it was newly-fitted with a handsome stone screen, stone pulpit, Gothic altar piece, &c., and was thoroughly restored in 1863–4 by the late Sir W. P. Carew. Sir John L'Ercedekne, or Archdeacon, about the year 1341, founded in it a college or archpresbytery, consisting of an archpriest and five other priests, who lived together in community, and were endowed with the great tithes of Haccombe and of Quethiock, in Cornwall. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £25, and now at £15 (gross), in the patronage of the Misses Carew, and incumbency of the Rev. Fitzwilliam John Taylor, M.A. The great tithes of Quethiock, in Cornwall, belong to this rectory, and are commuted at £377 8*s.* 8*d.* The rectory house is a small, old building, occupied by the underkeeper.

HALBERTON is a parish and large village, 3½ miles E. of Tiverton, near the Grand Western Canal, 2 miles W. of the junction of the Tiverton branch of the Bristol and Exeter Railway. It is in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Sampford Peverell polling district of North Devon, Halberton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. The parish had 1544 inhabitants (759 males, 785 females) in 1871, living in 326 houses, on 5755 acres of land. The parish includes the Muxbere, Higher Town, Lower Town, and Western Quarters; Higher Town Quarter includes the village of Chieflowman; Lower Town Quarter the villages of Ash and Brithembottom. Earl Powlett is lord of the manor of Halberton Dean or Lower Town, which he holds on lease under the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The manor of Halberton Boys, formerly held by the Boys and other families, was purchased in 1808, by Richard Hall Clarke, Esq., of Bridwell House, a pleasant seat in this parish, 4 miles E. of the village, built in 1779, and encompassed by a fine lawn and luxuriant plantations. Mr. Clarke is also owner of Muxbere and Selake estates. The manor of Moorstone belongs to the Countess of Egremont. Mount Stephen is the seat of George Coombe, Esq., and Halberton Court is the residence of Thomas Webber, Esq. The other principal owners of land in this parish are C. Hill, Tom Pitt, T. Pearce, and W. Spurway, Esqrs. The parish is chiefly freehold, and the Canal winds through it very circuitously, and is crossed three times by the high road from Tiverton to Wellington. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a handsome structure of the 15th century, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, and square tower containing a clock and six bells. The bells were recast a few years ago by Mears, and the clock was placed in the tower in 1861 by the Countess Dowager of Downe. The church was reseated, cleansed, and thoroughly renovated at the cost of about £1400, in 1848. It has a beautiful screen and a fine old pulpit, both dated 1420, and the screen was restored in 1862, in memory of the late C. G. Newcombe, who was vicar of the parish from 1845–62. The east window is filled with stained glass representing eight scenes in the life of our Lord; and two other windows in the chancel are similarly enriched in memory of the Rev. Thomas William Barlow; and in the north aisle is one to the Clarke family. A very fine silver paten and chalice, still used at the Communion, were given to the parish by Thomas Were in 1634. The chalice was found a few years ago by Canon Girdlestone, the then vicar, in a small box in the vestry, which was fastened with three padlocks. There is remaining among the church plate a very beautifully chased silver cover belonging to a now lost chalice. The cover is apparently of the 16th century, much older than the plate given by Thomas Were, and is so made as to serve for a paten when not wanted to cover the chalice. The other church plate, consisting of a large silver alms dish, two brass-gilt alms dishes, a silver paten, two silver flagons, and a silver chalice, is very good, and was given by the Dowager Countess of Downe. The church contains monuments to the Turner, Membery, Cross, Were, Commins, Chamberlyn, Land, Maunder, and Carter families. There was formerly a guild or fraternity of St. John the Baptist, valued at £6, and a charity, endowed with £5 4*s.* 6*d.* a year. In 1772 there were in the parish vestiges of three ancient chapels, one in the churchyard, one at Bridwell, and the other at Muxbere. The Dean and Chapter of Bristol are patrons of the living, which is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £31, and now at £725, in the incumbency of the Rev. Edmund Ironside Gregory, M.A., who has 41 acres of glebe, and a large and handsome residence, built in 1848, at a cost of £2000. He has the tithes of apples and hay. The tithes were commuted in 1842, the vicar's for £671, and the appropriate tithes for £540 a year. These latter were leased by the Dean and Chapter of Bristol many years ago to Messrs. Stuckey, bankers, of Langport, Somerset, but after the expiration of certain lives, they will lapse to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The SCHOOL-CHURCH (St. Thomas) at Ash Thomas, was dedicated on October 15, 1877, its foundation-stone being laid on April 21 preceding. The ground upon which it stands is leased for a term of 2000 years, of which 1877 are yet to run. The school must always be in union with the National Society, which has made a grant of £50 towards the building fund. The Incorporated Church Building Society has made a grant of £25, and the Exeter Diocesan Church Building Society one of £20; and in consequence of these grants all the seats in the church are free and unappropriated. The School-Church, which is in the Early English style, consists of a nave, chancel, and bell-cot at the west end. Attached to the chapel is a class-room, which also serves as a vestry. The chancel contains seats for the clergy, and a harmonium; and the nave is seated with chairs, each of which is supplied with a kneeling-hassock. The sacrarium is paved with Minton's tiles, and the rest of the chancel and the nave with Staffordshire tiles. The communion plate is the gift of Miss Cadbury, and the lectern is of oak, executed by Mr. W. Goldsworthy. The service books are the gift of Mrs. Newcomb, widow of a late vicar; the lamps in the nave, of Mr. O'Neill; and the London Deaconesses' Institution, and Mrs. Talboys, and Miss Hall also made gifts. The total cost of the church was about £700. In the parish is an old WESLEYAN CHAPEL and a BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL built in 1860. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on April 20, 1871, and consists of Mr. G. Were (chairman), Mr. R. B. Mildon (vice-chairman), the Rev. E. I. Gregory, and Messrs. N. Cook, William Haydon, and G. Q. Pedler; Mr. R. C. Merson, of Chiefloman, is clerk. A new school was built in the hamlet of Ash Thomas, in 1874, to accommodate 85 children.

CHARITIES.—Halberton charities are of the annual value of £132 8*s.* 2*d.*, and are derived as follows:—£4 a year left by William Newte, in 1719, for the support of the Charity School of the parish, and now paid to the National School; £1 1*s.* left by Stephen Hewett, now given in prizes to the children of the three Sunday Schools of Halberton; for distributions in bread the poor have £10 from Nicholas Spicer's charity, £1 6*s.* from Sir John Acland's, £4 6*s.* 8*d.* from John Were's, and £17 6*s.* 8*d.* from Nicholas Turner's; for clothing they have £10 from Nicholas Spicer's, and £4 from John Were's; they have also in money, £1 from Simon Burrough's, £1 from Emmin Commins, £13 10*s.* from John Were's, £1 13*s.* 4*d.* from Nicholas Turner's, £4 from Thomas Were's, 10*s.* from Thomas Maunder's, £50 from Nicholas Spicer's, £3 3*s.* 9*d.* from the Rev. J. T. Lawes, and £3 3*s.* 9d. from the Rev. C. G. Newcomb's; for repairing the parish church, 1*s.* from John Were's, 10*s.* from Nicholas Spicer's, and 10*s.* from Thomas Were's; £1 is paid to the clerk for keeping accounts from Nicholas Turner's charity. Some of the above charities, amounting in the aggregate to about £56 a year, have been consolidated, and entitled the 'Consolidated Charities for the Poor of Halberton;' the vicar, the churchwardens, and the guardians are ex officio, and there are twelve elected, trustees.

Post Office at Mr. John Chubb's. Letters are received at 7.20 a.m., and despatched at 6.20 p.m. viâ Tiverton, but Sampford Peverell is the nearest Money Order Office.

HALWELL, a parish and small village, 6 miles S. by W. of Totnes, and 7 miles W. by N. of Dartmouth, is in Totnes union, county court district, archdeaconry, rural deanery, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, and Coleridge hundred. The parish includes a small part of the hamlet of Washbourne, which is mostly in Ashprington parish, and had 348 inhabitants (176 males, 172 females) in 1871, living in 71 houses, on 3666 acres of land. The soil is various, and on the higher grounds are vestiges of two entrenchments. The manor was anciently held by the Halghwiks, and afterwards by the Verneys and Hales, but was dismembered many years ago. The parish is now mostly freehold, and belongs to Admiral Cornish-Bowden, J. Luxmoore, Esq., Hele's Charity, and several smaller owners.

The Church (St. Leonard) is an ancient structure, in the Perpendicular style, with a fine lofty tower and six bells. The living is a vicarage. in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. It is now held by the Rev. Glanville Martin, B.A. A new and commodious residence was built in 1850. The tithes were commuted in 1839: the rectorial for £235, and the vicarial for £182 10*s.* The former belong to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, but are held on lease by W. Helyar, Esq. There is a National School, built in 1839, and an Independent Chapel, built in 1831. Halwell and Morleigh School Board was formed in 1875 (see Morleigh). A charity in behalf of the church and poor has existed in Halwell for more than 400 years. The property at present consists of 8 dwellings and 5¾ acres of land, producing a yearly income of over £60, with every prospect of being considerably increased. In 1875, owing to the number of trustees not having been filled up in accordance with the requirements of the trust deeds, the Charity Commissioners appointed new trustees to administer the same. They are 5 in number, 3 of whom are the vicar and churchwardens for the time being.

Post Office at Mr. N. Langworthy's. Letters are received at 7 a.m., and are despatched at 7.20 p.m. viâ Totnes, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

HALWELL is a small village and parish, 7 miles S.E. by E. of Holsworthy, in Holsworthy union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Ashwater polling district of South Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Holsworthy rural deanery, and Black Torrington hundred. It had 243 inhabitants (126 males, 117 females) in 1871, living in 47 houses, on 3426 acres of land. The parish includes Stronds, Upcott, Stowford, Landhill, Foxhole, and other scattered farms. J. W. Harris, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of great part of the soil. The London and South-Western Branch Railway from Okehampton to Holsworthy will have a station at Summerstown, in this parish. The CHURCH (St. Peter) consisting of a small chancel, a nave, and a tower containing five bells, was restored in 1870 and is being now reconstructed and enlarged by the addition of north and south transepts. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £12 3*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £280, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Samuel Andrew, M.A., rural dean, who has a good house, built in 1849 at a cost of £600, and a glebe of 125 acres. The BAPTISTS have a chapel here. The SCHOOL BOARD for the united parishes of Halwell and Beaworthy was formed on April 23, 1875, and consists of the Rev. Samuel Andrew (chairman), and Messrs. Evan Tickle (vice-chairman), W. J. Harris, Elias Spry, and T. Harry. The school was erected in 1876 at a cost of £400, and will accommodate 75 children.

HARBERTON, a parish and small village, in the valley of the Cholwell brook, 2½ miles S.W. of Totnes, is in Totnes union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, and Coleridge hundred. The ancient parish, which had 1315 inhabitants (634 males, 681 females) in 1871, living in 283 houses, on 5755 acres of land, includes Harbertonford (now ecclesiastically separated from Harberton, with a church and endowment, the gift of the late Mrs. Anthony, of Longcourse), Larcombe, East and West Leigh-Betsford, and Great and Little Englebourne. The soil is very fertile. At Leigh is a remarkable rock of red colour, with many others scattered around of smaller size, quite differing in character from the rocks on which they rest, and supposed by geologists to belong to the great ice-age. The Valletorts anciently held the 'Barony' of Harberton; but in Domesday Book it appears there were several ancient manors here—viz., Great Englebourne and Herbne-ford. There are several good seats, such as that of Major Trist, of Tristford, R. Orlibart, Esq., Dundridge, J. Tayleur, Esq., Sandwell, J. B. Paige-Browne, Esq., Englebourne.

At Harbertonford is an old woollen factory, now occupied by Messrs. Churchward, of Buckfastleigh, and a little higher up the river Harbourne is the agricultural implement mill, called Hill Mills, belonging to Mr. John Knapman. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a fine specimen of the architecture of the 14th and 15th centuries, and has a lofty tower and six bells. It has undergone immense improvement during the present incumbent's vicariate. In 1861 the unsightly galleries were removed, the whole church reseated and repaired, and heated with hot water, the chancel paved with Minton's tiles, and the pulpit and screen restored. The pulpit, of stone, is very richly carved, gilded, and coloured, with statues of Apostles in niches. The screen, of wood, is in the same style, and was restored in 1872 by the late Mrs. W. Pendarves. The font is far older than any other part of the church, dating probably from A.D. 1000. Several painted windows have of late years been erected. The East window was given by the late Mrs. Anthony; the south chancel window by the late Chancellor Martin; an east window and south aisle by the officers of the 42nd Royal Highlanders, in memory of Major Farquharson, V.C. One on the north aisle was erected by Major Trist, in memory of Mrs. Wynne Pendarves; and one on the south by Mrs. Pendarves, to the memory of her father, Rev. Browne Trist. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £49 2*s.* 1*d.*, is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Bartholomew, B.A., rural dean of Totnes (instituted in 1860). The glebe consists of 74 acres, with good and picturesque residence. The tithes were commuted in 1847—the rectorial for £400, and the vicarial for £535, out of which the vicar has to pay £80 to the church at Harbertonford.

There are National Schools at both Harberton and Harbertonford—that at Harberton was rebuilt by public subscription in 1872; that at Harbertonford, in 1849, when Richard Browne, Esq., of Englebourne, gave a house for the use of the master. The Nonconformists have two chapels at Harbertonford. The Parish Lands, &c., which have been long held by trustees, comprise several houses and cottages, and 18 acres of land, called Cockwells, which latter lets for about £35 per annum; a blacksmith's shop, with house, garden, and orchard, lets for £8, which was left by William Husbon for the benefit of the poor about 1650. In the village is a range of almshouses, for ten people, left by Henry Wyse, 1680. There are 2 closes of land in the parish of Hemyock, charged with the sum of 50*s.* which is equally divided annually among the inmates. Mr. Sealey, of Bridgwater, is bound to keep the premises in repair. The founder also charged the same estate with an annuity of 40*s.* for the poor. Among the old benefactors to the poor are: W. N. Vootton, 5*s.*; Risdon's gift of £4; John & Richard Morrish, £1; H. Shillibear, £1; John Sparke, 13*s.* 4*d.*

HARFORD parish, which includes part of the village of Ivybridge, is in Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, Plympton rural deanery, and Ermington hundred. It had 171 inhabitants (90 males, 81 females) in 1871, living in 27 houses, on 2050 acres of land. James J. MacAndrew, Esq., is lord of the manor, and he, Lord Blachford, and Mr. Chalker-Pearse are the principal owners of the soil. Stowford, the residence of Miss Rivers, was purchased of the Crown by John Williams, in Henry VIII's time, whose family held it until about 1760, when it passed to the Saverys of Modbury. The CHURCH is an ancient structure, which has been partially restored during the last ten years, and is now undergoing complete restoration. An organ was erected in 1874 by the late rector. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £11 14*s.* 4½*d.*, and now at about £250, with residence, is in the alternate patronage of Lord Blachford and the present rector, and incumbency of the Rev. A. P. Bellamy, who has a good residence and 50 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1838 for £185 a year. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL is noticed with Ivybridge.

HARPFORD is a parish and scattered village in the picturesque valley of the river Otter, 3½ miles N.W. of Sidmouth, and 10½ miles E. by S. of Exeter. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Bowd (or Bowood), Southerton and Burrow, each about a mile from the church, is in Honiton union and county court district, Ottery petty sessional division, East Budleigh hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery rural deanery. It had 258 inhabitants (131 males, 127 females) in 1871, living in 53 houses, on 1518 acres of land. Harpford Wood contains about 180 acres, and exhibits some picturesque scenery formed by the hills of Ottery and Sidmouth. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are lords of the manor and owners of a great part of the parish; and the rest belongs to Messrs. Henry and George Peppin, the Hon. Mark Rolle, and a few smaller owners. The manor was anciently held by the noble family of Dinham, and their old mansion, now a farm-house called Court Place, is traditionally said to have been the county gaol, before its removal to Bicton. The CHURCH (St. Nicholas) is a venerable fabric, consisting of nave, chancel, south aisle, and a tower containing three bells. It has a wagon roof which has some curious carving. The church was appropriated in 1205 to the Abbey of St. Michael de Monte, and afterwards to Syon monastery. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £18 11*s.* 3*d.*, and in 1831 at £239, with that of Venn-Ottery annexed to it, is in the patronage of the Hon. Mark Rolle, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Edward Littledale, M.A., who has a good residence, and 16 acres of glebe. The vicarial tithes were commuted in 1840 for £146 15*s.*, and the great tithes for £130 15*s.* per annum. The latter are now held by G. N. Maule, Esq. This parish is united with Aylesbeare and Venn-Ottery as a School Board district (see Aylesbeare).

LETTERS by foot post are received at 8.30 a.m., viâ Ottery St. Mary, which is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX in the Church wall, cleared at 5.15 p.m., week days only. Tipton (1 mile distant) is the nearest Railway Station.

HARTLAND, a small decayed market town, is situated near a rivulet, 13 miles W. by S. of Bideford, and 2 miles from the sea, about the middle of that north-west corner of Devon which juts out into the Bristol Channel, at Bideford Bay, opposite Lundy Island. Its parish is in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Hartland hundred, and rural deanery. It had 1871 inhabitants (929 males, 942 females) in 1871, living in 394 houses, on 16,700 acres. Hartland parish includes the hamlets of Millford, Meddon, Cheristow, Elmscott, Eddystone, and Philham, and the village of Stoke, from 1 to 2 miles west of the town. In old documents a borough called Harton is said to have been within this parish. There is a quay at Stoke, on the western coast, where corn, &c. is exported, and coal, limestone, &c. are imported. Hartland had a grant for a market every Tuesday, in 1280, but it has been obsolete more than sixty years. It has still two annual fairs, on the Wednesday in Easter Week, and September 25. This high and bleak parish is bounded on the south by some boggy heights, where the rivers Torridge and Tamar have their sources; and on the west by Hartland Point, called by Ptolemy the Promontory of Hercules, and by Camden, Harty Point. There is a small pier at the Point, near which fishing vessels find good shelter from south-westerly winds, under the rocky eminences which skirt the shore. Sir George Stucley, Bart., is lord of the manor, and at the court leet and baron a portreeve and other officers are appointed. Daniel Dennis Carter, Esq., William Chope, Esq., Richard Chope, Esq., James and John Haynes, Esqrs., and others, have estates in the parish. HARTLAND ABBEY, the seat of Colonel William Lewis Stucley, stands near Stoke village, and the church, in the narrow vale, whose sloping sides are richly mantled with hanging woods and form a spacious deer park, through which a rivulet winds westward to the sea, about a mile below. This abbey, called in ancient writings the Monastery of St. Nectan, was founded by Githa, wife of Earl Godwin, for canons secular; but in the reign of Henry II., Geoffrey de Dinant, then lord of the manor, consented that they should be changed into canons regular, and gave them the church of Stoke Nectan, now the parish church. At the dissolution of the abbey, its revenues were valued at £326 13*s.* 2½*d.* per annum. Its site was granted, with the manor in 1545, to William Abbott, and afterwards passed by heiresses to the Lutterrells and Orchards. The mansion was nearly all rebuilt about the year 1800 by the late Paul Orchard, Esq., and includes the site and some portions of the ancient abbey, the cloisters now forming the basement story of the east and west fronts. When making these improvements, several fragments of richly ornamented mouldings, and a monument of a crusader were dug up. The CHURCH (St. Nectan) stands more than a mile west of the town, on a lofty eminence near the sea, Stoke village, and the Abbey. It is a large and handsome building, consisting of a tower, a nave, two aisles, and a chancel; the latter of which is divided from the nave by a richly ornamented screen. The church contains several stained glass windows, which have been added by the Stucley family. It was repaired and beautified in 1849–50, at the cost of about £800. The Registers date from 1558. The advowson and the great tithes of the parish were purchased in 1615, by the founder of the Charter House, London, and settled as part of the endowment of that excellent institution. The advowson was purchased from the Charter House about thirty years ago by the late Thomas Chope, Esq., and given to his son, the Rev. T. H. Chope, B.A., who is now the patron and incumbent. The great tithes were commuted in 1842 for £560 per annum. The vicarage was valued in 1831 at only £97 per annum, and now at £220 a year, with £32 of Q.A.B., and 3½ acres of glebe.

The CHAPEL OF EASE (St. John) in Hartland Town, is a small structure, formerly the market house, but converted to its present use in 1839, at a cost of £400, raised by subscription. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was built in 1818, and reseated and refitted in 1871. In 1868 a cottage was altered into a schoolroom at an outlay of £60. Mr. Carter left by will, in 1837, a cottage, the rent of which was to augment the minister's salary, but the then tenant was to remain in possession for life; his life interest has, however, recently been purchased by the trustees of the chapel for £20. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel in the village, erected in 1873, at an expense of £250; one at Eddystone; and a third on the turnpike road near the boundary of the parishes of Hartland and Clovelly. The WESLEYANS have a chapel in the village, and one at Millford. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on August 26, 1874, and consists of Mr. D. H. Congdon (chairman), Mr. Rd. Prust (vice-chairman), and Messrs. Littlejohns, Blackmore, Haynes, Hogg, and Cleverdon. Mr. T. Braund is clerk. A new School was built in 1877, at a total cost, including furniture, &c., of £1300, and has accommodation for 126 boys and girls (mixed), and 80 infants.

The Church Lands, which have been vested in trust from an early period for the use of the church, comprise a farm of 54A. 3R. 36P. at West Staddon, and a farm of 16A. 2R. 39P., and a house and garden at Hartland, let for about £44 per annum, which is carried to the churchwarden's account. Four small dwellings for paupers have been partitioned off from the two church houses. An almshouse for three poor widows was founded by William Mill, in 1618, and is supposed to have been endowed with 1A. 3R. 8P. of land let for £4, which is applied with the poor rates. Adjoining the almshouse is a building which was formerly the parish workhouse. In 1812 Paul Orchard left for the poor parishioners £700 Three per Cent. Consols, producing £21 a year, and £334 14*s.* 7*d.* Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, producing £10 a year, and directed the dividends of the former to be distributed in coals or other fuel, and the dividends of the latter in bread.

Besides the above, the poor have the benefits of a lying-in charity, a clothing, and a blanket club; Col. Orchard's benefaction of coal and flour; and £3 a year, given in fuel, left by the Rev. Thomas Hooper Morrison in 1824. There is also a Parish Library of 200 volumes, and a Cottage and Garden Society, founded by the Rev. W. W. Martyn and the late W. Rowe, Esq., for the encouragement of industry among cottagers, and also of knitting and sewing. The show takes place on the last Thursday in July in every year. In the parish documents is an old paper, dated March 17, 1634, 'being a precept of Sir Thomas Drewe, Sheriff of Devon, to the constables of Hartland, and to William Atkinson, Charles Yeo, and Lawrence Deyman, "collectors appoynted by me for his Majestie's service." "The persons," he states, "thereunder named, do obstynately and rebelliously refuse to paye such reasonable sommes of money as hath bene by me assessed on them for and towards the advancement of his Majesty's service, in getting foorth of shippinge for the better safeguard of his Majesty's subjects against robbers, and pyrates both of sea and land. . . . to the dishartinage of his Majestie's lovinge subjectes and evill example of others, who may thereby take encouragement to adventure the like rebellious and obstinate refusal."' Among the nine who thus took their stand against unconstitutional measures, were Thomas Cooke, assessed for £3 6*s.* 8*d.*, and John Lapthorne, 12*s.* Among the papers is also a printed proclamation of Charles II., dated August 10, 1670, for the collection of moneys to redeem Christian captives in Turkey.

POST, MONEY ORDER, and TELEGRAPH OFFICE at Mr. John Howard's. Letters are received at 10 a.m., and despatched at 4 p.m. week days, and 3 p.m. Sundays, viâ Bideford.

CONVEYANCE—The Bude coach passes Hartland Cross to and from Bideford daily in the summer, and every alternate day in the winter

CARRIERS—Thomas Colwill and John Cook to Bideford, Tues., Thurs., and Sat.

HATHERLEIGH, pleasantly situated on the banks of a rivulet, about a mile S. of the river Torridge 8 miles N.N.W. of Okehampton, 29 miles W.N.W. of Exeter, and 16 miles S.S.E. of Bideford, is a small ancient market town. It is the head of a petty sessional division and polling district, and is in Okehampton union and county court district, Black Torrington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Okehampton rural deanery. The parish had 1684 inhabitants (795 males, 889 females) in 1871, living in 324 houses, on 7048 acres of land. The parish includes a moor of 430 acres; and Stapleford, Fishleigh, Upcott, and other scattered farms. Joseph Lang Oldham, Esq., is lord of the manor of Hatherleigh, which formed part of the endowment of Tavistock

Abbey, and was afterwards held by the Arscotts and Molesworths. The manor of Fishley, which belonged to the same Abbey, was afterwards held by the Yeo and Darke families. J. L. Oldham, Esq., Mrs. Veale, Lord Portman, J. M. Woollcombe, Esq., and many others, own the freehold estates in the parish. The town suffered severely from fire about forty years ago; but most of the houses were soon afterwards rebuilt, and the principal street much improved. Hatherleigh Moor, comprising about 430 acres, is a short distance from the town, and was given to the poor, as follows:—'I, John O'Gaunt, do give, and do grant, unto Hatherleigh poor, Hatherleigh Moor, from this time forth for evermore.' * The water from a well on this moor, called St. John's Well, was formerly used at baptisms. A memorial to Lieut.-Colonel Morris, C.B., late of Fishleigh in this parish, who had distinguished himself at Balaclava, was erected by subscription in 1860 on the most elevated part of this moor. Freestone is obtained in the parish, and there was formerly a woollen manufactory here. The Hundred Court, formerly held here for the recovery of debts under 40*s.*, has given place to the County Courts. A new Market House was built in 1840 at the cost of £280, and the market now held on Tuesday was then re-established, after being disused more than half a century. Two public rooms were built by a number of shareholders in 1821. Four cattle fairs are held here on May 21, June 22, September 4, and November 8, or on the Tuesday following when any of these dates fall on a Saturday, Sunday or Monday. HATHERLEIGH HIGHWAY BOARD meets quarterly; Mr. John Pearse is clerk, and Mr. F. D. Drake surveyor. The POLICE COURT, in South Street, is a fine stone structure, with large Court-room, where PETTY SESSIONS are held on the last Tuesday in the month, and the magistrates usually sitting here are Lieut.-Colonel Thomson, Lieut.-Colonel Arnold, and J. Oldham, E. Oldham, W. H. Holley, W. H. B. Coham, and H. Woollcombe, Esqs. R. Fulford, Esq., is their clerk. The GAS WORKS were established in 1868 by a company with a capital of £1200, but they now belong to Mr. E. Angel. Gas is supplied at the charge of 7*s.* 6*d.* per 1000 cubic feet, and there are about twenty public lamps. The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist) consists of chancel, nave and north and south aisles, and western tower containing six bells, and in 1864 a clock with chimes for every three hours was added, at the cost of £130 raised by subscription. In the church are remnants of its ancient and beautiful screen; and in the north aisle is an interesting monument erected by Anne, daughter of Henry Hurding de Long Briddy, Dorsetshire, Esq. A window at the eastern end of the north aisle was filled in 1875 with rich stained glass, executed by Clayton and Bell, and representing in the centre Christ as the Good Shepherd, and in the side lights the Prodigal Son, the Good Samaritan, the Ten Virgins, and the Merchant seeking Goodly Pearls. It is in memory of Frances Elizabeth, wife of J. Oldham, Esq., of Strawbridge. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £20, and now at £241, is in the patronage of J. Clayfield-Ireland, Esq., but the incumbency is at present vacant. There is a vicarage-house, which was rebuilt by a late incumbent, the Rev. Samuel Feild, M.A. The glebe is 51 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1841—the vicarial for £224 10*s.*, and the rectorial for £335 10*s.* The latter were formerly held by Tavistock Abbey, and now belong to the descendants of the late Dr. Boughton. The PRESBYTERIANS had a Meeting House here as early as 1715, and there is now in the town a BAPTIST CHAPEL, erected about 1830 at the cost of £200, as well as a BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on April 29, 1874, and now consists of Messrs. W. Smith (chairman), W. D. Blatchford, W. Bartlett, J. Glass, and J. Essery. Mr. John Pearse is their clerk. The Board School was built in 1874–5, at a cost of £2000, to hold 206 children; and the old National School is now used as a Church of England Sunday School. The poor have £7 10*s.* yearly in three rent-charges, left by Walter Bennett, Roger Walter, and Joseph Gliddon. For distribution in clothing they have the dividends of £156 2*s.* 10*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £82 left by John Lethbridge and Richard Lucas. The interest of £100, left by Charles Luxmore in 1793, is applied in schooling poor children. The LITERARY INSTITUTION, established in 1852, has about sixty members. Mr. Thomas Honey is secretary and Mr. H. Southcott treasurer. There are four benefit societies, besides a lodge of Oddfellows. A Religious Library was formed in 1808. The Rev. Jasper Mayne, D.D., chaplain to Charles II., and known as a preacher and dramatic writer, was born here in 1604. Bishop Lacey is stated to have granted an indulgence of forty days to all 'true' penitents who should contribute to the repairs of Hatherleigh Bridge.

POST, MONEY ORDER, TELEGRAPH and GOVERNMENT ANNUITY OFFICE and SAVINGS BANK are at Mr. Henry Southcott's, Bridge Street. Letters from all parts are received at 6.33 a.m. and despatched at 6.37 p.m.

HEANTON PUNCHARDON, a parish and a pleasant village on an eminence north of the Taw estuary, 4½ miles W.N.W. of Barnstaple, is in Barnstaple union and county court district, archdeaconry, and rural deanery, Braunton hundred and petty sessional division, and Northern division of the county. It had 516 inhabitants (243 males, 273 females) in 1871, living in 105 houses, on 3020 acres of land, including the hamlets of West Ashford, Chivenor, and Wrafton. The greater part of the population is at Wrafton, where there is a station on the Ilfracombe branch of the London and South Western Railway. The manor of Heanton was formerly held by the Punchardon family, and afterwards by the Beaumonts, whose heiress carried it in marriage to the Bassetts, from whom it was purchased, in 1853, by the present owner, Sir Frederick Martin Williams, Bart., M.P. He is also owner of all the parish except a small portion belonging to C. H. Williams, Esq., and a few acres belonging to Combmartin School. He has a commodious residence, called Heanton House, erected in 1876. Heanton Court, now a farmhouse, was formerly the seat of the Bassetts, and stands near the estuary, forming a conspicuous object from Barnstaple Bridge. The CHURCH (St. Augustine), consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower containing six bells, has its chancel and nave separated by a richly-carved oak screen. In the church are two brasses bearing the dates, respectively, of 1651 and 1755, and in the chancel is the finely-carved tomb of one of the Coffin family, surmounted by a rich canopy. Here are also many mural tablets, belonging to the Bassett, Ballyman, and other families. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £22 7*s.* 11*d.*, and now at £431, is in the patronage of Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Francis Bassett, who has 38 acres of glebe and a large and handsome residence, built in 1841. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £406 a year. There was formerly an INDEPENDENT CHAPEL in the village, but it was lately converted into cottages. A SCHOOL BOARD for this and the adjoining parish of Ashford was formed in 1874, and now consists of C. H. Williams, Esq. (chairman), and Messrs. Peter Tarr (vice-chairman), William Martin, George Berry, and James Graddon. Mr. Huxtable is the clerk. The Board erected, in 1876, a handsome school, with teachers' residence, on the Barnstaple Road, at a cost of £800, which will accommodate 115 children. The Church Lands, &c., have been held from an early period for the use of the church, and comprise 3 houses and about 3½ acres of land, now let for £14 10*s.* a year, besides another house let on lease. The poor have the dividends of £449 1*s.* 5*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with the gifts of John and Francis Bassett and other donors. A Poor House is occupied, rent free, by five families.

POST OFFICE at Mr. John Sanders', Wrafton. Letters are despatched at 6.22 p.m. viâ Barnstaple; but Braunton is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office.

HEMPSTONE, LITTLE. (See Little Hempstone.)

HEMYOCK, or Hemiock, is a parish and considerable village, having a station on the Culm Valley branch of the Great Western Railway. It is pleasantly situated on the south side of the river Culm, in the picturesque valley near Culmbridge, 5 miles S. of Wellington, and 9 miles N.E. of Cullompton. The parish, which gives name to a hundred, is in Wellington union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. It had 983 inhabitants (497 males, 486 females) in 1871, living in 206 houses, on 5437 acres of land. The rateable value of the parish is £5338 7*s.* 2*d.* The villages of Barrowhill (in the town tithing), Madford (in Madford tithing), Ashculm and Pennycross (in Ashculm tithing), and the tithing of Culmdavey, are all in this parish. Culmdavey is on the opposite acclivities of the valley, adjoining the lofty Black Down hills and the borders of Somersetshire. The principal owners of the soil are Captain Follett, and Messrs. E. Farrant, George Barton, Mark Matthews, Thomas Hine, and James Bowerman. The manor of Hemyock, part of the demesne of the crown at Domesday Survey, was soon afterwards possessed by the ancient family of Hidon, who had a castle here, which was used as a garrison and prison by the Parliamentarians in the 17th century. There are still some remains of four of the towers and a gateway of this castle, which passed, with the manor, from the Hidons to the Dinhams, and was purchased by the late General Simcoe. The manor of Culmdavey is the property of Captain Follett, and was formerly held by the Widworthy, Wogan, Corbett, Bowerman, and other families. The CHURCH (St. Mary) was rebuilt, in 1846-7, by subscription and rates, aided by grants from the Incorporated and Exeter Diocesan Societies. The east window is filled with stained glass, containing representations of scenes of the life of our Lord; and in the church is a Saxon font, of Purbeck stone. In connection with the old building was a chantry, founded by Peter Uvedale, and endowed with £10 a year. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £32 0s. 7½d., and now at £844, with the curacy of Culmdavey annexed, in the patronage of Edward Wm. Leyborne Popham, Esq., of Littlecote, Wiltshire, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward William Leyborne Popham, B.A., who has a good residence, embowered in trees, and a glebe of 100 acres. The tithes were commuted in 1842-3 for £700 a year. There is a chapel at Culmdavey with 90 sittings, which was restored in 1850. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL was built by subscription, in 1838, at a cost of over £300, on a site given by the late Mr. Robert Wood. The BAPTIST CHAPEL was built by subscription, in 1866, at a cost of £600, on a site given by the late Mr. James Lock, and will accommodate 300 persons; attached to the chapel is a burial-ground, also the gift of Mr. Lock. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on March 16, 1875, and consists of the Rev. Edward W. Leyborne Popham (chairman), and Messrs. E. Lutley (vice-chairman), Henry and William Farrant, and J. Lawrence. Mr. Edward North, of Ashculm, is clerk. The Board School, with teacher's residence, was built in 1877, at a cost of £1300, to accommodate 156 scholars. The poor parishioners have 10 acres of land, called Hurcombe, purchased in 1651 with £100, left by Peter Holway and other donors. They have also two yearly rent-charges, viz., 20s., left by Charles Ford, in the 25th of Elizabeth, out of Strood and Kean's meadows; and 5s., left by Nicholas Lacke, out of land at Dunkeswell. Nicholas Marke, at an early period, charged Ashcombe estate with the yearly payment of £5 for apprenticing poor children. This parish has a share of Waldron's Charity for schooling poor children, as noticed with Clayhidon, HENNOCK parish, which includes the hamlets of Knighton, or Chudleigh Knighton, and Warmhill, is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge hundred and petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 887 inhabitants (447 males, 440 females) in 1871, living in 177 houses, on 3469 acres of land. Hennock village is situated on an eminence overlooking the Teign valley, 3 miles W.N.W. of Chudleigh. Lead, copper, tin and iron ore mines were formerly worked in this parish, but they are now closed. Pipe and potter's clay is found at Knighton. The parish is mostly in the same manors as Bovey Tracey; but the soil is chiefly freehold, belonging to R. Pulsford, Esq., Sir L. Palk, Lord Exmouth, the Duke of Somerset, and others. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a large ancient edifice in the Early Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, south porch, and tower containing four bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1875 at a cost of £1400, raised by subscription, T. Wills, Esq., of Kelly, giving £1000. Its ancient Norman font, and the holy-water stoup in the porch, still remain; and there is a very old oak rood screen, one of the most beautiful screens in Devonshire. A window in the south aisle has been filled with stained glass in memory of the late George Wills, Esq., of Kelly. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B.

at £16, and now at £570, in the patronage of Mr. R. Riley and Miss White, and incumbency of the Rev. John Fitzwalter Nagle-Gillman, M.D., who has a good residence, and a glebe of 20 acres. The tithes were commuted in 1838—the vicarial for £233, and the rectorial for £168. The latter are held by the Corporation of Exeter, as the advowson of a city lectureship. KNIGHTON CHAPEL OF EASE is a neat structure of flint and limestone in the Early English style, and was built by subscription and grants, in 1841–2, at the cost of £900. The church has been endowed with £1000, and the Rev. P. Sandilands, of Newton, is the curate. An ancient Episcopal chapel, at Knighton, was turned into a barn many years ago. The WESLEYANS have a chapel in the parish. The poor have an acre of land, given by John Stooke, in 1692, and the interest of £5, left by Elizabeth Gribble in 1726. The School Board was formed on March 13, 1875, and consists of Lt.-Colonel Vaughton (chairman), Joseph S. Bawdon, Esq. (vice-chairman), the Rev. John F. Nagle-Gillman, Mr. G. Stooke, and Mr. R. Northcott. Mr. W. Whitcombe is the clerk. The Board uses the old parish school, which is about to be enlarged, the tender (£355 10s.) of Mr. Mardon, Bovey Tracey, being accepted.

HIGH BICKINGTON, 8 miles E. by N. of Torrington, and N.W. of Chulmleigh, is a parish in Torrington union and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division and rural deanery, Northern division of the county, North Tawton hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. The parish includes North and South Hele, Stowford, and other scattered farms. It had formerly a market every Wednesday, which was discontinued about 1725, and it still has a cattle fair on the Monday after May 14. The parish is in several manors, and belongs to Mrs. Pyncombe's Trustees, the Hon. Mark Rolle, Captain Shepherd, and others. Risdon says Athelstan founded a church here, and endowed it with 2 hides of land. The CHURCH is an ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, and tower containing six bells, and was restored in 1873 at a cost of £500. The church was newly floored, and reseated; the gallery was removed, and many new windows inserted. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £39 7*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £532, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Alfred Langdon who has a pleasant residence and 157A. 3R. 34P. of glebe. The BAPTISTS have a chapel here, and the poor have the interest of £40 left by Joshua Tucker in 1721. The parish school has £50 a year from Mrs. Pyncombe's Charity.

HIGH BRAY, a parish and pleasant village on the eastern acclivity of the Bray valley, 6 miles N. by W. of South Molton, is in Barnstaple union, county court district and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division, Sherwill hundred and deanery, and Northern division of the county. It had 250 inhabitants (143 males, 107 females) in 1871, living in 50 houses, on 4273 acres. It includes part of Brayford hamlet, and a number of scattered farms. Sir T. Dyke Acland, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor, and he and the Rev. J. W. Bryant, George Radley, Esq., and Caius College, Cambridge, are the principal owners of the soil. The CHURCH is an ancient structure in the Perpendicular style, and has a tower containing four bells. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £14 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £300, in the patronage of Sir Thomas D. Acland, Bart., M.P., and incumbency of the Rev. Walter J. Edmonds, who has a neat small residence, and nearly 64 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £360 per annum. The SCHOOL was rebuilt in 1871, at the expense of Sir T. D. Acland, Bart., M.P. In 1703 Jacob Sloly left two annuities—namely, 36*s.* for the poor, and £3 12*s.* for schooling poor children. The poor had also the interest of £14 left by R. HIGH HAMPTON, or Highampton, is a parish and small village seated on an eminence 4 miles W. of Hatherleigh, and is in Okehampton union and county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Hatherleigh polling district of South Devon, Black Torrington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Okehampton rural deanery. It had 361 inhabitants (178 males, 183 females) in 1871, living in 70 houses, on 3039 acres of land. The Venerable Archdeacon Woollcombe is lord of the manor, but the trustees of Colonel Fane, John Reddaway, and Lord Clinton are the principal owners of the soil. Burdon, now owned by J. Reddaway, Esq., had been in the family of the Burdons since the time of Richard I. The CHURCH (Holy Cross) is a small structure, which was entirely rebuilt in 1833, except the ancient Norman porch. The interior has been restored during the last few years. The Register dates from 1654. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 19*s.* 4½*d.*, and now at £212, is in the patronage of Archdeacon Woollcombe and incumbency of the Rev. George Woollcombe, M.A., who has a convenient residence about a mile from the church. The glebe is 140 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1844 for £197 10*s.* a year. There is a chapel belonging to the BIBLE CHRISTIANS. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1834.

HIGHLEY ST. MARY, or Hightleigh, formerly an extra-parochial farm and manor, is now a civil parish in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, Tiverton West rural deanery, and Witheridge hundred. It had 22 inhabitants (12 males, 10 females), living in 5 houses, on 370 acres of land, and adjoins Oakford parish and the borders of Somerset, 4 miles W. by N. of Bampton. It had anciently a chapel, and is united to Oakford parish for school purposes. (See Oakford.) It belongs to the Hon. Mark Rolle, and is occupied by Mr. Thomas Hurley.

HIGHWEEK. (See Newton Abbot.)

HITTISLEIGH is a hilly parish, 4 miles W.S.W. of Yeoford Junction Railway Station, 8 miles W.S.W. of Crediton, and 13 miles W. by N. of Exeter. It is in Crediton union and county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Crockernwell polling district of East Devon, Wonford hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. It had 160 inhabitants (85 males, 75 females) in 1871, living in 31 houses, on 1155 acres of land. The present rector is lord of the manor, which was anciently held by the Talbots, Longdons, and Shilstons, but the soil is all freehold, and belongs to W. J. Kendall, Esq., J.P., T. Norrish, Esq., Mr. J. Hole, J. W. Read, Esq., the Rev. J. H. C. Hobkirk, and Mr. John Haydon. Large quantities of navy timber are procured from this district, which affords some of the best fox covers in the county. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) has a nave, chancel, and north aisle, and tower with three bells, one of which is historically famed as the oldest bell in the diocese. (See 'Ellacomb's Campanology.') It was reseated in 1839–40. The tower is built of solid blocks of granite, and the south aisle has a finely carved roof. The rectory is held by the Rev. John Hammond Codrington Hobkirk, M.A., of Gunstone House, Crediton, the tithe rent-charge being commuted at £85 per annum, with a glebe of 40 acres, but there is no parsonage house. This parish, as the head of a united district, has the largest country SCHOOL BOARD in the county of Devon, constituted on September 30, 1874. The district consists of Hittisleigh (5 members), and Bow or Nymet Tracey (2 members), with Crediton (2 members) and Drewsteignton (2 members) contributories. The members are the Rev. J. C. Hobkirk (chairman), Andrew Rowe, Esq. (vice-chairman), the Revs. Richard Chichester and Edwin H. Bollard, and Messrs. William Drew, John Haydon, Andrew Knapman, Samuel Kenshole, John Vile, Samuel Tozer, and John H. Dymond. Mr. D. Haydon, of Hittisleigh, is clerk. The BOARD SCHOOLS, to accommodate 105 children, were built in 1874, at the cost of £1000, and are a model of architecture. They were designed by R. M. Fulford, Esq.

HOCKWORTHY is a parish, and a small scattered village, near the borders of Somerset, about 4 miles from Burlescombe and Venn Cross Railway Stations, 7 miles W.S.W. of Wellington, and 8 miles N.E. of Tiverton. It is in Tiverton union and county court district, Sampford Peverell polling district of North Devon, Bampton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry and Tiverton East rural deanery. The parish, which includes the small hamlets of Stapleeross and Lea, had 371 inhabitants (182 males, 189 females) in 1871, living in 67 houses, on 2526 acres of land. In the parish are limestone, &c. quarries. The rectorial tithes and the tithes of Hockford (112 acres) formerly belonged to Canonleigh Abbey; but most of the former have been sold to the landowners, and the latter belongs to C. A. W. Troyte, Esq., together with other farms in the parish, and the old manor house called Court Hall. The other freeholders are the Rev. — Pearse, W. Dester, Esq., W. N. Row, Esq., Mrs. Hawkins, Mrs. Quartley, and the Rev. W. J. Newman. The CHURCH (St. Simon and St. Jude) is a neat and substantial structure in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch and tower containing three bells. The tower was rebuilt in 1848, and the remaining portion of the edifice in 1863–5. The cost of the latter was about £1500. The east and the south-east chancel windows are filled with stained glass, designed by Hardman; the former, a triplet, depicts the Nativity, Crucifixion, and the Resurrection, and is in memory of the late patron of the living, William Newman, Esq.; the latter, illustrating the Preaching of John the Baptist, and the Building of the Temple, is in remembrance of Charles Durnford Greenway, Esq. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £288, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William James Newman, M.A. The vicarage house was built about thirty years ago by the Rev. T. H. Britton, and has been considerably added to by the present vicar, the Rev. William James Newman, M.A. The total cost has been about £3000. The glebe comprises 67 acres of good land, and the vicarial tithes were commuted in 1842 for £205 10*s.* a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built about 1860 by the present vicar, at a cost of about £550. The poor have 34*s.* a year out of Thornlands, left by Peter Sharland. The late Dr. Troyte bequeathed £20 a year to the parish—£10 towards the support of the Church of England School, and £10 to be given in beef to the poor at Christmas.

HOLBETON, a parish and large straggling village, on an eminence, west of the Erme estuary, 4 miles S.W. by W. of Modbury, 6 miles from Ivybridge, is in Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Ermington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry and Plympton rural deanery. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Mothecombe, Creacombe, and Ford, had 953 inhabitants (481 males, 472 females) in 1871, living in 210 houses. It has an area of 4748 acres, including 125 acres of water. Lime is burnt here, and barges of 70 tons come up the estuary. Henry Bingham Mildmay, Esq., is lord of the manor, and has a large and elegant mansion here, called FLETE, which was long the seat of the ancient family of Hele, one of whom was created a baronet in 1627. This branch of the family became extinct in 1716, when the estate passed to the Bulteels. Mr. Mildmay married a daughter of the late J. C. Bulteel, Esq., by Lady Elizabeth, daughter of the late Earl Grey. The mansion was built in the reign of Elizabeth, but its two principal fronts were altered in the castellated style, about fourteen years ago, by the late J. C. Bulteel, Esq., who made other extensive improvements, one of which is a large and splendid picture gallery, well stored with the works of ancient and modern artists. MEMBLAND HALL, formerly the seat of Robert Robertson, Esq., subsequently belonged to J. D. Lewis, Esq., and is now the residential property of Edward Charles Baring, Esq., who has erected there a mansion. At one time it belonged to the Rev. Sir Pp. Perring, Bart., and was the occasional residence of his family, one of whom, Sir John Perring, was Lord Mayor of London in 1803, and was created a baronet in 1808. His uncle purchased the estate of the Bulteels, and rebuilt the house. Mr. Holland, the Rev. W. J. Pinwill, and several smaller owners have estates in the parish. MOTHECOMBE HOUSE, at the mouth of the river Erme, is also the property of H. B. Mildmay, Esq. Pamflete, a charming place, is the residence of John Bulteel, Esq. The CHURCH (All Saints) is a large and handsome cruciform structure, with a tower containing six bells, and crowned by a spire. It is mostly in the Early Perpendicular style, and in the south aisle is a canopied monument, with a recumbent effigy of one of the Heles and several kneeling figures. The chancel of the church was very tastefully restored by private subscription about ten years ago. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £24 1*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £300, is in the patronage of the Crown and incumbency of the Rev. Courtenay Bulteel, who has 3A. 1R. 36P. of glebe, and a house, rebuilt in 1863. The tithes were commuted in 1839—the vicarial for £340 15*s.*, and the rectorial for £499 a year. Of the latter £340 belongs to H. B. Mildmay, Esq., £96 to Michael Williams, Esq., and the rest to four smaller impropriators. The rent of an acre of land, and a yearly rent-charge of 18*s.*, are applied in repairing the church. Here are two small CHAPELS belonging to the Independents and Wesleyans. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on November 7, 1871, and now consists of John Bulteel, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. C. J. C. Bulteel (vice-chairman and clerk), and Messrs. J. S. Ford, H. B. Mildmay and Isaac Pearce. The Board School was built in 1872 by W. F. Splatt, Esq. (the late chairman), by whom it was presented to the Board. There is accommodation for 120 children.

HOLCOMBE BURNELL parish, about 4 miles W. by S. of Exeter, is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. Its parish had 214 inhabitants (118 males, 96 females) in 1871, living in 44 houses, on 1836 acres of land, and includes part of the village of Longdown, on the high road from Exeter to Moreton Hampstead; the remainder of Longdown village is in Dunsford and Alphington parishes. Col. Walrond, of New Court, Topsham, and E. Byrom, Esq., own all the parish, except the glebe. At Domesday Survey it belonged to Tetbald Fitz-Berners, or Berneru, and it passed to the Sawl, Dennis, Baker, Champernowne, and other families. CULVER HOUSE, the handsome seat and property of Edward Byrom, Esq., was built in 1830, by the late Rev. Richard Stephens, late sub-dean of Exeter. It has been considerably improved by the present owner, and is delightfully situated about 5 miles W. by S. of Exeter; the high ground behind it has been very tastefully planted. PERRIDGE is a mansion and estate of 150 acres, adjoining this parish, but belonging to the parish of Kenn, from which it is distant 7 miles. This isolated estate is now the residence of Captain St. John Daubeny, and its inhabitants use Holcombe Church. The old manor house of this parish is occupied by a farmer. It was formerly a large mansion, built by Sir Thomas Dennis, in the reign of Henry VIII. An ancient chapel, in an adjoining field, was taken down by Edward Champernowne, Esq., in 1700. The CHURCH (St. John) was rebuilt (all but the tower), in 1843–4, at the cost of £610. The tower has five bells, and in the chancel is a very handsome Easter tomb, which was supposed to be an altar tomb of Sir Thomas Dennis, who was Lord Chancellor, and an ancestor of the late Lord Rolle. The chancel is very neat, and on its south side are two sedilia, handsomely carved and inscribed, to the memory of an aunt of the Rev. R. Stephens. An organ, which cost £120, has recently been added to the church. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 9*s.* 2*d.*, and in 1831 at £20, is endowed with all the tithes, which were commuted in 1842 for £145 a year. The glebe comprises 117 acres of poor land, and the vicarage house is a neat and pleasant residence, on a commanding situation, built in 1838, at the cost of £1000, and subsequently improved at various times by the present incumbent (the Rev. Henry Lovelace Houlditch, B.A.). The Bishop of Exeter is now patron of the living, it having passed to him at the death of the late prebendary of Holcombe, in Wells Cathedral. Here is a VOLUNTARY SCHOOL, sufficient for 48 children; and the parishioners had for many years the interest of £5, left by the late James Pitman, Esq., of Cutteridge, but which has ceased to be paid, the testator not having named from what source it was to arise.

HOLCOMBE-ROGUS parish is in Wellington union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Bampton hundred, Northern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton rural deanery. It had 743 inhabitants (392 males, 351 females) in 1871, living in 146 houses, on 3024 acres of land. The parish adjoins the Great Western Canal, and the borders of Somerset, 1¼ mile from Burlescombe Railway Station, 6 W.S.W. of Wellington and 8½ miles N.E. by E. of Tiverton. The rateable value of the parish is £5366 12*s.* 4*d.* Its land is generally fertile and hilly, and limestone is abundant. A market and fair granted to this parish in 1343 have long been obsolete. At Domesday Survey the manor was held by Rogo, or Rogus, under Baldwin the Sheriff. For some centuries it was the seat of the Bluett family. William Carew Rayer, Esq., J.P., the present lord of the manor, and owner of most of the parish, resides at Holcombe Court, the ancient manor-house, which is in the Gothic style, with a tower, it having been purchased by his father in 1857 of P. H. Bluett, Esq. The west wing was taken down in 1845, and the rest of the mansion has lately been repaired. The CHURCH (All Saints) is a fine ancient Perpendicular structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, mortuary chapel, south porch, and embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The chancel was restored in 1877 at a cost of over £500 by the late vicar (Rev. W. Wills), and W. C. Rayer, Esq., as lay rectors, the woodwork being chiefly done by the former, and the stonework by the latter. A new reredos, by Mr. H. Hems, of Exeter, was given by Mr. and Mrs. Rayer. The restoration of the church is in contemplation, W. C. Rayer, Esq., having promised to bear half the expense. The north aisle has a fine old wagon roof. In the chancel is a splendid mural monument of the Bluett family, at the top of which are two figures, beautifully sculptured, and said to be exact likenesses of two of the family. In a chapel at the east end are two marble tombs, with recumbent effigies of four members of the Bluett family. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £10 10*s.* 2½*d.*, and now at £300, is in the patronage of W. C. Rayer, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John Pascoe Mayne. The impropriators of the great tithes are William C. Rayer, Esq., J.P., and I. Thornton West, Esq., which have been commuted for £220, and the vicarial for about £320 per annum. The glebe is 1½ acre, and the vicarage is a good residence. The parish has a small BAPTIST CHAPEL; and sends a girl to Uffculme Free School. The Rev. W. Wills left £300 invested by trustees in the 3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities (£319 3*s.*), the interest of which is given to the poor on December 28, the anniversary of the donor's birthday. There are two SCHOOLS in this parish—one a Charity School, on Dr. Bell's system, endowed by Mrs. Susannah Webber, in June 1823, with £1000, for the free education of twenty boys and thirty girls. The school was built out of the endowment. The other school has been erected by W. C. Rayer, Esq., and is supported by him. By a new scheme the twenty boys who are educated free have been transferred from the Charity School to that supported by W. C. Rayer, Esq., which is now for boys only. All the girls of the parish and the boys under six attend the Charity School, thirty of the girls being educated free.

HOLLACOMBE, a small parish near the sources of the small river Claw, 2½ miles E. by S. of Holsworthy, is in Holsworthy union, county court district and petty sessional division, Holsworthy polling district of South Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Holsworthy rural deanery, and Black Torrington hundred. It had 92 inhabitants (51 males, 41 females) in 1871, living in 19 houses, on 1218 acres of land. The East Cornwall Banking Company, Henry Martin Harvey, Esq., the Rev. William W. Harvey, and the Rev. Charles B. Cooper, are the chief owners of the soil. The London and South Western Railway Company are constructing a branch from Okehampton to Holsworthy, where will be the nearest Railway Station. The CHURCH (St. Petrock) is a small, ancient structure of the Early English style of architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, and western tower, which latter fell down about six years ago, and has been substantially rebuilt by subscription. It is intended also to rebuild the church and chancel when sufficient funds can be raised. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £4 6*s.* 3*d.*, is in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. J. C. D. Yule, M.A., of Bradford. The tithes are commuted at £70 per annum. There is a glebe of 32 acres, let at £26 per annum with a portion of an estate in the parish of Bridgerule, purchased by endowment, and producing a rental of £12 per annum. The parsonage house is fitted only for the residence of the small farmers of the glebe.

HOLNE is a parish and small village on the south-western side of the Dart valley, 3½ miles W. of Ashburton, in Totnes union, county court district, Stanborough hundred, Teignbridge petty sessional division, and Totnes archdeaconry and rural deanery. The parish, which includes the hamlets of Michelcoombe and Stoke, had 328 inhabitants (179 males, 149 females) in 1871, living in 70 houses, on 4197 acres of land. The hunting boxes called Holne Park and Holne Cottage are in this parish. Only about 1900 acres are cultivated, and the rest consists of about 400 acres of wood and 1900 acres of moorland in Holne Chase, which extends about two miles into Dartmoor Forest, amidst some of the most magnificent scenery in Devon, where the Dart is seen foaming over its rocky bed, between steep and shelving banks, and lofty, woody hills. Sir B. P. Wrey, Bart., owns most of the parish, and is lord of the manor, formerly held by the Audleys and Bourchiers, and has a hunting seat here, called Holne Chase House, in a singularly romantic situation. Thomas Hamlyn, William Waycott, and a few others have small freeholds here. The CHURCH was built in the 13th century, and has an embattled tower and five bells. It was renovated and beautified in 1849–50, and has a handsome pulpit and screen. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8 5*s.* 5*d.*, and in 1831 at £195, is in the patronage of Major-General Birdwood, and incumbency of the Rev. John Gill, M.A. The vicarage house is a neat residence, and the glebe is 26½ acres. The tithes were commuted in 1837, the vicarial for £192 11*s.*, and the rectorial for £152 11*s.* The latter belong to the patron. The Rev. Charles Kingsley was born here in 1819, his father being curate of this parish. The Church House is let for £19 a year. The poor have a small old house, and the dividends of £105 Reduced Three per Cents., given by the Rev. John Charter, in 1821. The Rev. Robert Bradford left 40*s.* a year for the poor, half to be given in money, and half in Bibles, but this charity has not been received during many years. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL, established in 1835.

HOLSWORTHY, a parish and small market town, pleasantly situated near the small river Deer and the Bude Canal, is 9 miles E. of Bude Haven, 14 miles W. by S. of Hatherleigh, and N. of Launceston Railway Station, 42 miles W. by N. of Exeter. It is in Barnstaple archdeaconry, and gives name to a union, county court district, petty sessional division, polling district and deanery, and includes the hamlets of Chelsworthy (or Chilsworthy), Staddon, and Chasty. The parish had 1645 inhabitants in 1871, living on 8836 acres of land. Holsworthy is 430 feet above sea level. The town is lighted with gas from works which were established in 1871, by Messrs. A. B. C. Coham, James Higgs, S. T. Mill, and T. L. Ash. Gas is supplied at a charge of 7*s*. 6*d*. per 1000 cubic feet. There are eight public lamps. The Bude Canal, which runs from Bude, in Cornwall, to Blagdon Wharf, 1 mile N. of Holsworthy, belongs to the Bude Harbour and Canal Company, and was cut in 1866, at a cost of £95,000. The Company's offices are at Exeter. A branch railway is constructing from Holsworthy to Meldon. The weekly market for corn, cattle, &c., which had been long held on Saturday, was changed to Wednesday about 56 years ago, but here is also a provision market on Saturday. St. Peter's fair is recognised in a record of the reign of Edward I., as having belonged to the lord of the manor from time immemorial. The present fairs were granted or confirmed by James I. and Charles I. Here are great markets for cattle, &c., on the Wednesday after Candlemas-day, and on the first Wednesday in November; and three fairs, on April 27, July 9, 10, and 11, and October 2. A Market House was erected in 1858 at an expense of £1000, and is held on lease. Earl Stanhope is lord of the manor, which anciently belonged to the baronial family of Brewer, and afterwards to the Chaworth, Paganell, Tracey, Holland, and other families. A portreeve and other officers are elected at the Court Leet and Baron. The chief landowners are Lord Stanhope, Sir N. R. F. Davie, W. H. B. Coham, Esq., and Mr. J. Higgs. In the Parliamentary war, Holsworthy was occupied for the King till February, 1646, when Sir Thomas Fairfax sent a party to take possession, after the victory of Torrington. On the north-west side of the town is a curious plantation of beech, called the Labyrinth. It covers half an acre, and the puzzle consists in getting into the centre, where there is a tree, with a seat under it.

HOLSWORTHY UNION comprises twenty parishes, &c., one of which (North Tamerton) is in Cornwall. The union, which is divided into five registration districts, had, in 1871, 9427 inhabitants, living in 1871 houses, and on 82,519 acres of land. There were 81 houses uninhabited and 3 building. In 1861 there were 9876 inhabitants living in 1988 houses. There were 15 blind persons; 5 deaf and dumb; 6 lunatics; 14 idiots or imbeciles, and 48 paupers in the workhouse. The WORKHOUSE was built in 1854, at a cost of £1400 on a site of 3 roods. It was enlarged in 1872 at the outlay of £400, by the addition of infectious wards. The Board of Guardians meets fortnightly. George Braund is clerk to union and to Highway and Sanitary Board and superintendent-registrar; Mr. and Mrs. John Beckly, are master and matron of the workhouse; Mr. T. Oliver, relieving officer; Mr. R. Banbury, sanitary inspector; Dr. Ash, medical officer of health; Messrs. Owen and Rouse, and Drs. Ash and Pearce, union medical officers; and Messrs. Sanders, Fry, Yelland, Cory, and Banbury, district registrars. The expenditure for the year ended March 25, 1878, was: common charges, £1064; police rate, £124; county rate, £136; sanitary rate, £35; and highways, £2269; exclusive of the Government grant, which was £200.

The following is an enumeration of the parishes, &c., in the union, showing their territorial extent, the number of inhabited houses and population, in 1871, and the rateable value of each place:—

PETTY SESSIONS for this division are held at the Court House on the third Thursday of every month, and the magistrates usually sitting here are: the Rev. F. Parker, W. H. B. Coham, V. P. Calmady, W. Melhuish, J. T. English, W. Harris, J. Graham and C. M. Saunders, Esqrs. Cecil Bray, Esq., is their clerk. The COUNTY COURT for all the places in Holsworthy union, and for Welcombe, is also held at the court house. Montague Bere, Esq., is judge; and Cecil Bray, Esq., registrar, and acting high bailiff. The CHURCH (St. Peter) was built at various times from the 12th to the 16th century. It consists of nave, chancel, side aisle of nearly equal width with the nave, porch, and tower. The latter is very handsome, and massive, and is a landmark for many miles. It has eight bells, and a clock and chimes playing fourteen tunes. The church has two stained glass windows, and a fine organ with 40 stops. There are no monuments of interest. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £30 0*s.* 5*d.*, and now at £1000 (gross), is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. George Wright Thornton, M.A., who has a good house and 53 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £725 a year. There were formerly chapels at Chilsworthy and Thorne. The WESLEYANS have chapels at Holsworthy Town, Chilsworthy, and Holsworthy Beacon, and the Bible Christians have one at Holsworthy Town beside two others. There is a National School and a Wesleyan School in the town, also one at Chelsworthy, built by the late Mr. Vowler. The poor have £59 a year, arising from Speccott's charity, and Holsworthy and Black Torrington Poor Lands; Mrs. Hart left £15 to the poor, and £15 to the National School; and there is a minor charity of £3 left by the Rev. J. Meyrick, commonly called 'Pretty Girls' and Old Maids' money.'

HONEYCHURCH, a small parish, 7 miles E. by S. of Hatherleigh, is in Okehampton union, rural deanery, and county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 45 inhabitants (25 males, 20 females) in 1871, living in 9 houses, on 607 acres of land. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor, but part of the soil belongs to and is occupied by Simon and Thomas Sloman, and Philip Brook, Esqrs. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a small structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and three bells. The Register dates from 1728. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £6 7*s.* 8*d.*, and now at £70, is in the gift of Mrs. E. Brailsford, and incumbency of the Rev. E. R. Theed, of Sampford Courtenay. The glebe is 65 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1841 for £48 a year.

HONITON is a parish, ancient borough, and market town, having a station on the London and South-Western Railway, 16 miles E.N.E. of Exeter, 9 miles W. by N. of Axminster, 16 miles E.S.E. of Tiverton, 152 W.S.W. of London, and nearly 10 miles E.S.E. of Cullompton Station on the Bristol and Exeter Railway. The parish is in Honiton union, county court district, petty sessional division, and polling district of East Devon, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. It had 3464 inhabitants (1649 males, 1815 females) in 1871, living in 677 houses, on 3066 acres of land. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 80.) The town, which has long been celebrated for the manufacture of beautiful lace, is picturesquely situated on rising ground, on the south-eastern side of the river Otter. The town is well built, and consists chiefly of one broad street, nearly a mile in length, mostly built since the destructive fires of 1747 and 1765, the former of which consumed three-parts of the town, and the latter destroyed 180 houses. The town also suffered from fire in 1672 and 1754. It was a great thoroughfare from London to Exeter, before the opening of the above-named railway, and is now well paved and lighted, and has many good inns and well-stocked shops. It has been much improved during the present century, and the higher parts of it command delightful views of the Otter Valley, which presents a fine expanse of fertile corn and pasture lands, and boldly swelling hills, interwoven with that network of luxuriant hedgerows for which Devon is so famous.

The assizes were held at Honiton in 1590, on account of the plague being at Exeter, and seventeen criminals were executed. On July 25, 1644, King Charles was at Honiton with his army, on his route westward; and again on September 23, on his return. Sir Thomas Fairfax halted here with his army on his march into Devon, October 14, 1645; but, happily, the town was not the scene of any fatal conflict during the civil wars. The Rev. William Harris, a Presbyterian minister, who died here in 1770, was author of the 'Lives of Hugh Peters, James I., Charles II., and Oliver Cromwell.' At the west end of the town are several handsome villas. A bronze fountain has been erected by the townspeople in memory of the late Samuel Davenish, Esq.

Honiton is said to have been the first town in Devon at which serges were made. Both this manufacture and that of lace are supposed to have been introduced here by the Lollards, who came to England during the religious persecutions in Flanders, in the reign of Elizabeth. (See page 36.) The serge trade went to decay many years ago; but the lace manufacture still flourishes here, though not so extensively as formerly. Much of the rich and beautiful fabric called Honiton point lace, and sometimes bone or thread lace, is made in the towns and villages in this and other parts of the county. This lace sells at from 2*s.* to upwards of ten guineas per yard; and the best kind is made entirely from the finest Antwerp thread, which once sold as high as £70 per pound weight. An inferior kind of lace, made of British thread, in the villages along the coast, is called Trolley lace. In the early part of the present century, the lace manufacturers of Honiton employed about 2500 women and children in the town and neighbouring villages; but the introduction of a cheaper article, about 55 years ago, made of bobbin net, by machinery, gave a great check to this domestic manufacture, which somewhat revived about 40 years ago in various parts of the county, under the patronage of her present Majesty and the late Dowager Queen Adelaide. Honiton has a pottery of brown earthenware, two tanneries, two breweries, an iron foundry, three corn mills, several maltkilns, and a branch of the National Provincial Bank of England.

The Manor of Honiton was possessed by Drago, a Saxon, but was given by William the Conqueror to his half-brother, Robert Earl of Moreton. Henry I. gave it to Richard de Rivers, Earl of Devon. Isabel, Countess of Devon, sold it to Edward I., who gave it to Sir Gilbert de Knovill. It afterwards passed, probably by purchase, to Hugh Courtenay, Earl of Devon. It remained with the Courtenay family till sold by the late Viscount Courtenay, about 1810. Richard Marker, Esq., is now lord of the manor, but many other freeholders have estates in the parish. The manor was anciently parcel of the barony of Plympton, and its lords had the power of inflicting capital punishment. The estates called Batteshorne, Littletown, Northcote, Blanicombe, &c., belong to various owners.

The town possessed the advantage of a market as early as the reign of King John, who changed the market day from Sunday to Saturday. It obtained the grant of a fair from the lord of the manor in 1257. Two great markets for cattle, &c., are held the second Saturday in April, and the Saturday before October 18; and a large annual fair on the Wednesday after July 19. The Market House, for the sale of corn, cheese, butter, poultry, &c., is in the centre of the town, and over it is a large public room. It was built in 1823 by the late Paving Trust Commissioners, at the cost of more than £2000. The market, held every Saturday, is extensively supplied with corn, cattle, and all sorts of provisions, especially butter, of which great quantities are sent to London.

Honiton Union comprises 28 parishes, having an aggregate population of 22,291 persons (10,572 males, 11,719 females) in 1871, living in 4698 houses; the number of uninhabited houses was 230, and 15 were building. The area of the union is 80,887 acres, including 165 acres of water. Their total average annual expenditure during the three years preceding the formation of the Union, was £10,244; but for the year ended Lady-day, 1878, it was £11,309 13*s.* 10¼*d.*, including county and police rates, &c. The Union Workhouse, built in 1836, at the cost of £5022, is a stone building, with room for about 230 inmates. Ten surgeons are employed by the Union, and the Rev. John S. Grundy is the chaplain. Mr. Hellier is the union clerk; James and Mrs Ann Orchard (for No. 1 district) are master and matron of the Workhouse; and Francis George Edwards and John Trick are the relieving officers. W. J. R. Hellier, Esq., is superintendent registrar. Mr. John Knight is registrar of marriages; Messrs. H. R. Pridgeon and A. Cornwall are registrars of births and deaths, the former for Honiton district and the latter for Ottery St. Mary and Sidmouth district.

The following enumeration of the parishes in the union shows their territorial extent, the number of inhabited houses and population in 1871, and the present rateable value:—

Borough.—Honiton is an ancient borough by prescription, and till 1846 was governed by a portreeve, bailiff, and other officers, elected annually on Michaelmas-day, at the court leet of the manor. It first returned two members to parliament in the 28th of Edward I., and sent two others to a subsequent parliament, after which it neglected this privilege for nearly 400 years, until the 16th of Charles I., when, through the influence of William Pole, Esq., it was restored. It was disfranchised by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 48 (the Reform Act of 1868). The right of election was in all the householders; but for a time they were disfranchised by a charter of James I., which instituted a mayor and a select number of pocket freemen, consisting of country gentlemen, to whom the right of election was confined. This charter was soon abolished, and the borough remained under its portreeve till November 1846, when it received a Royal Charter of Incorporation, in accordance with the provisions of the Municipal Reform Act of 1835. By this charter the borough is divided into two wards, and placed under the government of a Town Council, consisting of a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors. The boundaries of the borough previous to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832 were uncertain, but they were extended by that Act so as to comprise the whole parish. Before the passing of this Act, the right of election was in the male householders not receiving alms, but paying scot and lot, and boiling their own pots, from which they were called potwallers, or potwallopers. The registered lists of borough voters, entitled to vote for the two parliamentary representatives, in 1849, comprised 205 occupiers of houses of the yearly value of £10 or upwards, and 399 potwallers; but many of the former are also on the list of the latter.

TOWN COUNCIL, 1877-8.

MAYOR—John Knight, Esq.

ALDERMEN—Henry Fowler, John Read, Henry Hook, R. P. Harrison, John Knight, and Edward Ashley.

COUNCILLORS—St. Paul's Ward—Messrs. Banfield, W. Lee, Swann, Summerhayes, Baker, C. Read, and H. Lee; St. Michael's Ward—Messrs. Critchett, Maer, Cox, Clarke, Pile, Woodland, Glanvill, Hartnell, Bishop, and Sutton.

BOROUGH OFFICIALS—G. T. Tweed, Esq., is town clerk; W. H. Barker, Esq., treasurer; Mr. J. S. Plucknett, surveyor; and Mr. L. Murch, collector.

HONITON COUNTY COURT DISTRICT is co-extensive with the union.

PETTY SESSIONS for Honiton division (for parishes included see page 27) are held at the Town Hall monthly; the magistrates usually sitting here are the Rt. Hon. Viscount Sidmouth, the Hon. G. A. P. B. Addington, the Hon. C. Lindsay, Sir Edward Marwood Elton, Bart., Lieut.-Gen. William T. Hughes, C.B., William Porter, Esq., Charles Gordon, Esq., the Rev. Henry Edwards, George Neumann, Esq., Richard Marker, Esq., John K. Simcoe, Esq., Alfred Mellor, Esq., and Major J. B. Speid. Edmund Stamp, Esq., is clerk. The Police Station is in High Street, and has a magistrates' room, besides residences for police officers.

The GAS WORKS were constructed in 1835, at the cost of £2700, raised in £25 shares; and the consumers are supplied at the rate of 5*s.* 6*d.* per 1000 cubic feet.

CHURCHES.—St. Michael's, the old parish church, is inconveniently situated on a bold eminence, half a mile south of the town, near Littletown Farm. It was originally a small chapel for mendicant friars, but was enlarged about 1482, chiefly at the expense of the Bishop of Exeter, who also gave the curious screen which separates the nave and chancel. It has a tower and five bells, and contains some ancient monuments, and one in memory of Dr. Marwood, physician to Queen Elizabeth, who died in 1617, aged 105 years. The original parish church is supposed to have stood in the town, on the site of Allhallows Chapel, which was rebuilt after being destroyed by fire in 1765, but was pulled down in 1837, to give place to ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, which was erected near it, and made the parish church, under powers of an Act of Parliament passed in 1835. This spacious and elegant structure, of Norman architecture, cost about £7600, exclusive of about £2400 paid for the purchase of old buildings, land, &c., and for fencing the burial ground. It was finished and consecrated in 1838. There was some great defect in the erection of this noble edifice, as it had to be new roofed, repaired, and altered, in 1849, at the cost of about £1000. It was erected and repaired by subscription, and has 1530 sittings, of which 500 are free. It is 132 feet long and 58 broad, and its tower is a magnificent specimen of the Norman style, rising to the height of 104 feet, and crowned by elaborately worked pinnacles. The organ is a fine instrument, which cost £400. The pulpit is of Beer stone, handsomely wrought, and resting on twisted columns. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £40 4*s.* 2*d.*, and in 1831 at £272, is in the patronage of the Earl of Devon, and incumbency of the Rev. Michael F. Sadler, M.A., Prebendary of Wells, who has 87 acres of glebe, and an ancient residence in a picturesque and secluded situation. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £632 9*s.* 8*d.* per annum. Service is performed in the old church once a month. The Rev. Thomas Izod, M.A., is curate; Mr. John Porter, clerk; and Mr. Swannell, organist.

There are four CHAPELS in Honiton, belonging to Unitarians, Independents, Baptists and Wesleyans. That belonging to the Unitarians was built in 1737, in lieu of the old Presbyterian Meeting House, founded in 1696. The GRAMMAR SCHOOL, sometimes called Allhallows School, has been for many years conducted as a classical boarding school; but, for the use of the house and the schoolroom, and the £12 a year (see Charities), the master is required to teach four free scholars, appointed by the trustees. Here is a large NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1829, and attended by 140 boys and 90 girls. The CHARITY SCHOOL, which was free to all the poor children of the parish, and was established by subscription in 1813, is consolidated with the National School, together with its endowment of £300 Four per Cent. Stock, left by the Rev. James How in 1816.

The town has a Literary and Scientific Institution, which has a valuable library and a long list of subscribers. It has also a talented Choral Society and a Glee Club; and at the Dolphin Hotel are commodious Assembly Rooms, where balls, concerts, lectures, &c., are often held. Honiton and Ottery Agricultural Society has a numerous list of members. Here are two old benefit societies called the Friends United and the New United Brethren, and in 1848 a Tradesmen's Friendly Society was established at the Dolphin Hotel. The East Devon Friendly Society, which has offices here, was amalgamated with the Western Provident Association in November 1849.

CHARITIES.—For repairing Allhallows Chapel and the schoolhouse, &c., which adjoined it, and for such other public and charitable uses as the trustees should think meet, Sir John Kirkham and Elizens Harding, in the 15th of Henry VIII., left 17 tenements, &c., in Honiton, and a house and 11 acres of land at Yarcombe, now worth £150 a year, but let for only £47, on long leases, subject to fines on every renewal of the leases. One of the houses, worth £20 a year, is occupied rent free by the master of the Grammar School, and another of the same value was long used as the Parish Workhouse. The same trustees have the management of the following charities:—HENRY BEAUMONT, in 1590, left Rapshays Farm (26 acres), at Buckerell, and directed the yearly proceeds to be distributed among the poor of Honiton parish. It is now let for about £40 per annum. ELIZABETH BEAUMONT, widow of the above-named donor, gave for the same purpose, in 1595, the Steevely Land (36A. 3R. 29P.), in Allott's Isle, now let for only £17 a year, under a lease which expired in 1866. THOMAS MARWOOD, in 1617, left for the poor four small tenements, now let for £6 8*s.* 8*d.* per annum, subject to fines on the renewal of leases. HAYES TRUST comprises about 10 acres of land in Buckerell parish, purchased in the 16th century with £200, left to the poor by James Rodge and three other donors. It is now let for £10 a year. WARWICK LANE TRUST consists of four tenements, purchased in 1658 with £65 poor's money, and now let for only £4 8*s.* per annum, in consideration of fines, paid when the 99 years' leases were granted. The BRIDEWELL HOUSES, purchased with £130 poor's money in 1675, were formerly one of the county prisons, and now consist of a public-house called the Carpenters' Arms, a large garden, and several small tenements, worth £30, but let for only £5 5*s.* per annum, on a 99 years' lease in 1805, in consideration of a fine of £50. STOCKER'S LAND (18A. 1R. 3P.), in the parish of Luppitt, was purchased by the Feoffees in 1691, with £270 poor's money, of which £100 was left by Henry Marwood. This land is now let for about £36 a year. To the general fund arising from the above-named charities are added the dividends of £300 Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with unapplied income; and £12 a year from three annuities for the support of the schoolmaster, viz. £6 and £2, given by John Fley in 1614, and one of £4, purchased with £80 given by the parishioners in 1662. The total annual income arising from all these sources is about £190, of which about £120 is distributed among the poor parishioners, and the remainder is absorbed in repairing the buildings, and in other incidental expenses.

ST. MARGARET'S HOSPITAL, on the Exeter Road, was anciently a house of lepers, and was refounded by John Chard, in 1642, for five poor people, and enlarged in 1808 by the erection of four new houses, so that it is now the residence of nine almspeople, one of whom is called the governor. It is endowed with 18A. 2R. 27P. of land, let for about £60 a year. The governor has 3*s.*, and the other inmates have each 1*s.* per week. Each of them also receives a donation of 10*s.* or 12*s.* at Christmas. The poor parishioners have £6 a year as the rent of East Rhodes Field, 15¼ acres, purchased with £100 left by Richard Minifie in 1707. They have also the interest of £50, left by Elizabeth Harris in 1782.

HONITON CLIST. (See Clist Honiton.)

HORRABRIDGE. (See Buckland Monachorum.)

HORWOOD is a small village and parish, 3 miles E.N.E. of Bideford, in Barnstaple union, archdeaconry, and rural deanery, Bideford county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and Fremington hundred. It had 118 inhabitants (59 males, 59 females) in 1871, living in 24 houses, on 860 acres of land, nearly all belonging to the Rev. John Dene, B.A., Major Hogg, and Earl Fortescue. The CHURCH (St. Michael), consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, tower, and three bells, and contains memorials of the Denes, Rolles, and Pollards. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £7 8*s.* 4*d.*, and now at £157, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. John Dene, B.A., who owns the estates called Church and Pen Horwood, and has a pleasant seat, called Horwood House. The tithes were commuted in 1848 for £127 a year, and the glebe is 36 acres. The SCHOOL BOARD for the united parishes of Horwood and Newton Tracey, with Fremington contributory, was formed on February 4, 1875, and now consists of the Rev. John Dene (chairman), the Rev. J. T. Pigot, Major Hogg, and Messrs. J. Dennis, H. Webber, J. Saunders, and J. Donning. They erected a School at Fremington in 1877 at a cost of about £200, to hold 60 children.

HOVE. (See Plymstock.)

HUISH is a parish and small scattered village on the west side of the Torridge valley, 5 miles N. of Hatherleigh and 9 miles S. of Torrington Railway Station. It is in Torrington union and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Torrington polling district, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. It had 129 inhabitants (56 males, 73 females) in 1871, living in 22 houses, on 986 acres of land. The extensive park of Heanton Satchville, where the old mansion was burned down about seventy years ago, embraces 722 acres of the area. The parish includes the hamlet of Newbridge and the barton of Lovistone. HEANTON SATCHVILLE, the present elegant modern mansion, stands in this parish, and is the seat of Lord Clinton, the lord of the manor, and owner of the soil, whose predecessor made great improvements in the mansion and its beautiful grounds. Huish was anciently held by a family of its own name, and afterwards by the Tresilian, Yeo, and Innis families. Sir James Innis, afterwards Duke of Roxburgh, purchased the estate in 1782, and built a new house for his own residence; but he sold the estate to Richard Eales, Esq., of whom it was purchased by Lord Clinton, who was succeeded in 1832 by his brother, Charles Rodolph, who was succeeded in 1866 by his son, Charles Henry Rolle Hepburn-Stuart-Forbes-Trefusis, who was born in 1834. He is a deputy-lieutenant oi Kincardineshire, Lieutenant-Colonel North Devon Yeomanry Cavalry, and Captain 25th Aberdeenshire Rifle Volunteer Corps. He was M.P. for North Devon 1857–66, and Under Secretary of State for India 1867–8, and is patron of five livings. His heir is his son, Charles John Robert, born in 1863. Heanton Satchville was remodelled by the purchaser, and the old deer park in Petrockstow is still preserved. His lordship's other seats are Fettercairn House, N.B.; Invermay House, Bridge of Earn, Perthshire; and his town residence, 32 Bruton Street, Berkeley Square, W.

The CHURCH (St. James the Less) stands upon an eminence commanding delightful and extensive views. With the exception of the tower, which has been considerably restored, the church was rebuilt in the Early Decorated style in 1873, from plans by G. E. Street, Esq., of London, at a cost of more than £4000, defrayed by Lord Clinton, as a memorial to his family. It now consists of chancel, nave, south aisls, organ chamber, vestry, and tower. The walls are constructed of local stone, with Fisbury stone dressings, while the interior of the walls is entirely faced with stone from Ham Hill. The chancel is divided from the nave by an ornamental iron screen with folding gates. The roof of the nave is of the hammer-beam form, and has a carved angel at the end of each principal. The floors are laid with Godwin's tiles, those of the chancel being specially designed. The communion table is of polished oak, and there are three cloths, the most beautiful of which, violet in colour, was designed by Mr. Street, and worked by Lady Clinton. The super-altar is of polished marble, and bears a brass cross and vases of flowers, seven branched candlesticks and altar lights. The chancel contains sedilia, a piscina, carved oak choir stalls, &c. The pulpit is of Caen stone, richly carved; the litany desk, given since the restoration by the parishioners, is of carved oak; the Caen stone font is octagonal in form, and is carved by Mr. Earp, of London. All the windows are of stained glass, executed by Clayton and Bell; the East window of five lights represents in the centre the Crucifixion, and the side lights, St. James the Less, the Virgin Mary, St. John and St. Andrew; in the tracery are the emblems of the Trinity. The east window of the south aisle depicts the Walk to Emmaus, the Pentecostal Gift, and the Charge to St. Peter. The other windows contain representations of the Crucifixion, Aaron, Elijah, St. Paul, St. Barnabas, St. Boniface, St. Petroc, the Annunciation, the Resurrection, St. Cecilia, Christ healing the Blind, Raising Lazarus, and Healing the Paralytic, Abraham offering up Isaac, the Delivery of Jonah, &c. The church is lighted with candles, for which four brass coronæ are suspended in the nave, and one in the chancel. The Register dates from the 16th century. The living, a rectory, valued at £194, is in the patronage of Lord Clinton and incumbency of the Rev. A. M. Morgan, M.A., who has 66A. 2R. 25P. of glebe. The tithes have been commuted for £117 a year. A SCHOOL was built in 1857, at a cost of £150, defrayed solely by Lord Clinton, who also principally supports the same.

LETTERS by foot post are received at 9 a.m., and despatched at 5 p.m., viâ Beaford, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

HUNTSHAM, 5 miles N.N.E. of Tiverton, and 5 miles from Dulverton Railway Station, is a parish in Tiverton union, hundred, and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and East Tiverton rural deanery. It had 235 inhabitants (130 males, 105 females) in 1871, living in 43 houses, on 1875 acres of land. Charles A. W. Troyte, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and owner of nearly all the parish, resides at Huntsham Court, a large and handsome building erected in 1870. The manor was formerly held by the Stanton, Dunsland, Beare, and Lucas families, the latter of whom sold it to the Troytes. The CHURCH (All Saints) is an ancient ivy-mantled structure, and consists of chancel, nave, south transept, north aisle, south porch, and square embattled tower containing eight bells and a clock. The church was entirely restored in 1856, when north and south transepts were added, but in 1871 the north transept was lengthened into the present aisle, in which a window, in memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. Troyte, was inserted; the former work was done by the late A. H. D. Troyte, Esq., and the latter by C. A. W. Troyte, Esq. All the windows are of coloured glass. The font, a handsome one, was given by the parishioners, in memory of the late Mrs. Troyte. The church has a fine old screen, and the seats have all variously carved ends, and bear the date 1534. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £10 12*s.* 11*d.*, and now at £238 (gross), in the patronage of Charles A. W. Troyte, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Robert James Dunn, M.A., who has a good rectory house, built by the late Rev. D. Troyte, at a cost of upwards of £2000. The present SCHOOL and master's house was built by A. H. D. Troyte, Esq., in 1854, and has been remodelled and enlarged by C. A. W. Troyte, Esq.

HUNTSHAW, or Hunshaw, is a parish. 3 miles N.E. of Torrington, in Torrington union, county court district and rural deanery, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Fremington hundred, Northern division of the county, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. The parish had 211 inhabitants (102 males, 109 females) in 1871, living in 39 houses, on 2050 acres of land. Lord Clinton is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Mary) consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, south porch, and tower containing three bells. The East window is filled with stained glass. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £11 7*s.* 1*d.*, and in 1831 at £200, in the patronage of Lord Clinton, and incumbency of the Rev. J. B. Sidgwick, M.A. The glebe is 37 acres, and the vicarage house is situated in a picturesque valley. The tithes were commuted in 1844 for £151 a year. The PAROCHIAL SCHOOL, near the church, was erected a few years ago. The Church Lands, &c., comprise 3 gardens, 2 orchards, 4 houses, and a blacksmith's shop; and the poor have about £2 yearly from John Lovering's Charity, and an annuity of 20*s.* left by Edmund Dennis.

HUXHAM, a small parish, on the banks of the river Culm, 3½ miles N.N.E. of Exeter, is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. The parish contained 125 inhabitants (70 males, 55 females) in 1871, living in 27 houses, on 761 acres of land. Lord Poltimore, who owns all the soil, is lord of the manor, which was anciently held by the Huxham family, whose heiress carried it in marriage to an ancestor of its present owner, in the reign of Edward III. The CHURCH is a small edifice, consisting of nave and chancel with a bell turret. The chancel was rebuilt about 16 years ago by the late rector, and the nave has likewise been rebuilt during the incumbency of the present rector. The church contains some good specimens of modern stained glass by O'Connor. The living is a rectory, annexed to that of Poltimore, held by the Rev. Francis Sterry, M.A., who lives at Poltimore, and the parsonage here is inhabited by the curate.

IDDESLEIGH, or Idsleigh, 4 miles N.N.E. of Hatherleigh, and 8 miles S.W. of Eggesford Railway Station, is a parish and village in Okehampton union and county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, North Tawton polling district of North Devon, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. It had 540 inhabitants (275 males, 265 females) in 1871, living in 99 houses, on 2952 acres of land. Sir S. H. Northcote, Bart., is lord of the manor, and owner of 2000 acres formerly held by the Sully family. Ash is the property of Hugh Mallett, Esq., by whose family it has been long held. John Johnson, Esq., Col. W. Arnold, J.P., and a few smaller freeholders have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. James), built about the year 1500, was renovated and partly rebuilt about 30 years ago, at the cost of £400, but a thorough restoration is now being carried out. In the chancel is the effigy of a crusader, supposed to represent Sir John Sully. The Register dates from 1660. The living, a rectory valued in K.B. at £17 1*s.* 3*d.*, and now at £350, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Spackman, M.A., who has 145A. 2R. 3P. of glebe, and a large and handsome rectory house, in the Elizabethan style, erected by the Rev. Frederick Pitman, a late rector, in 1849–50, at the cost of about £2000. It stands on a commanding eminence, and has tasteful grounds. The tithes were commuted in 1847 for £332 10*s.* per annum. A NATIONAL SCHOOL was erected in 1860, at a cost of about £650, defrayed by subscription of clergy, gentry, &c. of Iddesleigh and Dowland parishes.

IDE, a parish and neat and pleasant village in a picturesque valley, 2 miles S.S.W. of Exeter, is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 632 inhabitants (310 males, 322 females) in 1871, living in 157 houses, on 2571 acres. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are lords of the manor, and principal owners of the soil. The beautiful and romantic grounds, called Fordlands, which are often visited by pleasure parties from Exeter, are in this parish. They are the property of J. E. C. Walkey, Esq., J.P. The CHURCH (St. Ida) was rebuilt in 1834, at the cost of about £1300, and is a neat cemented structure, having a tower containing four bells; it has 550 sittings, of which 300 are free. The living is a vicarage, valued in 1831 at £180, but now at about £300, augmented by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are patrons, and the Rev. Samuel P. Coldridge is the incumbent. There are 2 acres of glebe, but no rectory house. The incumbent rents the Priory of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners at a moderate sum. The great tithes were commuted in 1840 for £180, and the small tithes for £170 a year. The INDEPENDENTS have a chapel here. Here is a school, partly supported by subscription; and the poor parishioners have two yearly rent-charges, viz., 20*s.* out of a field at Lower Whiddon, left by Peter Balle, in 1648; and £2 12*s.*, left by William Smith, out of three houses at Exeter.

IDEFORD, a parish and small village, in a well wooded valley, on the west side of Little Haldon Hill, 2 miles S.E. of Chudleigh, is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry and Moreton rural deanery. The parish had 292 inhabitants (155 males, 137 females) in 1871, living in 64 houses, on 1471 acres of land; the area includes 63 acres of wood, and 108 acres on Haldon Common. Lord Clifford is lord of the manor; but the soil is freehold, and belongs partly to the Templer, Whiteway, Burd, Endacott, Moir, Vooght, Cleave, and Watts families. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a small antique fabric, with a tower and three bells. It was restored in 1852 at a cost of £150. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £17 13*s.* 9*d.*, and in 1831 at £270, is in the patronage of the Rev. D. M. Owen, vicar of Marks Tey, Essex, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Cox, M.A., who has 63 acres of glebe, and a handsome residence, repaired and partly rebuilt in 1845. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £270 per annum. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1857. The poor have 20*s.* a year out of land called Hayes, left by Humphrey Borrington, in 1589. The Church House, with gardens, &c., let for £28 per annum, have long been vested in trust for the use of the poor, who have also the interest of £100, left by Dr. Jenkins, in 1821.

ILFRACOMBE, an ancient seaport and market town, the most picturesque and fashionable bathing place on the north coast of Devon, is about 10 miles N. by W. of Barnstaple, 50 miles N.W. by W. of Exeter, and 202 miles W. by S. of London. Ilfracombe parish forms a Local Board district, which is in Barnstaple union, archdeaconry, rural deanery, and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, and Ilfracombe polling district of North Devon. It had 1838 inhabitants in 1801; 1934 in 1811; 2622 in 1821; 3201 in 1831; 3679 in 1841; 3677 in 1851; 3851 in 1861; and 4721 in 1871. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 81.) The town is described in old records as a borough. The parish has been variously spelt Ilfordscombe, Alfredscombe, Ilfar Combe, Ilfridcombe, Alfrincombe, Ilfracumbe, Ilfredcombe; and includes the two villages of Hele, and Lee, and the scattered farms of Damage, Campscott, Slade, Warcombe, Lincombe, &c. The town is built partly at the bottom and partly on the side and summit of a steep acclivity, and till about 50 years ago, it consisted chiefly of one long street, a mile in length; but since then it has risen to great celebrity as a watering place. Many handsome marine villa residences, and other houses, have been built on the terraces; hot and cold baths, and several commodious suites of public rooms have been erected; and tunnels cut through the rocky cliffs to the fine beach and coves of Crewkhorne. This beach affords better and more retired places for sea-bathing than Wildersmouth, the old bathing place. Ilfracombe is much indebted to nature and to art for a harbour where vessels of more than 200 tons can ride in safety. The harbour consists of a natural basin, defended from the violence of the sea by a bold mass of rock, stretching nearly halfway across the entrance. Some of these heights, or Torrs, are 400 feet high. The Capstone, the most notable of the heights round the town, and conical in form, has a promenade scarped out in curves upon its front, and is interposed between the houses and the Channel, sheltering them from the north and north-westerly winds. This PARADE was cut at a great cost on the east, north and west sides of Capstone Hill: it is kept in repair by the Local Board who bought the rock—which extends over 7A. 2R. 24P.—in 1876 for £2500. On three sides of the town the rocks rise boldly in a semicircular sweep, and their craggy steeps are in many places finely overspread with foliage. Hillsborough Rock on the east side of the harbour, rises with a rugged outline to upwards of 500 feet above the level of the beach. Near the summit of the rock are the remains of what is thought to have been Keltic fortifications. Lantern Rock, on the western side, is of smaller dimensions, rising nearly to a point, and having on its conical summit a lighthouse, which is 140 feet above low-water mark, and was formerly a chapel, dedicated to St. Nicholas, the patron saint of sailors. Beyond the Capstone Hill are a series of precipitous rocky cliffs and torrs, near the higher parts of the town and the beautiful terraces, which command extensive views over the town and Bristol Channel to the Welsh coast, a distance of 21 miles. The TORRS WALKS are circuitous walks of great extent, cut out of the sea side of seven conical hills, called the Torrs, situated between the parish church and the sea, and belonging to the Joint Stock Land and Investment Society.

Much of the salubrity of the town is owing to its being built on a hard, clay-slate rock, which, elevated at an angle of nearly 45°, secures a perfect, natural drainage. The Quay, however, is constructed on alluvial soil. The town has been well paved and lighted. Large sums have been spent in obtaining an unlimited supply of good drinking water. Commodious provision markets have been erected. The climate is warm but bracing; the mean annual temperature is 44° 75′, four degrees higher that that of Exeter, and half a degree higher than that of Torquay. In the ten years 1861–70, Ilfracombe district, embracing five parishes, had an annual death-rate of 17·1 per thousand.

The PIER, which is upwards of 850 feet long, constructed many years ago by the Bourchier family, was partly rebuilt and lengthened by Sir Bourchier Wrey in 1760, and enlarged and much improved in 1829 by Sir B. P. Wrey, Bart.

Sir B. P. Wrey, Bart., is lord of the manor of Ilfracombe, which was formerly a part of the Barony of Barnstaple, and was held successively by the Martin, Audley and Bourchier families. He is the chief owner of the soil, but other families have estates in the parish.

Ilfracombe is in the jurisdiction of the port of Barnstaple, and is much resorted to as an harbour of refuge. It was formerly extensively engaged in the herring fishery, but the trade has now almost gone. In 1344 Ilfracombe was one of the forty-four ports sending representatives to a 'Council of Shipping;' and two years later it furnished Edward III. with 82 sailors and 6 ships for an expedition against France. The town supplied victuals and shipping for the transport of 800 men to Ireland in 1585. In 1795 the owners of shipping at Ilfracombe were ordered to furnish 49 men for the Navy. The Earls of Bath were styled 'Vice-Admirals of Ilfracombe,' and are closely connected with its history. The town was garrisoned for the Parliament during the Civil War, but was captured for the King in September 1644 by Sir Fras. Doddington, with 20 pieces of ordnance, as many barrels of powder, and 200 stand of arms. It seems to have fallen into the hands of Fairfax after the capture of Barnstaple by that general in 1646. The 'Triumph' cruised as a privateer from Ilfracombe during the great French War, and still remains here as a hulk. The shipping trade of Ilfracombe has much declined during the present century, owing to the South Wales coalfields and the increased size of ships; but since the recent harbour improvements the steamship 'Fingal,' 200 feet long, entered easily and remained here safely for many days.

The market, which is now held on Wednesday and Saturday, the latter being by far the largest, is well supplied with all sorts of provisions, and was granted in 1278 to Henry Champernowne, to be held on Monday, together with a fair for three days. There are two cattle fairs on April 14 and the Saturday after August 23.

RAILWAY &C. COMMUNICATION.—The London and South-Western Railway Co. in 1874 extended their line from Barnstaple to Ilfracombe; the Great Western Railway Co. run their brakes to Barnstaple three times a day in connection with their line; coaches run daily to Lynton; and steam-packets ply to Swansea, Bristol, Cornwall, Bideford, &c. thrice a week in the summer, but only once in the winter.

The town is governed by a LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH, formed in 1851 for the whole parish. The Board consists of nine members, three of whom retire every April. The following are the members: Messrs. Lake (chairman), Thos. Chugg, H. C. Camp, George S. Cole, William Huxtable, — Dennis, — Jones, — Hancock and — Braund. Edwyn John Slade-King, Esq., M.D., is medical officer; W. W. Edger Langdon, Esq., clerk; Mr. Philip Pile, surveyor; Mr. William Harmes, rate collector and nuisance inspector; Mr. John Camp, town crier. The older office of portreeve is from some unexplained cause vacant. Since the formation of the Board upwards of £30,000 has been spent in improvements, several new streets have been made, and many of the old ones widened and improved.

The Town Hall, in High Street, and the Market House, in Market Street, were erected in 1860 at a cost of about £5000. The Town Hall contains a large room, holding 500 persons, used for meetings, concerts, &c.; and other rooms for town offices, &c. The Baths form a handsome building in the Doric order, erected in 1836 by a company of shareholders at a cost of £2000. Mr. Finch, of Barnstaple, is secretary. The Assembly Room forms the centre of Coronation Terrace, and belongs to Mr. R. Huxtable. The Gas Works were established in 1837 by a company of shareholders, with a capital of £2000 in £10 shares; but it was raised to £20,000 in 1872, when the works were enlarged at a cost of £13,000. Gas is supplied at 5*s.* per 1000 cubic feet. There are 125 street lamps. Mr. T. D. Wivell is chairman of the company, Mr. Charles Gennell secretary, and Mr. Frederick R. Child manager of the works.

The Water Works were commenced in 1856, and completed in 1866 at a cost of £7000. The water, which is collected from the hills in the direction of Morte, is stored in a reservoir, nearly five acres in extent and capable of holding 20,000,000 gallons. It is thence passed through the two filter beds to the service reservoir, which is underground. The works belong to the Local Board. A system of Drainage was completed in 1854. The sewers are constructed of Annerley glazed pipes, and are well ventilated, both at their dead ends and along their course by lofty air-shafts. There are two outfalls extended by iron pipes into the tideway, where the strong current soon carries all sewage matter far away.

The Parish Church (Holy Trinity) is a large structure, situated on an eminence at the west end of the town, supposed to have been erected in the 12th century. It consists of chancel, nave, aisles running the whole length of the church, and a low square tower, rising from the middle of the north aisle. The chancel is divided from the aisles by two oak screens. During the last twenty years the church has been gradually restored, at a cost of £10,000. It contains several monuments, one of which is a sarcophagus, erected in memory of Captain Rd. Bowen, who fell in the attempt upon Teneriffe, under Admiral Nelson, in 1797. Another is in memory of the mother of John Prince, the author of the 'Worthies of Devon.' Ilfracombe is a prebend belonging to Salisbury Cathedral, and was held for some time by Camden, the learned antiquary and topographer. The living is a vicarage, valued at £208, in the patronage of the Rev. J. M. Hawker and incumbency of the Rev. J. Mill Chanter. The impropriate rent-charge is £851; the glebe is 4 acres, and there is a vicarage house. The Church of St. Philip and St. James, an Early Decorated structure, in the lower part of the town, was erected in 1857 at a cost of £6000, and consists of nave, chancel, north and south aisles, north chancel aisle, and tower at the east end of the north aisle, surmounted by a slated spire and containing six bells. The north chancel aisle and five of the bells were added by subscription in 1876 at a cost of £1200. Several windows are enriched with beautiful stained glass. The district, assigned to the church in 1859, includes the village of Hele, and had 1741 inhabitants (788 males, 953 females) in 1871, living on 1500 acres. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of W. H. Stone, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Watson, M.A., who has a house built in 1860. The income (£206) is partly derived from an endowment, but chiefly from seat-rents. St. Philip and St. James Day School was erected in 1859 on land purchased by the parish, by Mr. and Mrs. Rd. Bligh, at a cost of about £1000. There is also a new National School near the parish church.

A Free Church of England (Christchurch) was erected in 1844, and has room for 800 persons. The Independent Church, in High Street, was erected in 1818, at the cost of £1750, by a congregation which had been formerly Presbyterian. but adopted the Congregational government in 1814. The chapel was re-roofed and newly seated in 1862, at an outlay of £500, raised by subscription. The schoolroom was erected in 1834, at an outlay of £300. The Rev. Joseph Bainton is the minister. The Baptist Chapel, in High Street, which will seat 300 people, was built in 1858, at a cost of £1240; the schoolroom adjoining, in 1865, at an outlay of £326; both sums being raised by subscription. The Rev. Francis Medcalf is pastor. The Wesleyan Chapel, in St. James's Place, will accommodate 500 worshippers, and was built in 1864, in lieu of the old building erected in 1832, at a cost of upwards of £2000, raised by subscription. The Brethren have a meeting house in High Street, built a few years ago, at an outlay of about £400, and seating 350 persons. The Roman Catholic Chapel is in Brown Street.

The Cemetery, situated on the Braunton Road, about a mile from the town. was formed by a company of shareholders in 1854, at a cost of £500, the land (3 acres) being given by Richard Bligh, Esq. It is unconsecrated, and has a neat mortuary chapel.

The Ilfracombe Hotel is a handsome building in a mixture of styles, erected in 1867 and enlarged in 1871 by a limited liability company, with a capital of £40,000, raised by 3000 shares of £10, and by debentures. It stands in its own grounds of 6 acres, and is built close to the sea and the Capstone Hill Parade. The hotel is replete with every convenience, and contains 250 rooms. The Oxford Hall, in Oxford Grove, is a large, chaste building, erected in 1873, having a room seating 1000 persons, and a smaller, accommodating 200 individuals. The Working Men's Club, formed a few years ago, is held in one of the rooms.

The Ilfracombe Joint Stock, Land, and Investment Society (lim.), with a capital of £120,000, raised in £100 shares, purchased, in 1851, the Torrs and Runnymead estate (now called Torr Park), which is being sold in building plots on a perpetual ground rent.

Ilfracombe Choral Society was formed in 1874, and has 60 members, who give occasional concerts at the Oxford Hall. The Rev. J. M. Chanter, M.A., is president; Mr. T. C. Webb, conductor; and Mr. Benj. P. Willis, secretary. The Reading Room, at the Town Hall, is well supplied with newspapers, &c. There are 26 members, who pay a subscription of a guinea a year. Science and Art Classes were established in 1874, and meet at the Parish Church Schoolroom; there are 60 members. The Rev. J. M. Chanter is president, and E. Slade-King, Esq., M.D., secretary.

The FIRE ENGINE STATION is at the Town Hall, and the Volunteer Fire Brigade was formed in 1874. Mr. W. Walters is the secretary, and the keys are kept at Mr. W. Beer's, High Street, and Mr. W. Harmes's, Oxford Grove.

The COTTAGE GARDEN SOCIETY was formed in 1838, and is opened to the whole of Devonshire. A dog and poultry show was added in 1872. About £60 is given yearly in prizes. The Rev. W. H. Toms, of Combmartin, is president, and Mr. W. Westlake, secretary.

The 14th Corps (1st Devon Administrative Brigade) Artillery Volunteers was formed in May 1875, and has a strength of 58. Its armoury is at 14 Portland Street; the practice battery, consisting of two guns and one mortar, is on the north side of Hillsborough Rock. Robert J. G. Simmonds, Esq., is captain; William Huxtable, Esq., lieutenant; Mr. Frederick Gardner, acting assistant surgeon; the Rev. John M. Chanter, M.A., acting chaplain.

As noticed with Poughill, this parish has from Mrs. Pincombe's charity the yearly sum of £50, from which the parish church school receives £30, and St. Philip and St. James's, £20 a year; three poor men also receive 40*s.* a year each. A house, garden, malthouse, &c., were given by an unknown donor for the repairs of the church, let for £12 a year. Richard Harris, in 1795, left 50*s.* a year out of a tenement called Common, for distribution among the poor attending the Dissenting meeting house here. A lodge of Freemasons (Concord 1135) was formed in 1866, and meets on the second Wednesday in each month; and the lodge of Oddfellows (No. 5468) has 190 members.

POST, MONEY ORDER and TELEGRAPH OFFICE and SAVINGS BANK at 38 High Street; Mr. J. H. Stockfisch, is postmaster. Letters are received at 7.10 a.m., 1.20 and 4.45 p.m., and despatched at 1.35 and 6.45 p.m. (Sundays 6.10 p.m.). There are three deliveries, namely at 8 a.m. and 1.45 and 4.40 p.m.

STEAM PACKETS daily between Bristol, Portishead and Ilfracombe, and weekly between Bideford and Ilfracombe.

COACHES and OMNIBUSES three times a day in summer and once a day in winter to Barnstaple.

HELE, a small village in the ecclesiastical district of St. Philip and St. James, in the ancient parish of Ilfracombe, is situated on the Combe Road, about a mile east from the town, and has a very pretty bay and sands. There is a corn mill in the village, turned by the Hele stream, which rises in the parish about a mile further up the valley. A SCHOOL erected in 1865, by Captain Williams, of Watermouth Castle, at a cost of £360, is attended by 50 children. Divine service is held in it every Sunday afternoon.

There is a WALL LETTER BOX near the toll gate, which is cleared at 5.50 p.m. week days only.

LEE, a village and ecclesiastical district formed in 1869 out of the mother parishes of Ilfracombe and Morthoe, had 217 inhabitants (113 males, 104 females) in 1871, living in 40 houses. The village is situated in a romantic valley on the coast, 3 miles W. of Ilfracombe. Lee was not much known until 1871, when Mr. Robert Smith, a native of Lincolnshire, but whose chief enterprise had been centred in the reclamation of Exmoor Forest, purchased the Warecombe estate, which comprised the greater part of the valley. Mr. Smith has since re-modelled the village, and built himself a house, called 'The Elms.' This house overlooks the valley, woods and the sea at Lee Bay, and adjoining it is an avenue of elm trees full 100 feet high. Much of the estate has been re-sold in building lots. Near the Elms is a curious old spring known as 'the Dripping Well at Lee,' which is never dry, and several degrees higher in temperature than the neighbouring springs. Lee was one of the old smuggling villages on this coast, and there are yet several 'brandy coves' to be seen here. The bay with its tea house, and old water mill stuck in the rock, has a picturesque and pleasing appearance. Vessels in the coasting trade unload at the bay. A new lighthouse is in course of erection, at Bull Point, upwards of a mile to the west. THE CHURCH (St. Matthew), erected in 1833 in the Early English style, consists of a nave, chancel, and bell turret containing one bell. It was restored in 1860 at a cost of £307, raised by subscription. The East window is filled with stained glass by Hardman, and in a window on the south side are some good specimens of Italian enamelled glass. The chancel floor is laid with encaustic tiles. The pulpit, reading desk, and part of the seat ends and the panelling, are of skilfully carved oak of the 16th and 17th century. The organ, by Dicker of Exeter, was added in 1867. The benefice a vicarage, valued at £50, raised by endowments, is in the patronage of the vicar of Ilfracombe, and incumbency of the Rev. Warwick Bamfylde Kennaway, M.A. The SCHOOL, erected in 1860 at a cost of £267, is attended by 30 children.

ILSINGTON, a parish and small village on an eminence, on the eastern side of Dartmoor, nearly 6 miles N.N.E. of Ashburton, and 7 miles from Newton Abbot. It is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge hundred and petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. The parish had 1150 inhabitants (579 males, 571 females) in 1871, living in 229 houses, on 7563 acres of land. It includes the scattered hamlets of Haytor-Vale, Higher Brimley, Sigford, Leveton, Harford, Cold-East, and Knighton-Beaumont; about 600 acres of modern plantations; and about 800 acres of open common, where the Haytor Granite Rocks rear their lofty heads, and command from their summits the most diversified and splendid views in the county. The Haytor Granite Works produce some of the finest granite in the kingdom; large quantities were sent to London many years ago for London Bridge and the pillars in the British Museum, but the quarry has been idle several years. A tramway, constructed many years ago by Mr. Stover, to convey the stone to Bovey, still exists. The Smallacombe estate, belonging to Alfred Lyon, Esq., is very rich in minerals, the principal of which is iron ore, of which there is a deposit of hæmatite; magnetic iron ore has also been discovered, and it is believed that there is a great deposit, as the property joins the Haytor Magnetic Mine. About 15,000 tons of hæmatite has been raised on this estate. The other minerals consist of tin, copper, bismuth, and yellow ochre. The Duke of Somerset is lord of the manor of Haytor. C. H. Monro, Esq., is lord of the manor of Ankesdon, now called Ingsdon, where he has a handsome seat, rebuilt in 1872. The Countess de Vesci owns Bagtor, the ancient manor house of which was formerly the seat of the Beares and Fords. John Ford, a popular dramatic writer, was born at Bagtor in 1586. Mr. Alfred Lyon and Mr. George Wills are the other principal owners of the soil. Near the church are some ruins of the Court Barton, or manor house of Ilsington, built by Sir H. Ford, in the reign of Charles II.; most of the ruins have, however, been removed to make room for the site of the present National School. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is a plain, ancient structure, with a tower and five bells, and is about to be restored. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £17 9*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £365, is in the incumbency of the Ven. Archdeacon Thomas Henry Braim, D.D. The vicarage is a good residence, and the glebe is 87A. 2R. 6P. The Dean and Canons of Windsor are the patrons, and also appropriators of the rectory, anciently appropriated to the church of Ottery St. Mary, and afterwards to Plympton Priory. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £300, and the rectorial at £340 a year. Mr. Wills is lessee of the latter. The PARISH LANDS, &c., have been vested from an early period in trust for the poor, and now comprise about 12 acres and a few cottages, let for £13 per annum, in addition to which £6 10*s.* is derived annually from money invested in the funds. In 1727 William Candy left a farm at Hartford of about 18 acres, and directed his trustees to accumulate the rents till they raised £200, to be invested in the purchase of land, and then to apply the yearly profits of the whole in clothing poor parishioners, except 20*s.* for an annual sermon on Christmas-day. There are now about 40 acres belonging to this charity, the rent of which, together with money invested in the funds, yields about £62 per annum. A copy of Mr. Candy's will is suspended on the walls of Ilsington Church, and a slab stone in the middle aisle marks the spot where he is buried. In 1663 Miss Jane Ford, daughter of John Ford, Esq., of Bagtor, left 6 acres of land for schooling poor children, and the rent from this source amounts to about £20 per annum. In 1804 Mr. Hale, of Ingsdon, left £300 to be invested in the funds, the proceeds of which amount to £9 per annum, to be given to six poor old aged men or women who can best repeat from memory the Church Catechism before the minister and congregation. The examination takes place on the first Sunday in June, and early in November the successful candidates receive the money. A new SCHOOL, with offices, is about to be built at Blackpool.

LETTERS from Newton Abbot, viâ Bickington, arrive at about 8.30 a.m. and depart at 5.30 p.m.. when the Ilsington letter box is cleared. There is a WALL LETTER BOX at Leverton, cleared at 6.15 p.m. Bovey Tracey is the nearest Money Order Office and Railway Station, distant 2½ miles.

INSTOW, anciently Johnstow, a parish and much-improving village, on the Barnstaple and Torrington Railway, and is pleasantly situated on the broad estuary of the rivers Taw and Torridge, opposite Appledore, 3 miles N. by E. of Bideford. It is in Barnstaple union, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Bideford county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, and Fremington hundred. The parish had 647 inhabitants (275 males, 372 females) in 1871, living in 127 houses. The area is 1916 acres, including 285 acres of water.

The sands at Instow are firm and extensive; and there are several terraces of good houses. At Fullingcott was found a golden coin of Theodosius. one of the very few instances of Roman money being found in the district. The manor was held in Henry III.'s time by the St. Johns, from whom the parish had probably its name. W. L. Christie, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manors of Instow, Bickleton and Fullingcott; W. A. Yeo, Esq., and several smaller owners have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist), an ancient structure in the Perpendicular style, consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, south transept, south porch and tower containing three bells. It was restored and reseated in 1873 at a cost of £1200, and contains three stained glass windows, two of which are in memory of members of the Cleveland family, and the third in remembrance of Mr. Thomas Lock (died 1860.) The Register dates from 1717. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £12 17*s.* 3½*d.*, and in 1831 at £320, in the gift of W. L. Christie, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William Francis D. Lang, M.A. There is a glebe of 30 acres, and a good residence, erected in 1825 at the cost of about £800, and much improved by the present rector. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on November 23, 1874, and consists of the Rev. W. F. D. Lang (chairman) and Messrs. Thomas Lock, E. H. Jessop, W. Bencraft, and John Joslin. Mr. Frederick Lee, of Westleigh, is clerk. The National School is leased to the Board. A Parochial Library of 200 volumes is held at the Post Office.

POST OFFICE at Mr. S. B. Fishley's. Letters are despatched at 2.15 and 7.25 p.m. Letters should be addressed 'Instow, North Devon.' Appledore is the nearest Money Order Office.

INWARDLEIGH, 4½ miles S. by W. of Hatherleigh, is a small village and parish in Okehampton union, deanery, and county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, and polling district, of South Devon, and Black Torrington hundred. It had 632 inhabitants (339 males, 293 females) in 1871, living in 119 houses, on 6281 acres of land. The manor anciently belonged to the Coffins, and was divided among their co-heiresses. The principal landowners are Viscount Portman, who is now lord of the manor, Lord Clinton, Archdeacon Woollcombe, William Burd, Esq., and J. H. Wrigley, Esq. The CHURCH was repaired in 1864, and consists of chancel (partly rebuilt in 1875, at a cost of £75), nave, north aisle, and tower in which five bells were hung in 1851. In the church is a good organ, built by Gray and Davison, London, and also a font of about the 12th century. The Register dates from 1699. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £16 11*s.* 3*d.*, and now at £301, is in the patronage of trustees, and incumbency of the Rev. Peter Gunning, M.A., who has a good residence, built 60 years ago, and 232 acres of glebe. There are three CHAPELS belonging to Baptists, Wesleyans, and Bible Christians. The poor parishioners have a yearly gift in money from Newcombe's charity, Crediton. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on February 20, 1877, and consists of the Rev. P. Gunning (chairman), Edmund P. Burd, Esq. (vice-chairman), and Messrs. Wm. Vallance, George Squire, and James Youlden. Mr. Stephen Wellington, of Okehampton, is clerk. A Board School was built in 1877 at a cost of £600.

LETTERS, viâ Exbourne by foot post, are received at 7.15 a.m., week days only. Okehampton is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX in the village, cleared at 5.40 p.m. week days only.

IPPLEPEN ancient parish consists of the civil parish of Ipplepen, and the chapelry of Woodland, includes the hamlets of Daignton, Combe Fishacre, Castleford, and Aptor, gives name to a rural deanery, and is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Newton Abbot polling district of East Devon, and Haytor hundred. Ipplepen civil parish had 846 and Woodland 160 inhabitants in 1871; the former has an area of 2010, and the latter of 1606 acres. It had a grant for a market and fair, in 1317, but both have been obsolete some centuries. The manor was given by William the Conqueror to Ralph de Fulgerüs, and one of his descendants gave it to the Abbey of St. Peter, at Fulgers, which had a cell here. The religious establishment here was formerly a priory; the first prior of whom we have any record was Brother Thomas, who resigned in 1274, and was succeeded by Brother Luke. There is a complete list of priors, rectors, and vicars from that time down to the present. In 1688 the manor was sold in parcels to the landowners by Sir John Pettus. Sir George Baker, William Gotbed, Esq., John Shepherd, Esq., and John Hamlyn, Esq., are now the principal owners of the soil. The parish has some fine rocky scenery and several subterraneous rivulets in the small valley called Stoney Coombs. Having been seized by the Crown from the alien Abbey of St. Peter, the rectorial glebe and tithes of Ipplepen and Woodland were given to the College of St. Mary Ottery, and at the Dissolution they were given with the advowson of the vicarage to the Dean and Canons of Windsor, but are now the property of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a large antique Perpendicular fabric, has a fine tower, 100 feet high, and containing 6 melodious bells. The church stands on an eminence at the head of the village, and contains a finely-carved old screen and pulpit. The chancel has lately been restored by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners at an expense of £250 to £300. The Register dates from 1558. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £26 2*s.* 3½*d.*, and in 1861 at £130, with residence, held by the Rev. Robert Harris, M.A. As before mentioned, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are the patrons, and they intend to erect a new vicarage house and to increase the income. The tithes were commuted in 1838. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL was built in 1865 at the cost of £2000, and has 300 sittings. The SCHOOL BOARD was constituted on September 16, 1872, and consists of Mr. S. Berry (chairman), the Rev. R. Harris, and Messrs. Bowden, Hillyer, and Smith. Mr. J. S. Hodge is clerk. They rent the Wesleyan Schools for £12 a year. The poor parishioners have 20*s.* a year, left by John Peter, out of the great tithes of Cornworthy, and an annuity of 6*s.* 8*d.*, left by Richard Kelly, as noticed with Brixham; also about £20 a year from other sources.

POST OFFICE at Mr. William Bovey's. Letters are received at 8.40 a.m. from, and are despatched at 4.15 p.m. to, Newton Abbot. Newton Abbot and Kings Kerswell are equidistant Railway Stations.

IVYBRIDGE is an ecclesiastical district out of the mother parishes of Ermington, Cornwood, and Ugborough, but the village extends also into the parish of Harford. The ecclesiastical district had 1683 inhabitants (774 males, 909 females) in 1871, living in 336 houses. The village, more than half of which is in Ermington parish, is picturesquely seated on the banks of the river Erme, where there is an ancient ivy-mantled bridge, on the Plymouth and Exeter Road, 11 miles E. by N. of the former, and 34 miles S.S.W. of the latter. The South Devon Railway crosses the valley by a bridge and viaduct, a little to the north, and has a station here. The old bridge stands in the four parishes, a corner being in each parish. It has a large hotel, much frequented by visitors, two inns, a large paper mill employing 500 people, several neat villas, many good lodging houses, a corn mill, several good shops, and an extensive tannery and leather manufactory. About 42 years ago, when the new road was made, a new bridge was erected a little below the old one. The bed of the river shows, by its jagged rocks, the impetuous nature of the stream, which, having but just escaped from the high moorlands, rushes down, after heavy rains, like a wild cataract, through the deep and narrow valley, the woody banks of which rise in some places, above the old bridge, so abruptly, that the foliage of the trees on either side meet, and form a sylvan arch over the river, which runs southward to Bigbury Bay, about seven miles below. The enchanting scenery of the village and neighbourhood attracts numerous visitors in summer and autumn from London, Plymouth, Devonport, and other places; and the Hotel and lodging houses afford excellent accommodation for all ranks. Lord Blachford is lord of the manor of Ivybridge, which extends into Cornwood and Ermington parishes. In that part of the village in the former parish, a Chapel of Ease was built by subscription in 1790, and in 1835 it was consecrated as a DISTRICT CHURCH, but the present church is too small for the needs of the population, and efforts are being made to build a new one. It has an embattled tower, and the living is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of Lord Blachford, and incumbency of the Rev. George W. Anstiss, B.A. An INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was erected in 1845. A WESLEYAN CHAPEL has lately been erected at the sole cost of Messrs. Allen, owners of the Paper Mills. There are large village schools, built some few years since.

JACOBSTOWE, a pleasant village and parish in the valley of the river Okement, 3½ miles S.E. of Hatherleigh, is in Okehampton union and county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Hatherleigh polling district of South Devon, Black Torrington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Okehampton rural deanery. It had 190 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 2856 acres of land, mostly belonging to Colonel White Thomson, but the Luxmore, Ash, Moxon, and other families have estates here. Bromford, in this parish, belonged to the family of Leigh, whose heiress married a Beare. This branch of the last mentioned family took the name of Bromford; and from them it passed by marriage respectively to Prideaux, Strechleigh, Chudleigh, Oxendon, and then to the Burtons, one of whom sold it to its present owner, Colonel Thomson, in 1863. The CHURCH (St. James) is a small and neat edifice. Many alterations and decorations have been made in it within the last year, including the removal of an ugly gallery. There are monuments belonging to the Oxendon and Burton families, and a handsome one erected in 1869 to the memory of Lady Astley, wife of Lewis P. Madden, M.D., late of Clifton, Gloucestershire. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £11 4*s.* 4½*d.*, and now at £210, is in the patronage of Colonel White Thomson, and incumbency of the Rev John Vincent, M.A., who has a neat residence. The glebe is 80 acres, and the tithes have been commuted for £174 a year. The SCHOOL was built in 1877, at a cost of £160, to accommodate 35 children.

LETTERS, viâ Exeter, delivered from Exbourne by foot post, are received at 7.30 a.m., and despatched at 6.5 p.m. There is a WALL LETTER BOX cleared at 6.5 p.m. week days only. Hatherleigh is the nearest Money Order Office.

KELLY, a pleasant scattered parish, 7 miles E.S.E. of Launceston, is in Tavistock union and rural deanery, Launceston county court district, Lifton petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, and Totnes archdeaconry. It includes the hamlet of Meadwell, and had 226 inhabitants (110 males, 116 females) in 1871, living in 41 houses, on 1721 acres of land. The parish is all the property of Reginald Kelly, Esq., whose family has held the manor and advowson from the time of Henry II., and has been seated since that early period at Kelly House, which was greatly enlarged and partly rebuilt about 1750. It stands on a commanding eminence, in a richly wooded park, from which a road descends to a sylvan valley, where a rivulet supplies a small lake, and gushes over several rocky heights in beautiful cascades. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a handsome structure in the Perpendicular style, and has a tower containing six bells. It was newly roofed and repaired about 34 years ago, at the expense of the late Arthur Kelly, Esq., and again restored, re-seated, and a new organ added in 1865 at the cost of Mrs. Arthur Kelly. The east window of the chancel aisle is filled with stained glass, the gift of Admiral Kelly; that in the north side of the north aisle was inserted by Reginald Kelly, Esq., in 1877, in memory of the late Arthur Kelly, Esq.: and at the east end of the same aisle is a window enriched with very old painted glass. Under a chapel at the east end is the vault of the ancient family of Kelly. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 8*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £250 (commuted rent-charge), in the patronage of Reginald Kelly, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. H. J. Morshead, M.A., J.P., who has a good residence and 73A. 1R. 16P. of glebe. The PARISH SCHOOL was built by the late Arthur Kelly., Esq., in 1842.

KENN, or Kenne, a village and a parish including Kennford, is pleasantly situated in a picturesque valley on the banks of a rivulet, four miles S. by E. of Exeter. The parish is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 1014 inhabitants (495 males, 519 females) in 1871, living in 223 houses, on 5412 acres of land. The surface of the parish rises in a bold range of hills on the south-west side of the valley, where are the handsome seats of Haldon, Woodlands, and Trehill, commanding fine views over the vale of the Exe. Kennford had a grant of a market and fair in 1299, but both have been obsolete some centuries. The manor of Kenn, formerly held by the Courtenay, Oxenham, Acland, and other families, was purchased in 1820 by Sir L. V. Palk, Bt., of Haldon House, a large and handsome stuccoed mansion, in a finely wooded park, on a commanding eminence, upon the summit of which are a number of barrows or tumuli, in which urns and Roman coins have been found. This mansion was built in 1735, by Sir George Chudleigh, Bart., and was purchased in 1769, by the late Sir Robert Palk, who was created a baronet in 1782, and greatly improved the house and grounds, and is now the residence of Sir Lawrence Palk, Bart, M.P. The house contains an extensive library and a fine collection of paintings, and commands delightful views. The ornamental grounds are extensive, and the plantations which crown the summits of the hills cover many acres. In the centre of Pen Hill rises a castellated building of three stories, called the Belvidere, or Lawrence Castle, erected by the late Sir Robert Palk, in memory of his friend General Lawrence, whose statue, as large as life, on a pedestal of black marble, ornaments the entrance. This gallant general was buried at Dunchideock, as noticed at page 306. The view from the mountainous ridge of Haldon Hill is grand and extensive, comprising the whole course of the Exe from Exeter to the sea, and the hills and woodlands as far as Honiton and the borders of Somersetshire. On the higher ground of Haldon is Exeter Race Course, now but little used. Woodlands is a large and handsome mansion, with sylvan grounds. Trehill, another handsome mansion, with woody grounds, commanding delightful views, is the seat of J. H. Ley, Esq., who has a large estate in the parish, purchased by his family in 1745, and formerly belonging to the Waltham, Savery, and other families. Perridge, a detached member of this parish, is noticed with Holcombe Burnell. F. B. Short, Esq., J.P., owns Bickham, and a few smaller freeholders have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a large ancient structure, with a tower and six bells, and has several neat monuments. It was restored in 1875, when a stained glass window was placed in the chancel, in memory of the Ley family. In the church, which is beautifully decorated, is a handsome Norman font, an old oak screen with the painting of the saints upon it, and a very fine reredos. There are 300 sittings, all free. The Register dates from 1538. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £46 13*s.* 4*d.*, and now at £850, is in the patronage of J. H. Ley, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Reginald Porter, M.A., who has a good residence and 197A. 2R. 23P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £763 10*s.* per annum. Here was anciently a chantry chapel, dedicated to St. John; and Carswell Farm was formerly held by one of the prebendaries of the chapel at Exeter Castle. (See page 336.) The NATIONAL SCHOOL, at Kennford, with a house for the teacher, was built in 1849. The Girls' School, near to the rectory, was built in 1870, at a cost of £500, to accommodate about 80 children. The poor parishioners have 48*s.* a year from Hensley's Charity. (See page 358.) By grant from James I., the poor parishioners hold the Anchor Inn, at Kennford, and an orchard of 3 roods, let for about £30 a year, which is applied with the poor rates.

KENNERLEIGH, a small village and parish in the picturesque valley of the Creedy, 5 miles N. by W. of Crediton, is in Crediton union, county court district and petty sessional division, Crediton polling district of North Devon, Crediton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. The parish had 83 inhabitants (38 males, 45 females) in 1871, living on 732 acres of land. Nearly all the parish is the property of the Right Hon. Sir S. H. Northcote, Bart., the lord of the manor, which formerly belonged to the Hidon and Dowrich families. Creedy Mill Farm is owned by the Rev. Anthony Benn. The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist) is a small ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, and one side aisle. The East window is filled with stained glass, in memory of the late rector, the Rev. W. O. Tripp, representing chiefly the Resurrection and the Ascension. In the tracery is a representation of the pelican feeding her young with her own blood. The rectory, valued at £130, is in the patronage of the twelve governors of Crediton Church and Charity Trust, and incumbency of the Rev. C. M. Empson, M.R.C.S.E., L.S.A., who has a good residence, erected in 1841. The tithes have been commuted at £95, and there is a glebe of 1¼ acre, besides land at Woolfardisworthy, called Higher Minchindown, let for £58 a year, and purchased with Q.A.B. and benefaction money. This parish has been united to the United School Board District of Woolfardisworthy, Thelbridge, and Washford Pyne. The new district is known as the United District of Woolfardisworthy, Thelbridge, Washford Pyne, and Kennerleigh. (See Woolfardisworthy.)

KENTISBEARE, or Kentisbeer, 3 miles E. by N. of Cullompton Railway Station, is a considerable village, sheltered on the east by lofty hills. Its parish is in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Hayridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton East rural deanery. It had 899 inhabitants (477 males, 422 females) in 1871, living in 182 houses, on 3720 acres of land, including the hamlets of Pirzwell and Southill, and the hamlet of Sainthill. Blackborough parish is united with this for the support of the poor, as noticed at page 165. The trustees of the late Earl of Egremont own most of the soil and are lords of the manor, formerly held by the Punchardon, Furneaux, Bonville, and other families. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a fine structure, built about the beginning of the 16th century, and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, porch, vestry, and square tower containing six bells. The church was restored in 1866, at a cost of £1200. It has a beautiful screen, and contains several monuments of the Eveleigh and other families. At the head of the south aisle is the Bradfield Chapel, with a tomb dated 1508. There is a mural tablet in memory of the Rev. George William Scott, some time rector of Kentisbeare, and cousin of the celebrated Sir Walter Scott. The tomb of John Whiting, who died in 1529, has the figures of himself and his wife engraved in brass. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £27 18*s.* 11½*d.*, and now at £485, in the patronage of the trustees of the late Earl of Egremont, and held by the Rev. J. F. Alleyne, M.A., who has 61 acres of glebe, and a good residence, built in 1840. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £400 a year. The National School was built in 1872 at a cost of £300, raised by subscription. The Baptist Chapel, at Sainthill, was erected in 1839 at an outlay of £800. The poor parishioners have about 7 acres of land at Ashill, in Uffculme, derived from various benefactions. This land is let for about £14 a year, and there is belonging to the same trust about £140 vested at interest. The clear income is distributed among the poor, together with a yearly rent-charge of £6 out of Berry Parks, purchased with £100 left by Robert Westcombe in 1629; and an annuity of £3 out of Shepherd's Valley Farm, in Dunkeswell, left by John Sanders in 1719.

Post Office at Mr. Henry Lomman's. Letters are received at 7.30 a.m., and are despatched at 6 p.m., viâ Cullompton, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

KENTISBURY, a parish and pleasant scattered village, in a high situation, 9 miles N.N.E. of Barnstaple, and 3 miles E.S.E. of Combmartin, is in Barnstaple union, county court district and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, Northern division of the county, and Sherwell rural deanery. It had 424 inhabitants (209 males, 215 females) in 1871, living in 76 houses, on 3129 acres of land. The parish includes the hamlets of Patchole and Kentisbury Ford, many scattered farmhouses, and its surface rises in bold hills. The manor, formerly belonging to the Wolfe, Randall, Richards, and Beavis families, is dismembered, and the parish now belongs to Earl Fortescue, the Misses Incledon, and several smaller freeholders. The Church (St. Thomas) is an ancient structure in the Early English style, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and massive tower containing four bells. The church was restored, the north aisle added, and the chancel lengthened in 1875–7, at a cost of £3000, all of which, except £100, was given by the rector. The roof to the chancel is waggon-shaped, and beautifully painted with figures. The east window of three lights is filled with stained glass by Clayton and Bell, in memory of J. O. Openshaw, Esq. (died 1861), brother of the rector. The altar-piece is a painting of small squares, in imitation of tiles, and is placed in a frame of Devon marble. It contains representations of the Ascension (in the centre) and the Nativity and the Baptism. The east end of the aisle is a private chapel for the rector's family, and contains a window of four lights, filled with stained glass, in memory of Mr. James and Mrs. Ann Pilling, parents of the rector; besides a small window, in remembrance of Lucy, eldest daughter of the rector, who died in 1869. The seats in the chancel are of oak, and all the others are of elm, open at the ends. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £12 10*s.* 7½*d.*, and in 1831 at £303, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Openshaw, B.A., who resides mostly at Ramsbottom, near Manchester. The rectory house is occupied by the curate. There is a glebe of about 60 acres. Three of the Richards family held the living successively, and the last had it 52 years, and rebuilt the rectory house in 1761. The School was erected in 1877, at a cost of about £380, raised by subscription. There is a small Baptist Chapel in the parish.

Post from Barnstaple. There is a Wall Letter Box at Kentisbury Ford, which is cleared at 4.30 p.m. (week days only). Combmartin is the nearest Money Order Office.

KENTON is a parish and pleasant village in the picturesque valley of the small river Kenn, opposite the woody grounds of Powderham Castle, and about a mile W. of the estuary of the Exe, and 7 miles S.S.E. of Exeter. It is in St. Thomas's union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Exminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 1858 inhabitants (849 males, 1009 females), living in 399 houses. The area is 6811 acres, of which 930 acres are water. Its parish extends westward to the lofty range of the Haldon Hills, and includes the hamlets of South Town, Cofford, Venbridge, Staplake, Lyston, Cheverstone, Wilsworthy, West Town and East Town, and the large village of Starcross, which, with an adjacent part of Dawlish parish, was formed in 1828, ecclesiastically, a district parish, as afterwards noticed. Kenton had formerly a market and fair, granted by Henry III., but they have long been obsolete. The Earl of Devon owns part of the parish and is lord of the manor, which was a demesne of the Crown till the reign of Henry III. OXTON HOUSE, a large and handsome mansion with extensive pleasure grounds, on the hill about 1½ mile W. of Kenton, is the seat of General Edward Studd, J.P., D.L., who has an estate here. Sir R. L. Newman, Bart., has a small estate here called Mowlish. A court leet and baron for the Earl of Devon's manors in this neighbourhood is held at Starcross. KENTON CHURCH (All Saints) is a large and handsome building of red stone, with a lofty tower containing six bells. It is supposed to have been built in the reign of Edward III. The exterior was formerly adorned with many statues, some of which still remain. A gorgeous screen separates the nave and chancel. Round the entrance gates are sculptured figures of the Twelve Apostles, and on the panels below the rich open work are painted figures of saints with numerous labels. In the year 1866 the interior was thoroughly restored, reseated and reroofed. Two beautiful stained glass windows were put in by General Studd, of Oxton—one a memorial window over the west entrance representing the Nativity of Our Blessed Lord and the Adoration of the Wise Men; the other window, in the north-east end of the church, representing the Four Evangelists—both painted by Mr. Balentyne, of Edinburgh. The windows also on the south side have all been renewed with neatly stained glass, partly at the expense of the Earl of Devon and partly by a parish rate. The Dean and Chapter of Salisbury are appropriators of the rectory, and patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £34 13*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1831 at £265, and now in the incumbency of the Rev. A. L. Dames, M.A., who has a good residence with tasteful grounds. The tithes were commuted in 1842—the rectorial for £460 and the vicarial for £380 per annum. The WESLEYANS have a chapel at Kenton. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on February 9, 1875, and consists of the Earl of Devon (chairman), Sir John Duntze (vice-chairman), the Revs. A. Longworth Dames and E. C. Bond and John Drew, Esq. Mr. S. Dobell is clerk. The Board School was built in 1877 at a cost of £1135, to accommodate 150 children. GAS WORKS were established for this parish and Starcross in 1877 by a company with a capital of £2000 in £1 shares. Gas is supplied to consumers for 7*s.* 6*d.* per 1000 cubic feet. An INDUSTRIAL HOME for the training of girls for domestic service was established here in 1861 by the late Countess of Devon. The Home has accommodation for 24 girls. The Church House, given by Edward VI., is let for about £10, which is carried to the churchwardens' accounts. At West Town is an old dwelling which was formerly an ancient chapel dedicated to St. Ann. The poor parishioners have the dividends of £127 8*s.* 2*d.* Three per Cent. Stock, purchased with various benefactions. They have also the dividends of £100 Navy Five per Cents., left by Jonathan Fyrer in 1819, and the dividends of £200 given by Mr. William Staffick.

KILMINGTON, a village and parish on the western acclivities of the Axe valley, 2 miles W. by S. of Axminster, is in Axminster union, county court district, petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell rural deanery. It had 568 inhabitants (271 males, 297 females) in 1871, living in 105 houses, on 1760 acres of land. It has a cattle fair on the first Wednesday in September. Charles Tucker, Esq, owns a great part of the parish, and has a pleasant seat here called CORYTON PARK, which was rebuilt by his father in 1756. Coryton Park is at present occupied by Frederick Swabey, Esq. The Rev. William Heberden, Mr. Scarborough and the Misses Annings have estates here. The CHURCH (St. Giles) consists of nave, chancel, aisles, side chapel, and tower containing five bells. The church, with the exception of the tower has been rebuilt, and has five of its windows enriched with stained glass. The living is a curacy, consolidated with the vicarage of Axminster, to which Kilmington is ecclesiastically a parochial chapelry. The vicarial tithes were commuted in 1841 for £240, and the rectorial for £100 per annum. The latter are in the same appropriation as Axminster. The Rev. John Henry Southam, M.A., is curate-in-charge. Here is a BAPTIST CHAPEL and a NATIONAL SCHOOL.

KINGSBRIDGE is a small market town, pleasantly situated on rising ground, at the head of the estuary which runs up from the English Channel, between Salcombe and East Portlemouth, about 6 miles below, and has several creeks projecting from each side. It is distant about 20 miles E.S.E. of Plymouth, 34 miles S.S.W. of Exeter, 10 miles from Kingsbridge Road Railway Station, 12 miles from Totnes and Ivybridge Railway Stations, and 205 miles W.S.W. of London. It gives name to a poor law union, a county court district, and a polling district of South Devon, and is in Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Stanborough hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. Kingsbridge parish, which had 1557 inhabitants (653 males, 904 females) in 1871, living in 321 houses, on 150 acres, forms, with Dodbrooke parish (see page 302) one continuous town, which town has now about 3000 inhabitants, exclusive of suburbs in the adjacent parishes of West Alvington and Churchstow, from the latter of which Kingsbridge was separated some centuries ago; but they still form one vicarage. Some years ago a company, called the Kingsbridge Railway Company, was formed to construct a railway from Kingsbridge to Brent Station, on the South Devon line, and about four miles of road was cut, when the undertaking was suspended from want of capital, and has not been since resumed. The town is highly salubrious, and has a clean appearance. The woollen manufacture was formerly extensively carried on here, but the last remaining factory was converted into a steam corn mill in 1845, by a company of shareholders. Here are now two foundries, a manufactory of sheep shears and other agricultural tools, a number of maltsters, and corn, coal, &c., merchants. Kingsbridge market was granted about 1256, and is held for corn, &c., every Saturday, and its annual fair for cattle, &c., is held on July 20, if that date falls on a Thursday; but, if not, on the Thursday after. The July fair continues three days, during which a stuffed glove is hung out at the market house, as at some other fairs, and like that which is carried in procession at Exeter Lammas fair, and stuck on the top of the Guildhall. The market is an extensive corn mart, and is well supplied with provisions, the town being in that fertile part of Devon commonly called the 'South Hams.' The MARKET HOUSE was built about the close of last century, in lieu of the old one, which stood in the middle of the street. White ale, as noticed at page 302, is extensively used in this neighbourhood.

The town is supplied with water brought in pipes from the hills near Combe Royal; and with gas from works erected in 1834 by the Kingsbridge Gas Light Co., at the cost of about £1000, raised in £10 shares.

There are 40 public lamps (including Dodbrooke), and gas is supplied to consumers for 5*s.* per 1000 cubic feet. Mr. W. Jarvis is manager and secretary. The TOWN HALL, erected in 1850, at a cost of about £1000, contains reading room, museum, a large hall (where petty sessions and county courts are held, and which is also available for concerts, entertainments, lectures, &c.), two club rooms, policeman's residence, two cells, and an entrance hall; it is surmounted by a tower in which is a public clock. The museum was given by Charles Prideaux, Esq.

KINGSBRIDGE UNION comprises 26 parishes, &c., which had an aggregate population of 19,706 (9525 males, 10,181 females) in 1871, living in 4171 houses; besides which there were 228 houses uninhabited and 13 building. The area is 73,455 acres. The returns include 28 blind persons, of whom 2 were blind from birth; 6 deaf and dumb; 23 idiots or imbeciles (not in asylums); 4 lunatics (not in asylums); 167 paupers in the workhouses. The total annual average expenditure of the parishes on the poor during the three years preceding the formation of the union, was £9069; but in 1838 it was £9118; in 1849, £12,087; and for the year ended Lady-Day, 1878, common charges, £6966; county and police rates, £1555; sanitary rates, £766; education rate, £30.

The UNION WORKHOUSE stands on the north side of the town, in Churchstow parish, was built in 1837, at the cost of about £6000, and has room for 350 inmates. William Jarvis, Esq., is union clerk; the Rev. E. A. Lester, chaplain; Francis S. Cornish, Esq., surgeon; Mr. William and Mrs. Ann Mules, master and matron of the workhouse; and Miss Ellen Moore, schoolmistress. The relieving officers are Messrs. John Port and Henry Nicholls; W. Davies, Esq., is vaccination officer and sanitary clerk; Francis D. Pearce, Esq., is medical officer of health; and Mr. William Wills, sanitary inspector and surveyor. Messrs. Robert W. Soper, Frederick H. Clarke, John Elliot, Francis S. Cornish, Francis D. Pearce, John M. B. Langworthy, William F. Langworthy, and Geo. V. Langworthy, are medical officers. W. Jarvis, Esq., is superintendent-registrar: Messrs. Henry Hambling, Philip F. Horton, Henry Nicholls, Francis D. Pearce, and Edmund W. Bickford, and Messrs. Francis D. Pearce, and Anthony G. Pearce, are the registrars of marriages.

NOTES AND REFERENCES.—Marked 1 are in Blackawton registration sub-district; 2, Stokenham; 3, West Alvington; 4, Kingsbridge; and 5, Modbury. The areas of those marked w include water.

The COUNTY COURT is held in the Town Hall, once in two months, for a district comprising the parishes of Kingsbridge union. Matthew Fortescue, Esq., is judge; John Henry Square, Esq., registrar; and Mr. John Cranch, high bailiff.

PETTY SESSIONS are held at the Town Hall for the division of Stanborough and Coleridge; the magistrates for the division are John Allen, Esq., Henry L. Todd, Esq., Capt. J. S. Twysden, Arthur T. Holdsworth, W. Cubit, Col. L. P. Madden, Lieut.-Col. A. Ridgway, and Col. D. Wise. Thomas W. Weymouth, Esq., is their clerk.

The manor of Kingsbridge was held by Buckfast Abbey, as part of Churchstow, and was granted by Queen Mary to John and Barnard Drake, who sold it to Sir John Peter. In 1793 it was sold by Lord Petre to the Scobells, in whose family it remained until 1874, when John Ustiake Scobell, Esq., sold it to John S. Hurrell, Esq., the present lord. A court leet and court baron is held every two years, when the jury and homage appoint the portreeve, constables, ale-tasters, and continue the customs of this primitive form of government.

The KINGSBRIDGE HIGHWAY BOARD meets on the first Saturday in the month. W. B. Davie, Esq., is treasurer; Joseph Lindon, Esq., surveyor; and Mr. G. B. Lidstone, clerk.

The CHURCH (St. Edmund) is a large cruciform structure, and consists of central and side aisles, chancel with side chapels, north and south transepts, and embattled tower containing eight bells, and crowned by a spire, reaching to the height of 120 feet. The church is supposed to have been erected about the reign of Edward I., by permission of the rector of Churchstow, but it was rebuilt under a faculty granted by Henry II. in 1414. The church was restored in 1860 at a cost of £1300, raised by subscription, aided by a grant from the Feoffee Fund. The peal of eight bells, by Mears and Stainbank, was hung in 1875–6, at an outlay of £720, half of which was raised by subscription, and half given from the Feoffee Fund. The east window of five lights is filled with stained glass, and represents the Resurrection, and the patron saint and eight other saints. In the north transept is a stained glass window, in memory of the Harris family, inserted by Mrs. Hingston, wife of the present vicar. The church contains monuments of Thomas Crispin, one of the founders, and W. Dunscombe, the first master of the Grammar School; and in the north transept is a mural tablet, by Flaxman, in memory of Francis S. Drury. The living is united to Churstow; the Rev. A. N. Hingston is incumbent, and the Rev. E. A. Lester, lecturer. The vicar has £20 a year out of the great tithes of Churchstow; £6 a year left by the Rev. Francis Kingston; and also the great tithes of Stanscombe, and certain lands at Sherford, purchased with Queen Anne's Bounty. There are four CHAPELS here, namely, a Friends' Meeting House, erected about 1659; a Baptist Chapel, erected in 1702, and rebuilt in 1799; an Independent Chapel, formerly belonging to the Presbyterians, and rebuilt in 1847; and a Wesleyan Chapel, built in 1814. The National and the British Schools are situated at Dodbrooke. The BURIAL BOARD was formed in 1866, but owing to their inability to obtain land, a cemetery could not be completed until 1875. It is situated at Highhouse Point, and comprises about two acres of land, about three-fifths of which is consecrated; there are separate chapels for each section, and the cost of the cemetery was £1000. William Davies, Esq., is clerk to the Board, and Mr. Thomas Jarvis, sexton.

THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—The Grammar School, with a good house for the master, was built by Thomas Crispin, who, in 1689, left three yearly rent-charges, namely, £5 a year for repairs; £15 for the head master, in consideration of his teaching at least fifteen free boys in classical learning; and £10 to a master for teaching twenty-five poor children to read and twelve to write. To provide for these payments he left a farm of 72 acres in Bradninch, now producing £80 a year. In 1691 William Duncombe left all his lands and tenements, and the residue of his personal estate, to be vested, after the death of his wife and sister, for the support of a lecturer at Kingsbridge Church; for the assistance of one or more boys going from the Grammar School to Cambridge or Oxford; for apprenticing poor boys; and for the distribution of religious books. The property belonging to this charity now consists of five houses, and about 290 acres of land, mostly in the parishes of Thurlestone, Sherford, and Cornworthy (now yielding a total rent of £418 10*s.*), and of £2330 10*s.* 8*d.* Old South Sea Annuities. A new scheme for the management of these charities was approved by Her Majesty in Council on March 20, 1877; it provides that the object of Crispin's charity shall be to provide a liberal education, by means of a school or schools, at Kingsbridge; and that the object of Duncombe's charity, subject to maintaining the lectureship as heretofore, to promote the object of Crispin's charity. The lecturer has a yearly salary of £120; and £3 is applied for the distribution of books to poor parishioners. The Governing Body of the School Trust consist of three persons nominated by the parish vestry of Kingsbridge, three persons nominated by the magistrates of the Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, at their petty sessions held at Kingsbridge, and three persons nominated by the trustees of Crispin's charity, and three by the trustees of Duncombe's charity. The School is a boarding and day school for boys. The head master, who need not be in holy orders, receives a fixed stipend of £100 a year; and also a capitation fee of not less than £2 a year. Boys of the age of eight years are admitted on passing an examination graduated according to their age, and can remain until they attain the age of sixteen. The subjects of secular education embrace reading and writing, arithmetic and mathematics, English grammar and composition, Latin, at least one foreign European language, history and geography, natural science, and drawing and vocal music. The Governors are to grant eight free places, and may grant more, provided such free places are not held at any one time by more than 15 per cent. of the whole boys in the school. One-half of the free places are to be granted to boys who have been for three years educated at public elementary schools within two miles of this school; and a yearly sum of not less than £5 nor more than £10 is to be granted to each last-mentioned free scholar, as an exhibition in addition to his free place. Further exhibitions may be granted, tenable at the School, in aid of maintenance. The sum of £60 may be applied to the purpose of exhibitions tenable at any other places approved by the governors, to further higher education or technical training, but no boy is to receive more than £30 a year as such an exhibition. The head master of the School is Mr. Charles Simmons, M.A.

The Feoffees are Messrs. R. Hurrell (chairman), James Adams, jun., John E. Adams, W. R. Beer, John Blackler, T. S. Cornish, P. O. Hingston, J. S. Hurrell, John Lidstone, Henry Nichols, and W. H. Prowse. T. W. Weymouth, Esq., is clerk. The trustees of Crispin's Charity are Messrs. William Jarvis, William H. Prowse, Benjamin Blackwill, Philip Trant, James Adams, jun., and Henry Grant. Thomas W. Weymouth, Esq., is their clerk. The trustees of Dunscombe's Charity are Edward Arthur, Esq., William I. Birdwood, Esq., the Rev. George Dawson, the Earl of Devon, Ven. Archdeacon Earle, John Elliot, Esq., and W. R. Ilbert, Esq. T. W. Weymouth, Esq., is clerk. The governors of the Grammar School are James Adams, Esq., jun., B. Blackwill, Esq., W. Browne, Esq., W. Cubitt, Esq., the Rev. George Dawson, J. Elliot, Esq., R. Hurrell, Esq., W. R. Ilbert, Esq., W. H. Prowse, Esq., Lieut.-Colonel Ridgway, J. H. Square, Esq., and Captain Twysden, R.N.

The poor have 52*s.* a year from Sir J. Acland's charity (see Exeter), and 20*s.* a year left by John Peter, out of the tithes of Cornworthy. The Freemasons' Lodge (Duncombe 1486) was formed here in 1874, and meets at the King's Arms on the Monday nearest full moon.

KINGSKERWELL, or Kings Carswell parish includes the hamlets of North and South Whilborough, and is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Newton Abbot polling district of East Devon, Haytor hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Ipplepen rural deanery. It had 960 inhabitants (448 males, 512 females) in 1871, living in 192 houses, on 1744 acres of land. Its village is pleasantly situated, mostly on an acclivity, near the junction of the Torquay and South Devon Railways, 2½ miles S.S.E. of Newton Abbot, and 4 miles N.W. by W. of Torquay. Hercules Edwin Brown, Esq., owns a great part of the soil, and is lord of the manor. He has a handsome seat here, in the Tudor style, called Barton Hall, built in 1838–9–40, at the cost of about £10,000, from a design by Mr. Gribble, the architect, and having a finely-wooded lawn, commanding extensive views. The manor was held by the Crown at Domesday Survey. It afterwards passed to the Droun, Fitz-Count, Courtenay, Smyth, Putt, and Langford families. The latter left it to the Browns in 1710. The CHURCH (St. Mary) stands in the valley at the foot of the village, and is an ancient structure consisting of chancel, nave, two side aisles, a middle aisle, and tower containing five bells. It was re-pewed in 1834, chiefly at the expense of the late Henry Langford Brown, Esq., and the Rev. Aaron Neck, the first incumbent. The latter gave an organ and a beautiful altar-piece. The chancel was restored in 1874, at a cost of £380, by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who also presented the handsome East window; at the same time the nave was newly roofed, the walls repaired, six windows restored, the east and west ends reseated, and a platform for the new organ erected, the expense being £1027 10*s.* 6*d.* The finger organ was given by the parishioners, at a cost of £150, in lieu of the old barrel organ. The church contains some ancient monuments of the Dinhams. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are the appropriators of the rectorial tithes, and the living is a vicarage, valued at £120, in the patronage of the vicar of St. Mary Church, and incumbency of the Rev. George Morris, M.A., who has a residence, built in 1836 by the Rev. A. Neck. The tithes were commuted in 1841—the rectorial for £210 1*s.*, and the vicarial for £145; the latter belong to the vicar of St. Mary Church, and are charged with the yearly payment of £43 10*s.* to the vicar of Kingskerwell. The church was formerly a Chapel of Ease to St. Mary Church, but was made a separate benefice in 1828. The glebe lands contain 9A. 2R. 29P., about 5 acres of which were left by Phillippa Creed in 1726, and nearly all the residue by the Rev. A. Neck. The churchyard was enlarged in 1875 by the addition of almost half an acre of land, given by Hercules E. Brown, Esq. The WESLEYANS have one and the Baptists two chapels. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1858, at a cost of £450, and has accommodation for 175 children. The poor have 20*s.* a year, left by John Peter in 1570, out of the tithes of Cornworthy. In an orchard adjoining the churchyard are the remains of a large antique building, near which were found some years ago many ancient coins, bearing the incriptions Gallicnus, Tacitus, Probus and others.

KINGS NYMPTON is a parish, and old, irregularly built village of thatched houses, on a bold eminence, overlooking the Taw valley, 3½ miles N. by W. of Chulmleigh, 2½ miles N.E. from South Molton Road Railway Station, and 5½ miles S.S.W. of South Molton. It is in South Molton union, county court district, archdeaconry, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Witheridge hundred, and Barnstaple rural deanery. The parish had 642 inhabitants (325 males, 317 females) in 1871, living in 139 houses, on 5539 acres of land. It includes many scattered houses, 91 acres of orchards, 540 acres of woods, and about 900 acres of moor and coarse pasture land, which has been brought into cultivation during the last 30 years. The manor was anciently part of the royal demesne, and was given by Henry III. to Roger le Zouch. It afterwards passed successively to the Cornwall, Pollard, Northcote, and Buller families. It was purchased of the latter by the late James Tanner, Esq. KING'S NYMPTON PARK, a handsome and pleasant seat on the east bank of the small river Mole, near its confluence with the river Taw, is now the property of his sons, and is rented by Newell Connop, Esq. The mansion stands on a commanding eminence, in a large and well-wooded park, and was built by the late James Buller, Esq., who died in 1765. The Park was enclosed, and the original mansion erected in the reign of Henry VII., by Sir Lewis Pollard. The late Mr. Tanner greatly improved the house and grounds, and built a new bridge over the Mole. He owned the greater part of the parish, and brought much of the moor land into fine cultivation. The manorial and common rights are now divided between the representatives of the late Mrs. Byne and Stephen Tucker, Esq., the owner of the Reeds and Hammetts farms. John George Johnson, Esq. (of Cross), M.P. for Exeter, and High Sheriff of Devon, 1872, has property here, and there are several smaller owners. The CHURCH (St. James) is a fine ancient structure, with a tower, crowned by a tall wooden spire, which was covered with lead in 1833, at the cost of £200. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £28 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £315, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Nicholson, M.A., who has a good residence and 96A. 1R. 18P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £462 19*s.* 10*d.* The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel here. The CHARITY SCHOOL, for 40 boys and 20 girls, was long supported by the late John Buller, Esq., who endowed it with £500 Three per Cent. Consols. The poor parishioners have the interest of £50 left by Richard Hele, in 1759, and of £25 left by various donors. They have also the dividends of £152 7*s.* 7*d.* Three per Cent. Stock, purchased with £100 left by Abraham Tossel, in 1773. A poor widow of this parish has 40*s.* a year from Mrs. Pyncombe's charity.

KING'S TEIGNTON, or Teignton Regis parish, which includes the hamlets of Preston, Horsemills, and Gappah, is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 1613 inhabitants (810 males, 803 females) in 1871, living in 355 houses; the area is 4021 acres, of which 70 acres are water. The village is pleasantly situated, 1½ mile N.E. of Newton Abbot, on the north bank of the river Teign, where it has a commodious wharf, near two short canals. The parish abounds in the finest pipe clay, and also in potter's clay, of which together about 50,000 tons are sent in barges down the canal and the river Teign, the former to be shipped at Teignmouth for London, Glasgow, and other markets, and the latter for the Staffordshire and other potteries. About 200 hands are employed in the clay works, where the clay lies in beds varying from 20 feet to 80 feet deep. Lord Clifford is lord of the manor of King's Teignton, which was a demesne of the Crown until Henry II. gave it to Peter Burdon, with a moiety of Teignbridge hundred, which has its name from a bridge here. He is also owner of Gappah, Ware, and a great part of the parish; some of which land is held on lease for three lives. Preston formerly belonged to the Prebendary of Salisbury Cathedral, but now to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; and here are smaller proprietors, some of whom have neat houses in the parish.

The CHURCH (St. Michael) consists of nave with aisles, chancel, and a high and well-proportioned tower, containing six bells. It was consecrated in May A.D. 1318. This church was apparently lengthened and otherwise added to in the 15th century, as appears from the present state of architecture, and the different sort of masonry from the later addition eastward, the latter being built with cut red sandstone. It is in the Perpendicular style, and holds about 400 sittings, about three-fourths of which are free and unappropriated under the faculty granted when the church underwent restoration in 1865. About the same time the daughter parish of Highweek, having greatly increased in importance and population, the requisite steps were taken for its separation from the mother church of King's Teignton, when the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who held the great tithes, relinquished them to make up a sufficient income for an incumbent, and the Bishop of Exeter, in whose gift the united parishes were, appointed the Rev. S. G. Harris the curate for the first rector: the Ecclesiastical Commissioners having, in addition to the great tithes, given a piece of land, on which they built a house at their expense for the rector. There is in the parish Register-chest a list of the vicars of King's Teignton, with the chapelry of Highweek from 1262 to the present time. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £28 13*s.* 9*d.*, in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter. The Rev. J. H. Hext, the late vicar, died on July 29, 1878. There is a good residence and 21½ acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1841—the vicarial for £312 10*s.* and the rectorial for £253 a year. The INDEPENDENTS have a chapel here, built in 1815. A late incumbent, the Ven. Archdeacon Woollcombe, built, in 1848, a large and commodious schoolroom in the Tudor style, at the cost of £460; and to this has been added, by the present vicar, another schoolroom for the girls and infants, at a cost of £300. A curious custom is kept up here every Whitsuntide. A lamb is drawn about the parish on Whit Monday, in a cart covered with garlands of lilac, laburnum, and other flowers, when persons are requested to give something towards the animal and attendant expenses; on Tuesday it is killed and roasted whole in the middle of the village. (Formerly it is said to have been roasted in the bed of the stream which flows through the village, the water of which was turned off on the previous Saturday in order that the bed might be cleaned and purified.) The lamb is then sold in pieces to the poor at a cheap rate. The origin of the custom is forgotten, but a tradition, supposed to trace back to heathen days, is to this effect:—'The village suffered from a dearth of water, when the inhabitants were advised by their priests to pray to the gods for water, whereupon water sprang up spontaneously in a meadow about a third of a mile above the village, in an estate now called Rydon, amply sufficient to supply the wants of the place, and at present is adequate, even in a dry summer, to work three mills. A lamb, it is said, has ever since that time been sacrificed as a votive offering at Whitsuntide, in the manner before-mentioned. The said water appears like a large pond, from which in rainy weather may be seen jets of water springing up some inches above the surface in many places. The place has been visited by members of different scientific societies, and the question as to whether it is really a spring is still a vexed question.' The general opinion appears to be that the real spring is on Haldon Hill, and that after flowing down to Lindridge, the seat of James G. Templer, Esq., it loses itself in the fissures of the lime rock which abounds in this neighbourhood, through which it flows, when it meets with some impediment, where it now bursts up through the soft meadow ground on Rydon, and has ever had the name of 'Fair Water.'

POST, viâ Newton Abbot, for all parts of the parish except Gappah and Bellamarsh, for which Chudleigh is the post town. There is a WALL LETTER BOX, which is cleared at 8.10 a.m. and 7 p.m. (Sundays 8.10 a.m. only). Newton Abbot is the nearest Money Order Office.

KINGSTON, a parish and small scattered village, 3½ miles S.S.W. of Modbury, is in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Ermington hundred, Southern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Plympton rural deanery. It had 489 inhabitants (262 males, 227 females) in 1871, living in 108 houses; the area is 2373 acres, of which 140 acres are water. The parish extends westward to the Erme estuary, and southward to Bigbury Bay. The manor of Kingston belongs to Mrs. Dyer, and that of Scobbescombe to T. Bulteel, Esq. The Duke of Somerset owns Wonwell, and H. B. Mildmay, Esq., T. Bulteel, Esq., and a few smaller owners have estates here. The CHURCH is a small, ancient structure, and the bells have been recently restored. The living is a curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Ermington. Here is a small WESLEYAN CHAPEL.

KINGSWEAR is a parish and small village, most picturesquely situated on the eastern bank of the river Dart, directly opposite Dartmouth. It is in Totnes union, county court district, and archdeaconry, Paignton petty sessional division, Haytor hundred, and Ipplepen rural deanery. The parish had 415 inhabitants (180 males, 235 females) in 1871, living in 90 houses, on 97 acres of land. Its population has greatly increased since it became the terminus of the Torquay and Dartmouth branch of the Great Western Railway; it is now above 500. The southern part, facing the extreme mouth of the Dart and the English Channel, is peculiarly salubrious, and has been consequently most highly spoken of by — Bartlett, M.D., in his well-known treatises on 'Climate,' and 'Consumption Curable.' Most of the land in the parish and neighbourhood formerly belonged to the lords of the manor—the Luttrells, of Dunster Castle, Somerset; but the greater part was sold to various persons in the year 1874. There is an old castle, called Kingswear Castle, which has been restored and made habitable by T. Lidston, architect for the owner, Major C. Seale Hayne, near which are the ruins of a much larger and older castle, called Gomerock. On the rock at its base, formerly a chain was fixed, and at night drawn tight by a windlass or capstan, in the lowest room of Dartmouth Castle, on the opposite side of the river, to prevent hostile ships from entering the harbour. On the brow of the hill overlooking the village and church are the remains of what was in the time of the Commonwealth a strong fort, called Kingswear, or Mount Ridley Fort, from whence it obtained a most beautiful panoramic view of the River Dart, from Greenway (the former residence of the celebrated Sir Walter Raleigh) to its mouth. The PARISH CHURCH (said to be dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket) was rebuilt by voluntary subscriptions, at a cost of £1822 12*s.* 9*d.*, in 1847, except the tower, which contains three bells and a clock. It is in the Decorated style, is fitted with open benches, and has a very tasteful roof. In the year 1861 it was made a vicarage, and the sum of £7 15*s.* (the vicarial tithes) assigned to it. The present gross annual income is about £91 4*s.* 4*d.* Efforts are now being made to purchase a vicarage house. The Crown is the patron. The Rev. John Smart is the vicar; he was appointed incumbent in 1836. The Church Lands have been sold under the sanction of the Charity Commissioners, and the proceeds invested in the Funds in the name of the churchwardens for the time being, and the interest is used to defray the expenses of the church. The Poor Lands have been treated in like manner, and the interest is carrried to the Poor Rate account of the parish. The vicar and churchwardens receive 40*s.* a year from the gifts of John Peters and Richard Kelly (as noticed with Cornworthy and Brixham), which sum is distributed to the poor of the parish in coal. Given in trust by the late Miss Sarah Roope, is a 'trust house,' containing five dwellings, where five poor families belonging to the parish of Kingswear live rent free, and a large room devoted to the Sunday School of the Established Church. There is also a good substantial school house and grounds, given to the parish by the late lord of the manor, G. F. Luttrell, Esq., for the use of the Kingswear Parochial School (a mixed school), under a certificated mistress, Mrs. Matilda Wherry; the average attendance is about 78. Situated at the north end of the village is a neat and substantially built WESLEYAN CHAPEL. Close to the Railway Station is a large and comfortable hotel, kept by H. C. Collier, called the Royal Dart Yacht Club and Family Hotel. The Royal Dart Yacht Club has its club rooms in the same.

POST OFFICE at Mr. James Paddon's. Letters are received at 7.40 a.m. and 7.5 p.m. week days, and

KNACKERS KNOWLE. (See Egg Buckland and St. Budeaux.)

KNOWSTONE parish includes the village of East Knowstone, about a mile from the church, the hamlet of Rochill, and is in South Molton union, hundred, county court district, rural deanery, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. The parish, which extends over 4989 acres of land, of which 1219 are common and 219 moorland, had 465 inhabitants (244 males, 221 females) in 1871, living in 92 houses. Knowstone village is on a bold eminence, encompassed by lofty hills 9 miles E. by S. of South Molton; and there are some houses in the parish among the high moorlands near the sources of the river Yeo. Sir Robert George Throckmorton, Bart., is lord of the manor, and owner of the manor-house called Knowstone Beaple, which was so called from its ancient owners, and was long a seat of the Pollards. J. Handford, Esq., Mr. Joseph Hill, and many smaller owners, have estates in the parish. The manor of Wadham belonged to Ulf at Domesday Survey, and his descendants took the name of Wadham. Shapcote was long held by a family of its own name, and they sold it about 1770 to the Handfords. Sir John Berry, an eminent naval officer in the reign of Charles II., was born at the Vicarage. The CHURCH (St. Peter) is a small ancient structure, with a tower and three bells, and was repaired many years ago. The rectory was appropriated to Hartland Abbey, but the great tithes have been mostly sold to the landowners. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £26 10*s.* 10*d.*, with that of Molland annexed to it, is in the patronage of Sir R. G. Throckmorton, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. John Matthews, who resides in the vicarage house. The glebe is 51 acres. The vicarial tithes of this parish were commuted in 1842, for £301, and those of Molland for £339 per annum. The poor have £3 8*s.* a year out of Edgerley and Bowden estates, left by H. Brooke and others, and the interest of £40 given by various donors.

LAIRA GREEN. (See Egg Buckland.)

LAMERTON, a parish and scattered village, 3 miles N.W. of Tavistock, and 17 miles N. of Plymouth, is in Tavistock union, county court district, petty sessional division and rural deanery, Southern division of the county, Lifton hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 1333 inhabitants (689 males, 644 females) in 1871, living in 267 houses, on 7232 acres of land, including the hamlets of Ottery, Chaddlehanger, North Brentor, and Hilltown. The manor and their lords are: Lamerton, Earl Fortescue; Ottery, Duke of Bedford; Willestrew, William Weekes, Esq.; and Collacombe, Sir W. P. Call, Bart. A great part of the soil belongs to the Rev. William Gill, J.P., of Venn House, and others. Collacombe Barton, rebuilt in the reign of Elizabeth, was for many generations the chief seat of the Tremayne family, but is now a farm house. In one of the rooms is a large transom window, in eighteen compartments, containing 3200 panes of glass. In the village are several small villas and scattered farm houses. The CHURCH (St. Peter) was a large building in the Third Pointed style, consisting of nave, chancel aisles, south porch, and square embattled tower containing six poor bells, recast in 1845, which are to be replaced by six good bells. The church was restored in 1876 at a cost of £1300; the old barrel ceiling was removed, and the oak beams of the chancel thrown open. A new organ was built at the same time. The seats of the nave and aisles were of pitch pine, and those of the chancel of oak. Among its monuments was one to the memory of Thomas Tremayne, Esq., his wife, and their sixteen children. Two of their eight sons were twins, and are said to have so exactly resembled each other, that even in manhood they could not be distinguished, even by their parents. Their affections and propensities were the same, and they were both killed in the wars at Newhaven, in France, in 1564. The Register dates from the 16th century. On Monday, November 19, 1877, this church was destroyed by a fire, the tower alone being saved; the cause of the fire is unknown. The peal of six bells was totally destroyed in a few minutes, as were also a handsome memorial window and several monuments; but the Tremayne monument was saved. The rebuilding of the church has just commenced, the service being held in the Schoolroom. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £13 2*s.* 1*d.*, and now at £445, is in the gift of John Tremayne, Esq., M.P., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry John Phillpotts, M.A., who has 24 acres of glebe, and a good residence, erected in 1845. The tithes were commuted in 1840—the vicarial for £397, and the rectorial for £310 16*s.* 11*d.* a year. Of the latter £157 10*s.* belongs to R. Eales, Esq., and the remainder to twenty-one smaller impropriators. The WESLEYANS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels here. The CHURCH SCHOOL was built, in 1866, at a cost of about £700, raised by subscription and a government grant. The poor have £20 a year from Tremayne's charity, as noticed with Coryton. At Brentor, which is nearly 5 miles from the parish church, a CHAPEL OF EASE (Christ Church) was built in 1857 at a cost of £1600, defrayed chiefly by Mrs. Isabella Holwell, Admiral Octavius Vernon, and Mrs. Danby, her surviving brother-in-law, and sister, who also erected a parsonage house at a further outlay of £600. Admiral Vernon gave £72 as an endowment for the minister.

LANDCROSS, or Lancrass, a small village and parish in the Torridge valley, 2½ miles S.S.E. of Bideford, is in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Hartland rural deanery, and Shebbear hundred. Its parish, which extends over 331 acres, had 115 inhabitants (59 males, 56 females) in 1871, living in 22 houses. The soil mostly belongs to the Hon. Mark Rolle, who holds the manor. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) is an ancient structure consisting of nave, chancel, and wooden belfry containing one bell. The celebrated General Monk was baptised here in 1608. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £5 4*s.* 9½*d.*, in the patronage of the Hon. Mark Rolle, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Holmes Farrington, B.A., who has 8 acres of glebe and a small residence. The tithes are commuted at £64, and there are 9 acres of land in Little Torrington, let for £20 a year. This parish has been united with Littleham (near Bideford), as a SCHOOL BOARD DISTRICT (see Littleham).

LANDKEY, a village and parish 2½ miles E.S.E. of Barnstaple, is in Barnstaple union, county court district and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Sherwell rural deanery, and South Molton hundred. The parish, which includes the hamlet of Venn, had 671 inhabitants (328 males, 343 females) in 1871, living in 141 houses, on 3162 acres of land. The Hon. Mark Rolle is lord of one manor, which was anciently held by the Beaples, one of whom (Agnes) married William Paulet, Marquis of Winchester. Agnes sold the manor to Sir Thomas Dennys, from whom it was purchased by Sir Henry Rolle, an ancestor of the present owner. The Duke of Bedford holds the other manor, which formerly belonged to the Lorings. Part of the soil is owned by the Acland, Hodge, Dennis, and other families. Acland Barton, now a farmhouse, is the property of Sir T. D. Acland, and was the original seat of his family. The house has been recently repaired, and in it is still to be seen the fine old oak staircase. Adjoining the house are the remains of the ancient chapel erected about 300 years ago. The Acland family resided here as early as 1154, and are supposed to have their name from an extensive oak forest, called Aukland Forest, which was near their mansion. John Acland, second son of John Acland, Kt., was created knight by James I., and held at one time the office of sheriff for the county. He founded two fellowships at Exeter College, Oxford; and, during the headship of Dr. Prideaux, rebuilt its Common Hall, chiefly at his own cost. He also rebuilt several churches, besides contributing largely to their annual income. Among the parishes to which he gave charities may be mentioned St. Sidwell's, St. Mary Major, Holy Trinity, Allhallows-on-the-Walls, Allhallows Goldsmith Street, in Exeter; and Barnstaple, Bradninch, Broadclist, Cullompton, Landkey, Silverton, South Molton, and Torrington. The CHURCH (St. Paul) consists of nave, chancel, south aisle, Acland chapel, and a fine tower containing six bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1869–70 at the cost of over £1000. Three stone recumbent effigies which were found during the restoration beneath the floor in the south aisle are now placed in the aisle. A new organ has been added at a cost of £271. The seats are open. Several of the windows are filled with stained glass. In the Acland chapel are recumbent effigies of Sir A. Acland and his lady, who died in 1610; and the church also contains a mural tablet in memory of John Blake, who died in 1863. The Register dates from 1650. In the church is a curious tablet giving a record of baker's regulations in 1732. The living, valued in K.B. at £20, was formerly a perpetual curacy annexed to Swimbridge, from which it was separated in 1866, and constituted a vicarage. The Bishop of Exeter is patron, and the Rev. Ernest G. Sandford, M.A., is incumbent. The yearly value of the benefice is £300; the glebe is 21 acres; a vicarage house, which stands in its own grounds of 1½ acre, was erected in 1867. The tithes, now out on lease, were commuted in 1846 for £450, and belong to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL was erected in 1868 at a cost of £1000, in lieu of that built in 1816, and will seat 400 persons. A school has been added at an outlay of £500, which is attended by about 100 children, many of whom come from Swimbridge-Newland. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a place of worship here. The CHURCH SCHOOL, with teachers residence, was erected in 1871 at a cost of £700 (raised by subscription), on a site of half-an-acre of land, given by the Hon. Mark Rolle; it will accommodate 125 children and is attended by about 90. The late vicar, the Rev. R. K. Cornish, is now missionary Bishop of Madagascar.

The Parish Land and Houses have been vested for the poor from an early period, and are worth about £60, but are let for only £36 18*s.* 7½*d.* per annum, in consideration of fines paid by the lessees. Out of the income £20 is applied equally in aid of the two schools, and the rest is divided among the poor, together with the interest of £100, which arose from fines and gifts. The poor have also the following yearly sums:—

LANDSCOVE. (See Staverton.)

LANGTREE is a parish and considerable village, 3½ miles S.W. of Great Torrington, in Torrington union, and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Shebbear hundred, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. Its parish includes the hamlets of Stibb Cross, Stowford and Week, and had 813 inhabitants (399 males, 414 females) in 1871, living in 173 houses, on 4594 acres of land. The Hon. Mark Rolle owns most of the soil, and is lord of the manors of Langtree and Stowford; J. E. Tucker, A. Dayman, and J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esqrs., have also estates in the parish. The Tucker family have held property here since the reign of Charles II. The CHURCH consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, and tower containing six bells. It was restored at a cost of £450 in 1865-6, when the church was reseated, the tower arch opened, and the south chancel wall rebuilt. Three windows are enriched with stained glass—one in memory of the Rev. John Guard, the late rector, and the other two in remembrance of two members of his family. The church contains several neat monuments to the Bamfield, Slade, and Tucker families. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £29 1*s.* 3*d.*, and in 1831 at £523, in the gift of the Hon. Mark Rolle, and incumbency of the Rev. Herbert Barnes, M.A., rural dean. There is a good rectory-house (rebuilt by the late rector, the Rev. John Guard, M.A.), and a glebe of 70 acres. The tithes are commuted at £456. There was anciently a chapel at Buda. The BIBLE CHRISTIAN chapel, erected in 1871, at a cost of £200, will seat 150 persons; the same body has another chapel at Week, accommodating 100 persons. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1840, was enlarged in 1874, by the Hon. Mark Rolle, and is attended by about 130 children. On the common is a circular mound which still is called Castle Hill.

LAPFORD, a pleasant village and parish in Taw vale, 5 miles S.E. of Chulmleigh, has a station on the London and South-Western Railway. It is in Crediton union and county court district, South Molton petty sessional division, Morchard Road polling district of North Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh rural deanery. The parish, which includes the hamlet of Eastington, had 683 inhabitants (345 males, 338 females) in 1871, living in 138 houses, on 3819 acres of land. There are a number of scattered farms in the parish, some of which are fine old 'bartons,' especially Bury and Kelland Bartons, the former of which was long the seat of the ancient family of Bury. The manor was parcel of the manor of Torrington, and was dismembered many years ago. The soil now belongs to many proprietors, the principal being the Earl of Portsmouth, and William Croote, John Kelland, and George Saunders, Esqs. Irishcombe, near East Worlington, is a detached member of this parish, at the distance of about 6 miles, and belongs to the Keats family, but was formerly the seat of the Notts. The CHURCH (St. Thomas à Becket) is a fine old structure consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, a chapel (St. Anne's), west tower containing six bells, and porch. The chancel has recently been restored, and is divided from the nave by a splendid oak screen. The Register dates form 1567. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15 1*s.* 10½*d.*, is in the patronage of the Rev. John Vicars, and incumbency of the Rev. Cornelius William Wilson. There is a rectory house, and 158 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £422. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS, WESLEYANS, and INDEPENDENTS have chapels here. The SCHOOL BOARD for the united parishes of Lapford and Nymet Rowland was formed on November 24, 1875, and consists of the Rev. C. W. Wilson (chairman and honorary clerk), and Messrs. R. Densham, J. W. Hosegood, J. Partridge, and W. Bragg. The Board rents the old National School, which was erected, about thirteen years ago, by the Rev. John Vicars, at a cost of £600. The poor have a yearly rent-charge of 20*s.* left by Alexander Arundel in 1627.

POST OFFICE at Mr. W. Isaacs. Letters are received at 9 a.m., and are despatched at 6 p.m. from Morchard Bishop, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

LEWTRENCHARD, on the banks of the small river Lew, about 8½ miles N. of Tavistock, and E. by N. of Launceston, is a parish in Tavistock union and county court district, Lifton petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Lifton hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Tavistock rural deanery. It had 360 inhabitants (184 males, 176 females) in 1871, living in 74 houses, on 2818 acres of land, rising boldly from the valley, and yielding slate and limestone. It includes a great part of the village of Lew Down, which is on the turnpike road, and is partly in the parishes of Marystowe and Thrushelton. It has a cattle fair on the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in November. The Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould is lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil. Lew House is a neat mansion, with tasteful grounds, commanding delightful views. Orchard Barton, formerly the seat of the Woods, is an interesting Elizabethan house. The CHURCH (St. Peter) is a small antique fabric, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, and a small tower containing five bells. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 13*s.* 4*d.*, is in the patronage of the Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Baring-Gould, who has 80 acres of glebe and a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £270 a year. The National School was built in 1841. A manganese mine was formerly worked in the parish, and yielded for some time 10,000 tons a year.

POST OFFICE at Miss Ann Rice's. Letters viâ Lew Down are received at 7.30 a.m., and despatched at 6 p.m. Lifton is the nearest Money Order Office.

LIDFORD. (See Lydford.)

LIFTON is a parish and a considerable village, pleasantly situated in the valley of the river Lyd, about a mile from its confluence with the Tamar, 4 miles E. of Launceston, and 15 miles W.S.W. of Okehampton. It has a station on the Launceston and Tavistock branch of the South Devon Railway. It is in Tavistock union, Launceston county court district, Lifton hundred and petty sessional division, Totnes archdeaconry, Southern division of the county, and Tavistock rural deanery. The parish had 1519 inhabitants (755 males, 764 females) in 1871, and comprises 5982 acres of land, including about 600 acres of plantation, the hamlets of Tinney, High Cookworthy, Beara and Lifton Down; also West Week, a detached part of Lifton, adjacent to the parish of Virginstow. The manor of Lifton was given by King John to Agatha, who had been his mother's nurse. It afterwards passed to various families, and was sold in September, 1845. F. Bradshaw, Esq. (the lord of the manor), W. C. Rayer, Esq., S. T. Kekewich, Esq., J. Tremayne, Esq., and Mrs. Kelly are the principal owners of the soil. LIFTON HIGHWAY BOARD meets on the second Thursday in every month, except July and August. Reginald B. Gill, Esq., is treasurer; and Mr. John L. Cowlard, clerk.

Limestone, lead ore, manganese, &c., is obtained in the parish. A large cattle fair is held in the village on February 13. PETTY SESSIONS for Lifton division are held in the justices' meeting room on the last Thursday in the month by the following magistrates:—Reginald Kelly, Esq., F. Bradshaw, Esq., J. H. Deakin, Esq., John Tremayne, Esq., M.P., T. E. Manning, Esq., E. Coode, Esq., T. H. Newman, Esq., S. C. Hamlyn, Esq., and the Rev. H. J. Morshead. Messrs. Cowlard and Cowlard are their clerks. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is an ancient structure consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, and a lofty square tower, surmounted by crocketed pinnacles, and containing eight bells and a clock. There are monuments to the Harris and Dynham families. The Register dates from 1653. The living is a rectory valued in K.B. at £31 2*s.* 11*d.*, in the patronage of Frank Bradshaw, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. William W. Martyn, B.A., who has a good residence and 21 acres of glebe. The rectory house was formerly the manor house and the property of the Earls of Westmorland, and has walls of an extraordinary thickness. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £540 3*s.* 4*d.* a year. The BAPTISTS, WESLEYANS, and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels here. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1871 by Henry Bradshaw, Esq. In the village is a Literary Institute.

LITTLEHAM (near Bideford), a parish in Bideford union, Bideford county court district and petty sessional division, Bideford polling district of North Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry, Hartland deanery, and Shebbear hundred, had 394 inhabitants (187 males, 207 females) in 1871, living on 1250 acres of land. Sir George S. Stucley, Bart., is lord of the manor, and he and Richard Sanders, Esq., are the chief owners of the soil. There is a large brewery and malthouse in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Swithun) is a small antique fabric, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle and south porch, with a tower and four bells. Four of its windows are enriched with stained glass, and the fabric was substantially and ornamentally repaired in 1874, at the joint expense of the rector and R. Sanders, Esq. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £14 16*s.* 10½*d.*, and in 1831 at £241, and is in the gift of and now held by the Rev. J. L. Harding, B.A., who has 97 acres of glebe, and an elegant residence, in the Grecian style, with a beautiful lawn, &c. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £204 per annum. The WESLEYANS have a small chapel here. A SCHOOL BOARD for the united district of Littleham and Landcross was formed on January 9, 1875, and consists of the Rev. J. L. Harding (chairman), the Rev. E. H. Farrington, and Messrs. William Harris, William Heywood, and John Bale. Mr. James S. Braund, of Bideford, is the clerk. A BOARD SCHOOL was erected in 1877, at a cost of £600, and will accommodate 90 children. The poor have the interest of £16 10*s.*

LITTLEHAM parish has a small straggling village on the sea coast, about one mile E. of Exmouth, and 13 miles S.E. by S. of Exeter. It is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. It had 3652 inhabitants (1548 males, 2104 females) in 1871, living in 759 houses; the area is 2671 acres, and includes 640 acres of water. The portion of Exmouth town which is in this parish contained at that time 3408 persons (1442 males, 1966 females), living in 706 houses. The manor of Littleham was anciently held by the Earls of Devon, and was given in 1122 to Sherborne Abbey. After the Dissolution it was granted to Sir Thomas Dennis. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle and the Hon. Mark George Kerr Rolle are lords of the manor and owners of nearly all the parish. John D. Pratt, Esq., owns an estate here, and there are several leasehold properties, which will shortly fall into the Rolle estate. The CHURCH (St. Margaret) is an ancient structure, and comprises nave, chancel, south aisle, transept, and embattled tower containing five bells. A window is enriched with stained glass in memory of Louisa Wentworth Agassiz, and a smaller one in memory of Admiral Christopher John W. Nesham. In the chancel is a monument to the widow of the celebrated Lord Nelson, and to her son, whom she survived eleven months. She died in London, May 6, 1831, and was buried here. An ancient fine wooden screen, in a good state of preservation, extends across the church. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £15 12*s.* 6*d.*, and in 1831 at £191, with the curacy of Exmouth annexed. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are appropriators of the rectorial tithes and patrons of the benefice. The Rev. W. H. D. Purcell, B.A., is the vicar, and the Rev. James Boucher, M.A., and W. Gordon, B.D., are the curates. The late vicar receives a pension of £100 a year from the vicarial tithes, which are commuted at £383; the great tithes are commuted at £112 a year. There is a good modern vicarage house and a glebe of 60 acres. In the 16th century there was an ancient dilapidated chapel of St. Saviour at Chickstow in this parish. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built by the late Lord Rolle, and is endowed from charities, as noticed below. (For SCHOOL BOARD see Exmouth, p. 442.)

CHARITIES BELONGING TO LITTLEHAM, EXMOUTH, &c.—In 1628 Robert Drake granted to feoffees in trust for charitable and public uses in Littleham and other parishes, and for the relief of his poor relations, Perry's and Westcott's tenements, comprising 72 acres; one half of the rents of 149 acres of land and six houses in Withycombe Rawleigh; and also the great tithes of that parish, now commuted at £200 12*s.* a year. A great portion of the land belonging to this charity has been sold, by permission given by the Charity Commissioners in 1871, and the money invested in the Three per Cent. Consols. The following sums are now paid by the trustees: £65 to Budleigh School, £40 to Withycombe School, £80 to Littleham-with-Exmouth

School, and a portion to poor relatives of the donor. The sums of £250, given by Sir John Elwell in 1724, and £50, given by his father, were invested in the purchase of £436 13*s.* 7*d.* Three per Cent. Consols. The dividends of this stock are applied for the education of poor children—for which purpose two-fifths belong to this parish and three-fifths to East and West Teignmouth. The dividends of £184 19*s.* 2. Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with £100 left by Sarah Spry in 1788, are distributed in linen among the poor of Littleham parish. Lord Newark in 1818 left £10 to the poor; but the money was withdrawn from the bank in 1832, when the cholera was at Exmouth, and spent in soup, wine, &c., for the poor. In 1844 B. Davey Floud left £100 to the churchwardens and overseers of Littleham and Exmouth, in trust, to distribute the interest yearly in bread among the poor parishioners. The poor have £1 13*s.* 4*d.* a year from a bequest of Mrs. Parker, given at the discretion of the vicar. The dividends of £94 11*s.* 2*d.*, derived from a bequest of a Mrs. Spicer, are given by the vicar and churchwardens to poor parishioners not receiving parochial relief. The Rev. James Boucher, curate of Littleham, purchased £547 3*s.* 11*d.* New Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Stock, and by deed dated November 1871 directed that the annual interest should be divided in equal portions and given to the blanket, coal and clothing charities of Littleham-cum-Exmouth. He also gave, at the same time, a similar gift to the parish of East Budleigh; and in 1875 invested £300 in the Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities (the dividends to be given in bread to the poor parishioners), and £300 also invested in the Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, the interest arising therefrom to be given to the widows, or the deserving poor, incapacitated from working by age or infirmity, in the parish of Littleham-cum-Exmouth—each recipient may receive twelve quartern loaves during the year. William Cole Cole, Esq., J.P., of Highfield House, Exmouth, left by will in 1873 the sum of £200 invested in the Three per Cents. for the poor of Littleham-cum-Exmouth, the dividends of which are given in bread and flannel.

LITTLE HEMPSTON is a parish and scattered village, in a valley opening to the Dart, 2 miles N.E. of Totnes, and is in Totnes union, county court district, archdeaconry, and rural deanery, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Haytor hundred, and Eastern division of the county. It had 231 inhabitants (126 males, 105 females) in 1871, living in 53 houses, on 1270 acres of land. The manor, anciently held by the Arundells, belongs to the Duke of Cleveland and the Countess of Sandwich; but F. Cornish, Esq., and other freeholders have estates here. Gatcombe, a seat which was rebuilt by the late C. Cornish, Esq., was the birthplace of Zachary Bogan, a learned divine, who published treatises on the idioms of Homer and Hesiod. The CHURCH (St. John) is a small, antique fabric, and the living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £19 15*s.* 2½*d.*, and in 1831 at £201, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. FitzHenry Hele, M.A. The glebe is 56A. 2R. 11P., and the tithes were commuted in 1838 for £207 per annum. £138 left to the poor by Christopher Blackhall and other donors, was laid out in 1727, in the purchase of Dreadon's land (10 acres), now let for about £17 a year. The poor parishioners have also a yearly rent-charge of £9 5*s.* 6*d.*, out of the great tithes of Berry Pomeroy, left by William Bogan in 1723. They have likewise the dividends of £111 2*s.* 3*d.* Old South Sea Annuities, purchased in 1744, with arrears of the rent-charge.

LITTLE TORRINGTON, a parish and pleasant village, nearly 2 miles S. of Great Torrington, is in Torrington union and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Shebbear hundred Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. It had 622 inhabitants (285 males, 337 females) in 1871, living in 118 houses, on 2880 acres of land, and includes the village of Taddiport on the south-west side of the river Torridge, opposite Great Torrington. The manors of Little Torrington and Taddiport belong to the representatives of the late Mrs. Stevens. Cross, which was long the residence of the Stevens family, and now belonging to the heirs of the late Thomas Stevens, Esq., is at present tenanted by J. G. Johnson, Esq., M.P. Potheridge manor belongs to the Hon. Mark Rolle. The CHURCH (St. Giles) is an ancient structure, and was restored in 1857 (during the incumbency of the present rector, the Rev. George de Carteret Guille) at a cost of £1200. The present rector enlarged and rebuilt the chancel at his own cost. The Stevens' aisle was rebuilt by the late Mrs. Sophia Stevens, widow of Thomas Stevens, Esq., of Cross, Winscott, and Velstone. The stained glass windows in the chancel and in Stevens' aisle, are by Beer, of Exeter. The east window of the chancel illustrates (in medallion) the Nativity, the Adoration of the Magi, the Baptism, the Last Supper, the Crucifixion, the Ascension, and the Descent of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost; the east window of the aisle depicts Christ Blessing Little Children. In the Stevens' aisle is an old epitaph on stone in memory of the Copplestone family of Woodlands in this parish; also a monument to the memory of Thomas Stevens, Esq., of Cross, barrister-at-law, and recorder of Exeter. In the south wall of the chancel is a curious brass in memory of Joan Phesant, wife of Peter Phesant, Esq., attorney-general to Queen Elizabeth. She was mother to Susanna, wife of John Phipps, D.D., rector of this parish. The church also contains monuments to other members of the Stevens family. The Register dates from 1662. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £14 18*s.* 11½*d.*, and in 1831 at £452, in the patronage of the Hon. Mark Rolle, the representatives of the late Mrs. Sophia Stevens, and Miss Buckingham, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Geo. de Carteret Guille, M.A. There is a glebe of 45 acres, and a rectory house, which has been enlarged by the present incumbent. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £471 a year. The Magdalen Lands were anciently part of the endowment of a Lepers' Hospital at Taddiport. They comprise two fields (8 acres), several gardens, and thirteen cottages, let for about £13 a year. There are also 2 acres, called Chapel Field, the rent of which (£4) is contributed as part payment for the celebration of Divine Service once on a Sunday in Taddiport Chapel, which chapel was formerly connected with the Lazar Hospital. The chapel is repaired out of the rents of the Magdalen lands belonging to Great and Little Torrington parishes. The annual residue of this charity is distributed among the poor of these respective parishes. The PAROCHIAL SCHOOL, near the church, built in 1840 by the late Mrs. Stevens, was enlarged in 1873 at a cost of £200. Taddiport Infant School was erected in 1873, at an outlay of £160, raised by subscriptions. The site was given by E. Dayman, Esq., of Membury, who has land in the parish. The poor of Little Torrington have £7 a year, out of Grey Friars' estate, at Canterbury, purchased with £120 left by Mr. John Hart. This charity is under the management of the rector of Little Torrington.

LODDISWELL is a parish and considerable village, pleasantly situated on rising ground, on the western side of the river Avon, 3 miles N.N.W. of Kingsbridge. It is in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Kingsbridge polling district of South Devon, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. It had 804 inhabitants (413 males, 391 females) in 1871, living in 187 houses, on 3554 acres of land. The manor of Loddiswell is in two moieties belonging to Lieutenant George Osmond and Nicholas Pitts, Esq.; that of Webbiton belongs to Miss Carew, and that of Staunton to Thomas Wyse Weymouth, Esq., of Woolston House. Alleron belongs to Colonel Dacres Wise, who resides there, and several small owners have estates here. In 1463 Thomas Gill had licence to castellate his house at Hack Arundell, and enclose a park, but it had long been reduced to a farm house. Hazlewood, a large and handsome mansion, with extensive grounds, is the country seat of James Peek, Esq., of Devonport. It was erected in 1830, by the late Richard Peek, Esq., after retiring from business as a London merchant. A copper mine was opened in the parish in 1825, and was taken by a company of adventurers in 1836, but has since been closed. Blackdown Hill, at the north end of the parish, commands extensive views, and has evident traces of a large entrenchment. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is an ancient structure of mixed architecture, and consists of chancel with chancel aisle (called the Hatch aisle), nave, south aisle, north transept, and tower containing six bells. The church was thoroughly restored about twelve years ago, at a cost of £1500, defrayed by subscription. In 1857 new bells were hung, at a cost of nearly £200, defrayed by subscriptions. The east window of the chancel, of five lights, is filled with stained glass, designed by Baillie, of London, and inserted by William Peek, Esq., in memory of his mother, who was a native of the parish; it contains a representation of West's picture of Christ Blessing Little Children. In the transept is another window, enriched with stained glass, executed by Beer, of Exeter, and containing representations of St. Michael and the two patron saints of the diocese; it is in memory of the Wise family, and was inserted by the late Miss Ellinor Wise. The church contains a very good old font of red granite, and a fine organ by Dicker, of Exeter. The church retains many of its old oak seats, and has several tablets in memory of the Wise family, formerly of Woolston, and now of Alleron. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £26 0*s.* 2½*d.*, and in 1831 at £286, with the curacy of Buckland-tout-Saints annexed, and is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Townend, M.A., who has 111 acres of glebe and a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1838—the vicarial for £261 and the rectorial for £281. Of the latter, £266 belongs to Mrs. Freke, and £15 to the patron. The CONGREGATIONAL CHAPEL, a substantial and commodious building, was erected in 1864, at a cost of £1000, half of which was given by the late Richard Peek, Esq., and the remainder was raised by subscription. A harmonium was placed in the church in 1876, at a cost of £35, raised by subscription. There is also a CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH at Hazlewood, which was built by the late Richard Peek, Esq., and which, together with the house for the minister, cost £1000. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel at Staunton. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was erected in 1870, at a cost of £600, raised by subscription, and has accommodation for 80 scholars. The BRITISH SCHOOL was built in 1853, by the late Richard Peek, Esq., at a cost of £1500, and endowed by him with £30 a year. A READING ROOM was established by Mr. Peek in 1839. The Parish Lands, &c., given by Sir Matthew Arundell in 1591, and other donors, for the repairs of the church and other public uses, comprise about 50 acres and three houses, let for about £80 per annum, subject to fines on the renewal of the leases. In 1728, Richard Phillips gave for the relief of poor people of Loddiswell, not receiving parochial aid, a farm of 40A. 2R. 8P., called Luke's Tenement, and now let for about £70 per annum.

LOXBEARE, or Loxbeer, is a hilly parish of scattered houses, 4 miles N.W. of Tiverton, in Tiverton union and hundred, and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton West rural deanery. It contained 150 inhabitants (74 males, 76 females) in 1871, living in 29 houses, on 761 acres of land. Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, Bart., is owner of all the soil and lord of the manor, formerly held by the Trobridge, Richards, and Cudmore families. The CHURCH is an ancient structure, of the time of Henry VI., consisting of nave, chancel, and a low tower containing three bells. The tower and porch are in the Norman style, and the roof of the latter has a fine specimen of the zigzag ornament. The chancel was restored in 1875, at a cost of £100. The church contains several monuments to the Laskey, Ashford, Cudmore, and other families. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £6 14*s.* 9½*d.*, and now at £135, in the gift of Sir T. D. Acland, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Mitchell, B.A., who has a residence, erected in 1858 at a cost of about £2000, in lieu of the old one which was burnt down in 1844. The glebe is 84 acres. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was erected and given to the parish about twenty years ago by Sir Thomas D. Acland, Bart. The poor have the interest of £41 8*s.* 4*d.*, derived from the gift of Daniel Cudmore in 1637.

Sherwell hundred and deanery. It had 237 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 1530 acres of land. Sir A. P. B. Chichester, Bart., is lord of the manor and owner of most of the soil, but Sir Frederick Williams and Messrs. John and Richard Clarke have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and south porch. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B at £9 16*s.* 4½*d.*, and now at £230, is in the patronage of Sir A. P. B. Chichester, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. J. H. Chichester, of Arlington, who has 21 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £182 10*s.* a year. The poor have the interest of £21, left by various donors. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, which has an attendance of 50 children, was built by the rector, who entirely supports it.

LUFFINCOTT, a small parish in the Tamar Valley, 6 miles S. of Holsworthy, is in Holsworthy union, county court district and petty sessional division, Holsworthy polling district of South Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry and Holsworthy deanery, and Black Torrington hundred; and had 62 inhabitants (34 males, 28 females) in 1871, living in 12 houses, on 971 acres of land. Lady Molesworth, Francis Bradshaw, Esq., and Mr. John V. Spettigue are the principal owners of the soil. The CHURCH (St. James) is a very plain structure, and was rebuilt by the parishioners about 100 years ago. The Register dates from 1666. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £5 6*s.* 8*d.*, and now at £115, is in the gift of Francis Bradshaw, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Franke Parker, M.A., who has 61 acres of glebe and a good house. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £68 5*s.* a year. LUNDY ISLAND, though situated in the Bristol Channel, about 18 miles W. of the mainland, is a detached member of Braunton hundred. It is about 3 miles long and 1 broad, and had 144 inhabitants (110 males, 34 females) in 10 houses, on 920 acres of land. It is in no union, but in Bideford county court district. On account of the lofty rocks with which it is encompassed, it is inaccessible, except by a narrow entrance on the eastern side, where a small beach admits a secure approach, and is sheltered by a detached portion of rock called the Isle of Rats. There are on the island a farmhouse and a few small cottages. It belongs to William Heaven, Esq. It has for a long time been famous for butter, and the feeding of cattle and sheep; and some parts are in tillage, and produce good crops of oats, turnips, potatoes, &c. Towards the northern extremity, the island rises to the height of 800 feet above the level of the sea, and is terminated by a lofty pyramidal rock, called the Constable. The earliest known proprietors were the Montmorencys, the English branch of which family bore the name of de Marisco. In the reign of Henry III. the Marisco family had degenerated into pirates, and one of them, William de Marisco, was captured on the island, and was executed at the Tower of London. Edward II., when he was hurried by his disaffected nobles from one part of the kingdom to another, had thoughts of retiring to this island for safety; but he was driven by the wind to Glamorganshire, where he was afterwards betrayed by the Welsh. The chief antiquities on the island are what is called Marisco's Castle and the ruins of St. Anne's Chapel. The castle is near the south-east end, and was strongly fortified with large outworks and a ditch. In the reign of Charles I., Lord Say and Seale held this fortress for the king; and in the time of William and Mary, the French surprised it by a stratagem, and plundered and kept it for some time. About the middle of last century this island was sold by Government to a nobleman, who entrusted it to the care of Benson, a notorious smuggler, and member of Parliament, who was at length obliged to make a precipitate flight. It afterwards belonged to Sir J. B. Warren, and has since frequently changed owners. In 1840 it was sold for 9400 guineas. Some years ago two excellent lighthouses were erected upon it; and it has lately been discovered to have a good roadstead, in which a large fleet might ride securely in easterly gales.

Heaven Mr William

LUPPITT is a parish and village on a bold range of hills, 4 miles N. by E. of Honiton, and 11 miles S.E. from Wellington Railway Station. It is in Honiton union, county court district and petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell and Honiton rural deanery. It had 649 inhabitants (338 males, 311 females) in 1871, living in 130 houses, on 4293 acres of land. The ancient name of the parish was Lovepit; it then became Lovapit, and finally Luppitt. The parish includes Shapcombe tithing, the small hamlets of Beacon and Shaugh, and a common of more than 600 acres. The baronial family of Carew were formerly lords of the manor, and were seated until the 16th century at Mohun's Ottery, now a farmhouse in this parish. A. F. Bernard, Esq., of Combe Raleigh, the lord of the manors of Luppitt and Mohun's Ottery, George P. Blake, Esq., the Helyar family, and Mr. Story are the principal owners of the soil. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is in the Early English style, and has been, with the exception of the chancel, thoroughly restored, at a cost of £900. The church contains some ancient monuments of the Carew family, and was appropriated to Newenham Abbey. The living, a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £13 6s. 10½d., and in 1831 at £121, is in the patronage of Mrs. C. J. Helyar, and incumbency of the Rev. George Watts Grainger, B.A. The glebe is 5A. 22P. Nearly £2000 has been raised by the present incumbent to add to the glebe and to build a new parsonage. The tithes were commuted in 1840, the vicarial for £140, and the rectorial for £150; the latter belong to Mrs. Helyar. There was anciently a free chapel at Mohun's Ottery, and the Presbyterians had formerly a meeting-house at Shaugh. A handsome SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, has recently been completed at a cost of £900. A house and 2½ acres of land, now let for £6 a year, belong to the church for repairs.

LUSTLEIGH or Listleigh, a parish and a small village on the Great Western Railway, is situated in a romantic comb, opening to the valley of the West Teign, or Bovey river, 3½ miles S.S.E. of Moreton Hampstead. It is in Newton Abbot union, Newton Abbot and Torquay county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 318 inhabitants (158 males, 160 females) in 1871, living in 64 houses, on 2939 acres of land. Half of the parish is open commons and waste and the eastern side of Dartmoor. On the common called Lustleigh Cleve, is a fine range of rocks and crags; and in the vicinity is a logan stone, and some other Druidical remains. The manor was dismembered many years ago, and the soil belongs to Thomas Wills and Frank Wills, Esqrs.. Rev. T. Gould, and several resident freeholders. Barne Court was anciently the seat of the Barnehouse family. The CHURCH (St. John) is an antique fabric, with a tower containing five bells. In niches in the wall of the north aisle lie the effigies of Lord and Lady Dinham, and against the east wall of that aisle is the figure of a crusader, supposed to represent Sir William Prowse. The font is Norman, and the finely carved oak screen has been recently restored in the centre with great care. Several of the windows are enriched with stained glass. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £16 7s. 6d., is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. F. Ensor, B.A. The tithe rent-charge is £200, and there are 36 acres of glebe. The house is large and handsome, and a large part of it is of very early date. The BAPTISTS and PLYMOUTH BRETHREN have chapels here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on November 13, 1875, and consists of 7 members, 2 being representatives of the contributory parish of Bovey Tracey. The members are the Rev. F. Ensor (chairman), and Messrs. Thomas Wills (vice-chairman), Thomas Amery, H. Clarke and T. French. Mr. Thomas Amery, of Sanduck Farm, is clerk to the Board. The school with teachers' residence, was erected in 1876, at a cost of nearly £1200, to accommodate 75 children. There is an endowment of the present value of £8 10s. which, subject to the approval of the Charity Commissioners, is applied by the feoffees to the maintenance of a Sunday school.

LUTON is a small village and an ecclesiastical district formed in 1866 out of the mother parish of Bishop's Teignton, and had 226 inhabitants (115 males, 111 females) in 1871, living in 49 houses, on 1570 acres of land. Luton village is situated in a lovely secluded valley, about 4 miles from Teignmouth, 2¾ miles from Bishop's Teignton, and ¾-mile from Ideford. The ecclesiastical district includes the hamlet of Ashwell, about ½ mile from Bishop's Teignton. The church school and parsonage were erected about 1853, chiefly through the exertions of the present vicar of Bishop's Teignton, and the late Captain and Mrs. Rhodes. The CHURCH (St. John the Evangelist) is very picturesquely situated, and was built in 1853, from designs by the present Bisnop Tozer. It is of Early English style, and the cost of its erection was £1000. The East window is filled with stained glass, executed by Messrs. Clayton and Bell, in memory of Captain John Henry Rhodes, R.N., and Mrs. Rhodes. The living is a vicarage, valued at £91, in the patronage of the vicar of Bishop's Teignton, and incumbency of the Rev. William Reynolds Ogle, who is also vicar of Bishop's Teignton.

LYDFORD, or Lidford, is a parish and small ancient village, on the banks of the small river Lyd, and on the western side of Dartmoor, 7½ miles N. by E. of Tavistock. It is in Tavistock union, county court district and petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Lifton hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Tavistock rural deanery. The parish had 2768 inhabitants (1852 males, 916 females) in 1871, living in 356 houses, on 56,333 acres of land, of which 2567 persons, and 54,241 acres are in Dartmoor Forest Quarter, in which the hamlets of Princetown and Postbridge are included. There are cattle fairs at Lydford on the Tuesday after July 20. The Prince of Wales is lord of the manor, which forms, with the forest, part of his Duchy of Cornwall. Lydford, though now only a village, was anciently a borough, and had a grant for a market in 1267. It is said to have had the honour of entertaining Julius Cæsar and his army on his second expedition to Britain. In the Saxon Heptarchy it was a town of some note, and had a mint. In 997 it was ravaged and despoiled by the Danes, when they destroyed Tavistock Abbey. At Domesday Survey it was evidently a walled town, and it sent burgesses to Parliament twice in the reign of Edward I. Vestiges of the walls and gates were often found in Risdon's time. Lydford Castle, which has been long reduced to a mere shell, is the place where the stannary courts were held till the latter part of the last century, and within it was the prison in which offenders against the stannary laws were confined. (See page 39). In an Act of 1512 this prison is described as 'one of the most heinous, contagious, and detestable places in the realm,' and it had not improved in its reputation a century afterwards, when Browne wrote: 'To lie therein one night it's guest, 'Twere better to be stoned and prest.' The arbitrary nature of Lydford law is proverbial in the saying, 'hang first and try afterwards.' The infamous Jeffries is reported to have been the last judge who presided in the court. Lydford Bridge crosses, by a single arch of only a few feet span, over a dark and apparently interminable chasm, under which the river Lyd is heard falling 50 or 60 feet beneath. Many stories are told of tragical events and remarkable occurrences which have taken place at this romantic bridge, near which is the much admired Lydford Waterfall, where the river falls down a deep rocky ravine, beautifully festooned with thick foliage. Higher up the river is a smaller waterfall, called Kitt's Hole, from a woman said to have been drowned there. Within 1½ mile is the Lydford Junction for both narrow and broad guages, and this will undoubtedly produce great alteration in the neighbourhood generally, and improvements at Lydford itself. On one side of the valley Mr. D. Radford, of London, has erected a convenient family residence, called Lydford Bridge, in a very picturesque situation. The CHURCH (St. Petrock) is a 13th century structure, and has a tower containing five bells. The church was restored at a cost of £1100, in 1873, when the west window was restored, several new windows inserted, the tower thrown open, and the church handsomely fitted with furniture. The expense was defrayed by the Rev. W. K. W. Chafy-Chafy, M.A., late curate. The fabric requires thorough restoration, which is in contemplation. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £15 13*s.* 9*d.*, and now at £350, is in the patronage of the Prince of Wales, and incumbency of the Rev. Morris J. Fuller, M.A. The rector lately erected a handsome rectory house, from designs by Mr. G. E. Street, of London; it is flanked by ornamental terraces and summer house. At the entrance of the grounds commodious stabling has been built, approached by a handsome gateway, surmounted by clock tower; the cost of the whole was nearly £5000. The tithes are commuted at £196; there is a glebe of 30 acres, and a grant from Government of £150 a year. The BRYANITES have a chapel here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on January 12, 1875, and consists of the Rev. Morris Fuller (chairman), Captain Westhead, and Messrs. — Duke, E. Fowell, and W. Down. Mr. H. Luxton is clerk. The School, which is picturesquely situated at the head of the village, was built from designs by Mr. G. E. Street, R.A., of London, at a cost of over £700, and was opened on July 1, 1878. The school is used on Sundays as a Church Sunday School, by permission of the Board.

CARRIER—John Soper, to Plymouth, Mon. Wed. & Sat.

LYMPSTONE, a parish and a pretty village, with several large and handsome houses, is pleasantly seated on the eastern bank of the broad estuary of the river Exe, about 2 miles N. by W. of Exmouth, and 8 miles S.S.E. of Exeter. It is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. It had 1013 inhabitants (467 males, 546 females) in 1871, living in 247 houses; the area is 1400 acres, of which 280 acres are water. The parish includes Sowden hamlet, and rises picturesquely from the principal street, which extends on a level near the estuary. Leland describes Lympstone as a 'pretty townlet,' with a 'great trade in shippes;' and it is still a very considerable fishing station, having about 100 small fishing boats, and large beds of mussels and cockles in the estuary. The village may be considered as a suburb of the watering place of Exmouth, and has many commodious lodgings for the accommodation of visitors, who throng here during the proper season. The manor, anciently called Leningston, was given by Henry I. to William, his steward. It afterwards passed to the Damarell, Dinham, Prideaux, Putt, and Heathfield families. It passed from the late Lord Heathfield to Sir Francis F. E. Drake, Bart., and he, W. H. Peters, Esq., and Miss Emma Wright, are the principal owners of the soil, but there are many small freeholders. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a fine old structure, with an embattled tower, and five bells. It is said to have been rebuilt in 1409; but the nave, aisles, and chancel, have undergone many repairs and alterations. It was enlarged in 1830, and the East window was enriched with stained glass by the late rector. The organ was purchased by subscription in 1845. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £15 13*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1831 at £300, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. G. Watson, M.A. The rectory house is a neat residence. The glebe is 12A. 3R. 14P., and the tithes were commuted in 1838 for £264 per annum. The UNITARIANS have a chapel in the adjoining parish of Woodbury, built in 1774, and a small one at Lympstone, built in 1820, but the latter is now let to the WESLEYANS. The poor of Lympstone have the dividends of £500 Three per Cent. Consols, left by William Spicer, Esq., in 1848. The interest of £20, left by John Egerton, in 1730, is paid for the benefit of the school, as also is £2 13*s.* 4*d.*, of the yearly dividends of £270 Three per Cent. Consols, left in 1818, by Wakelin Welch, who directed two-thirds of the income to be distributed in blankets among the poor. The boys' school is supported partly by voluntary rate. In 1829 John Denning left the dividends of £100 Three per Cent. Consols towards the support of the Sunday School. Miss Sophia Symonds, in 1847, left £100 invested in the Three per Cent. Consols, the dividends of which are now paid to the rector and churchwardens for the poor. William Francis Spicer left £500, invested in the Three per Cents., the dividends of which are paid by the rector, with the approbation of the freeholders, to poor parishioners not receiving parochial relief. Mrs. Harriet Wyat, who died 1860, invested, during her lifetime, £1000 in the Three per Cent. Consols; the interest arising therefrom is applied for the benefit of the school.

POST, MONEY ORDER and TELEGRAPH OFFICE, and SAVINGS BANK at Mr. Francis Horn's. Letters are received from Exeter at 7 a.m., 11 a.m. and 5 p.m., and despatched at 3 p.m. and 7.10 p.m. week days, and 7.10 p.m. Sundays. There is a WALL LETTER BOX at Higher Lympstone, cleared at 6.15 p.m. week days only.

CARRIER—Charles J. Reynolds to Exeter, Mon. Wed. and Fri

LYNTON, or Linton parish, includes the villages of Lynton and Lynmouth, and the hamlets of Barbrook, Lynbridge and Ilkerton, and is in Barnstaple union and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Lynton polling district of North Devon, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Sherwell deanery and hundred. It had 1170 inhabitants (533 males, 637 females) in 1871, living in 240 houses, on 7163 acres of land, and 30 acres of water. (See also 'Vital Statistics,' page 81.) Lynton village, which is 18 miles W. of Minehead, and N.E. by N. of Barnstaple, is one of the most fascinating on the north coast of the county, picturesquely seated in a valley midway up the hills, 436 feet above the level of the sea. It is immediately above the little seaport, fishing station, and delightful bathing place of Lynmouth, which lies on the shore of the Bristol Channel, at the feet of august rocky hills, which beetle over it in every direction except the bottom, where the united waters of the East and West Lyn fall into the sea. Here nature and art combine in producing scenes which alternate between the wild and romantic, and the magnificent and beautiful. The valleys are sunk into deep and narrow glens, with gurgling rivulets running through them, and their steep sides adorned with mantling woods and beetling rocks. No scenery in Europe surpasses in picturesque beauties the valleys of the East and West Lyn, which unite at Lynmouth, where the two alpine brooks, dashing over their craggy beds, rush from deep ravines that open upon the village to the east and south, and throw their waters under two small bridges, just before entering the Bristol Channel. A little west of Lynton is the Valley of Rocks, where the lofty heights on either side are of mountainous magnitude, but composed chiefly of stupendous masses of naked rocks, piled one above another, forming here and there rude natural columns, and so fantastically arranged on the summits as to resemble gigantic ruins impending over the pass. Vast fragments overspread the valley in every direction, and the whole scene is evidently the result of a desolating convulsion of nature at a remote period. Some of the heights command extensive and delightful views of the coast and the Channel; and from Countisbury Foreland, 1100 feet about sea level, on a clear day the eight counties of Cornwall, Devon, Somerset, Pembroke, Caermarthen, Brecknock, Glamorgan, and Monmouth, can be discerned. The magnificent scenery of the three valleys has often been vividly pourtrayed by the pencils of London and provincial artists. The parish is one of the healthiest in the kingdom, the air being pure, the water good and plentiful, the climate mild but not relaxing. Behind Lynton rises the Hollands, or the South Hill, and the village is sheltered from the north and west winds by Hollarday, and by Countisbury from east winds.

There are several well stocked shops at Lynton and Lynmouth, besides public reading rooms, and at the latter place is a good bathing place and a small quay. Both villages have much improved during the last forty years, and they now contain many neat and commodious lodging houses, for the accommodation of the numerous visitors who throng here in summer. There is good trout and salmon fishing in the rivers, and in the Channel is a herring fishery. The mouth of the united rivers forms a small tidal harbour, sheltered on the west by a pier, at the end of which is a pretty machicolated tower, erected by General Rawdon, in imitation of one upon the Rhine. The shore is fringed by a reef of large boulders, at low water more than a quarter of a mile in breadth.

LYNMOUTH was originally a small village, consisting entirely of huts and drying houses, the inhabitants being engaged in the curing of herrings. This fishery appears to have been established about the middle of the 16th century; but the herrings have not been caught in any large quantity since 1797, except in 1811 and 1823, when there were abundant shoals. When the herrings were not in season the inhabitants used to spin woollen yarn for the warp in hand-loom weaving, but the industry was destroyed by the introduction of machinery. The sea at Lynmouth rises 25 feet at spring tides, and often washes the foundations of the cottages when the wind is in the west. In 1607 many of the houses were swept away, among them being an entire row of cottages standing near the shore, and forming one side of the field on which the Manor House is now situated. Mrs. N. T. L. Roe is lady of the manor and owner of a great part of the parish, but C. F. Bailey, Esq., of Lee Abbey, and a few smaller owners, have estates in the parish. Mrs. Roe resides at the MANOR HOUSE, which is pleasantly situated near the sea at Lynmouth. LEE ABBEY, a handsome mansion in a delightful place near the coast, about a quarter of a mile from the Valley of Rocks, was erected about thirty years ago by the father of the present owner, on the site of the old manor house, which was formerly the residence of the Wichehalse family. This family came from Holland about the middle of the 16th century. The principal manors in this parish are Lynton, East Lyn and West Lyn. The manor and lands of Lynton were given by Henry de Tracey to Ford Abbey, in 1209; at the Dissolution they were granted to Sir Richard Pollard, whose family sold them to the Hancocks, and after passing through the Wichehalse and other families, they were purchased in 1792 by Mr. William Lock, an ancestor of the present owner. The manor of East Lyn belonged to the Pyne family for many generations, but was purchased, in 1803, by an ancestor of the Roes. The manorial rights of West Lyn belong to various landowners. The lords of these manors anciently had assize of bread and ale, and the power of inflicting capital punishment; the occupiers were exempt from toll in the neighbouring markets and fairs. The parish was constituted a Local Board District in 1870, and the Sanitary Authority has urban powers. The drainage is good, and the sewage is carried to the sea. The WATER WORKS were constructed in 1869, by a company of shareholders, at a cost of £2144, raised in £5 shares. The reservoir is at Shammaway, after leaving which the water passes through filter beds, and is then supplied to consumers.

The CHURCH (St. Mary) is an ancient structure, which formerly consisted of tower, with nave and chancel, the former of which was rebuilt in 1741, and additions were made in 1817 and 1833. A system of rebuilding the church was commenced in 1868, under the superintendence of Edwin Dalby, Esq. Up to the present time about £1500 has been spent, the chancel and the north chancel aisle being re-erected, and the former considerably lengthened. The reredos is of carved Caen stone, with paintings of the Four Evangelists in panels. The Norman font has been replaced by a new circular one of carved Caen stone, supported by Devon marble pillars. The church contains monuments and tablets to the Wichehalse, Browning, Knight, Vellacott, Grose, Kerkewich, and Herries families. The benefice was united to Countisbury until 1858, when it was separated therefrom and constituted a vicarage. The living, now valued at £300 a year, is in the gift of the Bishop of Exeter and incumbency of the Rev. W. L. Lawson, M.A. The tithes have been commuted for £274 a year, and belong, with the glebe of 100 acres, to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, but are leased to the representatives of the Barnes family. The original parsonage house is a cottage near the National School, but about 1859 the present handsome vicarage house was erected by the Rev. M. Mundy, the late incumbent. The CHAPEL OF EASE (St. John the Baptist) at Lynmouth was erected in 1870, at a cost of £1800, and is a substantial stone building, with a belfry at the west end containing two bells. The MISSION CHAPEL (St. Bartholomew) at Barbrook was erected in 1875, at an outlay of £500. Neither of these are yet consecrated, but are licensed for worship. A handsome INDEPENDENT CHAPEL was built here in 1850, in the Early English style, at a cost of about £500, and will seat 200 persons. The FREE CHURCH OF ENGLAND CHAPEL at Lynmouth was erected in 1870, by Mrs. R. Whitehead, by whom it is entirely supported. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL at Barbrook, a good substantial stone building, was erected in 1870 at an expense of £500, and will accommodate 150 worshippers.

The NATIONAL SCHOOL was commenced in 1818, and a new building was erected for it in 1844; a new class room and teachers' residence were built in 1871, at a cost of £700. The PARISH SCHOOL at Lynmouth was erected in 1877, at a cost of £300, raised by subscription; it will hold 90 children, and is managed by a committee of parishioners. The BRITISH SCHOOL, at Lynton, is attended by about 70 children. The WESLEYAN DAY SCHOOL is held in a room beneath the chapel, and is attended by 80 children.

MAKER, where is situated Mount Edgcumbe, the delightful seat of the Earl of that name, had formerly a portion of its parish, namely, Vaultersholme tithing, in Devonshire; but by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 61, the said tithing was annexed to Cornwall (see page 17).

MALBOROUGH parish, which includes Salcombe (which see) and the small hamlets of Combe, Collaton, Rew, Bolbury, Batson, Shadycombe, Lincombe and Plympton, is in Kingsbridge union and county court district, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Stanborough hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Woodleigh rural deanery. The parish had 2492 inhabitants (1124 males, 1368 females) in 1871, living in 535 houses, on 5310 acres, including 420 acres of water. Malborough village is situated on an eminence, about two miles from Salcombe Haven, and 4 miles south-south-west of Kingsbridge. The Earl of Devon, who holds a Court of Admiralty for an extensive line of coast, is lord of the manors of Malborough, Salcombe, Ilton, East Sewer, Bolbury, Batson, Collaton-Prawle, Hope, &c.; but part of the parish belongs to several smaller owners. ILTON had a castellated mansion, built by Sir John Chiverston in 1335, and of which there are still some slight vestiges. The Earl of Devon's estates were passed to his family from the founder of this embattled mansion. RINGRONE, a handsome modern marine villa, with gardens extended on terraces into the estuary, is the occasional seat of Lord Kinsale, of Ireland, whose other titles are Baron de Courcy and Baron of Ringrone. About a mile below Salcombe is the Moult, the beautiful marine residence of Viscount Courtenay (the Earl of Devon's eldest son), picturesquely seated on the headland between the two coves, with charming walks on the slopes of the rocks. The house is in the Elizabethan style, and was commenced in 1764 by the late A. Hawkins, Esq., and sold to S. Strode, Esq., in 1785. Horsecombe estate has been held for some centuries by the Fairweather family, and is said to have been given to one of them by the Conqueror. MALBOROUGH CHURCH is a large and ancient structure, in the Perpendicular style, with a tower containing six bells, and crowned by a spire, which may be seen at a great distance. The interior is spacious and handsome, and has an elegant white marble monument in memory of the late Lord Kinsale. The nave was repaired in 1844, and in some of the windows the stone mullions have been replaced with wood. In the chancel are the remains of a very handsome sedilia, which was partly taken down when the south aisle was extended. The church was restored in 1870 at a cost of £2500. Malborough was formerly a curacy annexed to West Alvington vicarage; but it has been separated therefrom and, with South Huish, has been constituted a perpetual curacy. The vicar of West Alvington is the patron, and the Rev. W. T. Keeling the incumbent. The vicarial tithes are commuted for £340 3*s.*, and the rectorial for £581 16*s.* a year. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners hold the latter. The Parish Lands, &c., comprise more than twenty small tenements, let for £30 a year, and mostly given by A. Bayning and R. Dyer in the 16th and 18th centuries. The income is expended on the church and the poor, except £3 to the master of the parish school, which was given by Richard Dyer in 1730. The vicarage house is being enlarged.

MAMHEAD is a small parish of scattered houses, chiefly on the western acclivities of a bold eminence, 3 miles W. of Starcross, and 4 miles E. by N. of Chudleigh. It is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Eastern division of the county, Wonford petty sessional division, Exminster hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Kenn rural deanery. It had 192 inhabitants (94 males, 98 females) in 1871, living in 38 houses, on 1165 acres of land. The parish is mostly the property and manor of Sir Lydstone Newman, Bart., whose grandfather was created a baronet in 1836. He resides at Mamhead Park, a large and handsome mansion in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1830 near the site of the old house, which was mostly built by Sir Peter Balle, an eminent royalist, who died in 1680, aged 82. It was afterwards the seat of the two last Earls of Lisburne. The house stands on a rising knoll at the junction of three narrow valleys, opening towards the coast, and backed with a high woody ridge of Haldon. The great variety of ground appertaining to this sweetly sequestered mansion, with the extensive umbrageous woods, devious paths, and charming prospects of sea and land, unite in rendering it beautifully picturesque and interesting. On the lofty woody summit of Mamhead Point stands a noble obelisk of Portland stone, built by Thomas Balle, Esq., about 1742. The CHURCH stands in the park, and is a neat structure with a tower and five bells. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10 17*s.* 6*d.*, and in 1831 at £206, is in the patronage of Sir L. Newman, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Chatterton Orpen, M.A., who has a good residence and 20 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £145 per annum. The poor parishioners have £8 1*s.* 7*d.* yearly from the Mercer's Company, London, left by Giles Martin, in 1613.

MANATON is a parish and small village on an eminence near the rocky hills and the sources of the West Teign, or Bovey river, on the eastern side of Dartmoor, 4 miles S.W. of Moreton Hampstead. Its parish is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 403 inhabitants (213 males, 190 females) in 1871, living in 72 houses on 6393 acres of land. Manaton parish includes the hamlets of Freeland and Water, and more than 2000 acres of commons and wastes, amid some of the wildest scenery of Dartmoor Forest. Hountor, a stupendous group of rocks, appears like ruined turrets and broken pinnacles, and, as seen from different points of view, assumes an endless variety of fantastic figures. The Becky rivulet flows through a woody dell, where its impetuous stream tumbles over a precipitous bed of large rocks, and forms the beautiful cascade called Becky Falls. The ancient Britons are supposed to have had a town on the spot now called Grimpound; and in the neighbourhood are some interesting Druidical remains and a few small tin mines. Bowerman's Nose is a pillar of granite resembling a grotesque human head. The Earl of Devon owns a great part of the parish. The rest belongs to the French, Nosworthy, Barham, and Bryant families, and other freeholders; and on the south side of the parish are the Haytor Rock Granite Quarries, noticed at page 500. The CHURCH (St. Winfred), seated on an altitude of 936 feet above sea level, is a fine old structure in the Early Perpendicular style, and has an embattled tower containing four bells. The church was much injured by lightning on December 13, 1779, and was restored in 1865 at a cost of £600. Four windows are enriched with stained glass. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £13 12*s.* 8½*d.*, and in 1831 at £235, is in the patronage of the Rev. William Carwithen, and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Cooper Douglas, M.A. There is a glebe of 40A. 1R. 29P., and a good residence, with a large rock behind it, assuming the appearance of a battery, and commanding beautiful views. The Church House, given by Thomas Southcott, in 1597, was rebuilt in 1818, and its rent is applied in providing books and ornaments for the church. On Mr. Nosworthy's estate is an ancient chapel, in the Tudor style, now used as a barn. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1859, and attended by about 60 children.

MARIANSLEIGH, or Mary Ansleigh, is a parish in South Molton union, county court district, rural deanery, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Witheridge hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 260 inhabitants (122 males, 138 females) in 1871, living in 57 houses on 1963 acres of land. The parish includes Alswere (or Alswear), Kemp Town, and Little Silver, and its village is situated on an eminence above the Mole valley, nearly 4 miles S.S.E. of South Molton Railway Station. About 540 acres of moor and open pasture land were broken up in 1849. Sir H. R. F. Davie, Bart., is lord of the manor and owner of a great part of the parish, and the rest belongs to Mr. William Toms, and several smaller proprietors. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a small ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in 1831 at £120. The Rev. John Edward Collyns is the vicar, and the patronage is in the Charity Trustees of Exeter, as trustees of John Davye's Almshouses in that city, founded in the 42nd of Elizabeth. (See page 360.) The founder of these almshouses endowed the vicarage with the great tithes, subject to the yearly payment of £16 to the above-named almshouses. The glebe is only 2A. 6P., and there is a parsonage house. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £165 10*s.* per annum. In the village is an INDEPENDENT CHAPEL, built in 1840. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, erected by the late Sir H. P. Davie, Bart., is now used as a Sunday School. In 1641 John Davie, Esq., charged the manor with the payment of £6 10*s.* yearly to the incumbent for preaching a sermon on Sunday afternoons, and catechising the children. The poor had the interest of £20 given by Nicholas Sanger and Henry Adams, in 1707 and 1811, but this is now lost. They have also an annuity of 10*s.* out of the tithes, given by an unknown donor. The parish is united with that of Romansleigh for School Board purposes (see Romansleigh).

MARISTOW. (See Marystowe.)

MARLANDPETERS or Petermarland, 5 miles S. by W. of Great Torrington, is a parish and village in Torrington union, rural deanery, and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Shebbear hundred, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 316 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 2237 acres of land, mostly belonging to J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., J.P., and partly to G. Oldham, and Adderley Wren, Esqrs. G. Oldham, Esq., is lord of the small manor of Twigbear. Winscott, the residence of J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., J.P., has long been the seat of his family. The CHURCH (St. Peter) was restored in 1865 in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and tower containing five bells. The living, a vicarage valued at only £60 a year, is in the gift of J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., the impropriator of the tithes, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Blundel Besly, M.A. The NATIONAL SCHOOL, with teachers' residence, was built by J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., in 1872, at a cost of £500, and will accommodate 50 children. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel here, which was erected in 1870. The Church Land, left by John Harvey, is a farm of 54 acres, let for £32. Upon it are four cottages, built by the parish and occupied by paupers. The poor have £5 a year, left by Elizabeth Cleveland, in 1785. £2 12*s.* is given in bread at Christmas.

MARLDON, a parish which includes the hamlets of Westerland, Compton, Churscombe Compton Pool, Aptor and Five Lanes, is in Totnes union, archdeaconry and county court district, Paignton petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Haytor hundred, and Ipplepen rural deanery. It had 559 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 2327 acres of land. The village is situated about 3 miles from Paignton, 2 miles from Kingskerwell Railway Station, 3 miles from Torquay, and 5 miles from Totnes and from Newton Abbot, on the turnpike road thence to Paignton. The manor of Stantor belongs to Richard Mallock, Esq. The principal landowners are the Rev. Thomas A. Bewes, the Rev. Jacob Ley, Messrs. Thomas Bartlett, Richard Dunning, George Browse,—Farwell, Richard Elias Bishop, Mrs. Codner, Mr. George Dudar, trustees of Mr. Gilbert Stephens, Mr. Robert Butland, Sir George Baker, the Duke of Somerset, Mr. W. T. Murche, Messrs. Joseph and John Hambling. The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist) is an ancient and very beautiful structure of cut stone, and has a tower containing five bells. The church is said to have been built by the ancient family of Gilbert, who resided at Compton Castle, and whose arms and crest (a squirrel) are emblazoned on a very antique painted window on the north side of the church. The edifice was neatly repaired in 1808, by John Bishop, Esq., at his private cost. Mr. Bishop, who was then owner of the Compton Castle Estate, was a descendant of Elias Bishop, who held the Compton Castle Estate in the reign of Henry VIII. The East window was filled with stained glass in 1864, in memory of the late Francis Garrett, Esq.; and one in the north-east aisle was similarly enriched in 1870, in remembrance of the wife of the Rev. J. Bartlett. The chancel was restored by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in 1874. In the church are several memorials of the Gilberts, De la Poles, Comptons, Drews, Metherells, Templers, Bishops, Bartletts, Gardeners, Adams, Eastleys, some of which memorials date back to 1602. The living is a curacy annexed to Paignton vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. Frederick Wm. Poland, M.A., and in the patronage alternately of J. G. F. Templer, Esq., and Sir Stafford Northcote, M.P. The vicarial tithes are commuted at £235, and the rectorial at £215. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL. The poor have the rent of 1½ acre of land, left by an unknown donor, and 6*s.* 8*d.* a year from Richard Kelley's charity at Brixham.

The manor of Compton was held by Osolf in the reign of Edward the Confessor, and at Domesday Survey by Joel de Totnais. In the reign of Henry II. it was held by Sir Maurice de Pole, after which the Lady Alice de Pole gave it to Peter, surnamed de Compton. One of the co-heiresses of the Comptons, about the time of Edward II., carried it in marriage to the Gilberts, from whom it was purchased by the Templer family. In 1808 it was bought by John Bishop, Esq., one of whose ancestors, Elias Bishop, held it in 1550; and it is now the property of the Rev. Thomas Bewes, of Plymouth. COMPTON CASTLE which is situated in the hamlet of Compton, seems to have been built in the early part of the 15th century. The buildings were surrounded by a wall which is for the most part still standing, and which formerly had a tower at each of the four angles. The doors and windows were protected by bartizans or projecting machicolations; and the principal entrance in the centre of the front, as well as the postern gate at one end of it, by portcullises. In one of the chambers is a curious contrivance, once covered by flooring, for the concealing of property. The chapel, which is on the north side of the main entrance, contains a piscina, and a hagioscope (vulgarly 'squint'). The tower on the ground floor has a commodious chamber, once lighted by a chamfered window, but which is now blocked up. Above this is what was probably the priests' chamber, having at the west end a curious fire-place and hearth-stone; in the wall is a singular culver to carry water off. Over this is another room, and over that a third, which last is inaccessible. The room on the first floor was entered from a gallery which ran from a doorway on the west end of the north side to the east end, at a distance of about twelve feet from the ground. The most renowned of the Gilberts was Sir Humphrey Gilbert, half-brother to Sir Walter Raleigh. He was born at Greenway in the parish of Brixham, and early directed his energies towards a voyage of discovery to America. He failed in his first attempt, but in his second voyage he discovered the straits which are still called Gilbert Straits, after him. After his return to England, Queen Elizabeth conferred on him the honour of knighthood; presented him with a golden anchor, adorned with a large pearl as a mark of her esteem; and gave him to wife one of her maids of honour, Ann, daughter of Sir Anthony Ager. He set out a third time from England, on June 11, 1583, when his fleet consisted of three vessels, one of which was lost. Having accomplished his work, he resolved to return home in the Squirrel, the smaller of the two vessels which were left. His ship, and most of the crew, including himself, perished in a storm off Newfoundland, the other vessel, the Golden Hind, conveying intelligence of the melancholy event to his country. His shipwreck has furnished a theme for one of Longfellow's finest ballads. His son John received the honour of knighthood and was 'Custos rotulorum' of the county, at the time of his death. Three of the vessels used in Marldon Church at the Communion bear the inscription 'Ex Dono Humphredi Gilbert, Armigeri de Compton, Anno Domin. 1701.' The late General Walter Raleigh Gilbert, an Indian officer, to whose memory a lofty monument rears its head on Bodmin Moor, in Cornwall, was a descendant of Sir Humphrey Gilbert.

MARTINHOE, a parish and picturesque village on the coast of the Bristol Channel, 3 miles W. of Lynton, is in Barnstaple union, county court district and archdeaconry, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Sherwell hundred and rural deanery. It is sheltered on the south by lofty moorland hills, rising above the rocky valleys of several small rivulets. The parish had 210 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 2549 acres of land, including the scattered hamlets of Kimmacott, Cherryford, &c. Sir Nicholas William Throckmorton, Bart., is lord of the manor and owner of a great part of the soil, and the rest belongs to C. Frederick Bailey, Esq. Heddon's Mouth, a small beach on the coast, is much frequented by visitors during the summer months. Woody Bay, a handsome residence overlooking the Bristol Channel, is the summer retreat of W. A. Sanford, Esq., who enlarged the house in 1873. The manor of Martinhoe or Martin's Hill was originally held, together with Parracombe, by the Traceys, Barons of Barnstaple; it derives its name from the Martyns, from whom it passed apparently to the St. Albyns, in which family it remained until 1422, when Thomas Barry and Philip Percival became lords of the manor. Crosscombe manor is the property of C. F. Bailey, Esq., of Ley Abbey, who purchased it from the Yeos, heirs of the Barbors of Fremington. It belonged for many years to Richard Berry, Esq., the third and youngest son of Jenkin Berry, Esq., of Berry Narbor, and afterwards to the Chichesters of Arlington. The CHURCH (St. Martin) is an antique fabric of the 13th century, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower containing two bells. The north aisle was added in 1867, when the edifice was restored at a total cost of £600. The seats are open and of pitch pine; the East window is filled with stained glass, and in the church is a mural tablet in memory of Margaret, daughter of Hugh Wichelse, who died in 1687. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 10*s.* 10*d.*, and now at £133, in the gift of Sir N. William Throckmorton, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Scriven, M.A., who has 35 acres of glebe and a neat and commodious residence, which was enlarged in 1843 and 1857. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £120 a year. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was erected in the village, near the church, by the lord of the manor in 1874, at a cost of £300, and is attended by about 40 children from Martinhoe and Trentishoe. The poor have 5*s.* a year.

MARWOOD, 3 miles N.N.W. of Barnstaple, is a parish and village in Barnstaple union, county court district, archdeaconry, and rural deanery, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and Braunton hundred. It had 995 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 5396 acres of land, including the scattered hamlets of Muddiford and Milltown, on the Ilfracombe road, and King's Heanton, Guineaford, Middle Marwood, and Prixford, on the old road to Ilfracombe. Part of the parish is in the Earl of Devon's manor of Braunton, and the rest belongs to J. P. S. Marshall, John Crang, George Brown, A. W. Yeo, and Robert Chichester, Esqrs., Colonel Harding, and smaller owners. Marwood was the seat and property of the Mervin family, and Whitefield the seat of a branch of the Bastards. Church Marwood was long held by the Lords Martin and Lords Audley, and afterwards by the Bourchiers, and Westcote was originally the residence of the Westcote family. On the house at Whitefield are coats of arms bearing dates 1638 and 1726. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is of 13th century architecture, and consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, south transept, and a tower containing six bells. The chancel, which is separated from the nave by a handsomely carved screen of the time of Henry VIII., was restored by the rector in 1858 at a cost of £450. The seats in the nave have ancient and finely carved ends. The font is modern and of carved Caen stone, supported on four Devon marble pillars. In the church are monuments to the Chichester, Parmiter, and Thorne families, and on the chancel floor are brasses in memory of the Rev. Simon Canham, rector of Marwood and Tavistock, who died 1662, and Ellinor, wife of Henry Chichester, Esq., who died 1663. The Register dates from the 17th century. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £24 8*s.* 6½*d.*, and now at £400, is in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick William Portlock Collison, B.D., who has a good residence and 26A. 3R. 30P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1844 for £635 14s. 2d. The INDEPENDENTS have a chapel at Muddiford, in the Early English style. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL at Guineaford was erected—in lieu of the old one built in 1829, and now used as a Sunday School—in 1873, at a cost of £900, and will accommodate 400 persons; there is a gallery on each side, and attached to the chapel is a burial ground. There is a timber building at Muddiford, in which the Church Service is held. The BRETHREN have a small chapel at Middle Marwood. The CHURCH SCHOOL was erected in 1856 at a cost of £200, and is attended by about 70 pupils. A SCHOOL BOARD was formed on December 8, 1874, and consists of John Crang, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. F. W. P. Collison, Mr. John Westren, Mr. Thomas Hayward, and Mr. Samuel Borne. Mr. James Mayne, of East Down, is their clerk. The Board erected a school at Whidden, in 1876, at a cost of £500, which is attended by 88 children. The Parish Land, about 6 acres, let for £20 a year, was derived from the gifts of Arthur Acland and other donors. The rents are distributed among the poor. In 1779 Richard Harding left £150 for schooling poor children, and £100 to be invested for the relief of the poor. These sums were laid out in the purchase of £389 15s. 3 per Cent. Consols. The dividends of £100 of the same stock, left by William Westacott in 1810, are paid to a schoolmistress for teaching three poor children. Miss Mary Ann Tamlyn left by will in 1857 £100; and Mr. John Alford left by will in 1874 £150, the interest to be used in keeping the Wesleyan chapel, school, and burial ground in repair. The sums are invested in the 3 per Cents.

MARY CHURCH. (See St. Marychurch.)

MARYSTOWE, Maristow, or Stowe St. Mary, is a scattered parish and village on both sides of the Lyd Valley, from 6 to 8 miles N.W. by N. of Tavistock, and 8 miles from Launceston. It is in Tavistock union and county court district, Lifton petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Lifton hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Tavistock deanery. It had 363 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 2895 acres of land, including the hamlets of Cholwell and Dipperton, and part of the village of Lew Down. It is mostly in the manors of Sydenham and Raddon Allerford, which belong to J. Tremayne, Esq., of Sydenham House, a large Elizabethan mansion, with tasteful grounds, on the banks of the Lyd. It was built by Sir Thomas Wise, who was knighted at the coronation of James I. It contains some fine portraits of the Wise and Tremayne families; and was garrisoned for the king, till taken by Colonel Holbourn, in January, 1645. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a handsome structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower containing six bells, and was thoroughly restored in 1866. The church contains a handsome Norman font, some Norman moulding, two Decorated sedilia, and an ancient monument to Sir John Wyse and family. The Register dates from 1654. The living, valued in K.B. at £12 16s. 0½d., is in the gift of J. Tremayne, Esq. (the impropriator of the great tithes), and in the incumbency of the Rev. H. B. Grylls. There is a residence and a glebe of 114 acres. The rectorial tithes are commuted for £87, and the vicarial for £161, and the living with that of Thrushelton forms a united vicarage. The CHURCH SCHOOL was built in 1861 by John Tremayne, Esq. The poor have £20 a year from Tremayne's Charity (see page 241). John de Thorne left land, now let for £60 a year, half the rent of which is for repairing the church, and half for distribution among the poor.

MARY TAVY. (See Tavy St. Mary.)

MEAVY is a scattered village and parish, near the sources of the river Plym, and near the G.W. and the L. & S.W. Railways, from 6 to 7 miles S.E. of Tavistock. It is in Tavistock union and county court district, Midland Roborough petty sessional division, Roborough hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Tavistock rural deanery. It had 274 inhabitants (143 males, 131 females) in 1871, living in 59 houses, on 3289 acres of land. A large portion of the parish is on the uncultivated hills of Dartmoor, near Ringmoor Down, Brisworthy, and Loveton, the latter of which is a small village. The manor was granted at the Norman Conquest to Judhel de Totnes. Sir Massey Lopes, M.P., is lord of the manor and owner of a great part of the parish, but the manor of Good-a-Meavy belongs to E. Scobell, Esq., and those of Callisham and Durance belong to Sir Francis G. A. F. E. Drake, Bart. It has its name from the small river Mew or Meavy, one of the sources of the Plym. The CHURCH (St. Peter) consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, transept, south chancel chapel (probably originally dedicated to the Virgin Mary, but now known as the Drake aisle), south porch, and tower containing six bells. The church was restored in 1874 at the cost of £650. The chancel is Early English, but the north pillar of the chancel-arch is much older than any other part of the building, and has some fine traces of Norman carving. The ancient priests' door, the hagioscope between the chancel and the south chantry chapel, and the stairs with the doors leading to the rood-loft, yet remain. The font is octagonal and of Decorated work. The porch contains a fine example of an aspersorium representing a grotesque head. The Register commences in 1654. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £13 5*s.*, and in 1831 at £238, in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. W. A. Gordon Gray, M.A., who has a good parsonage house and 25 acres of glebe. The tithes are commuted at £228 a year. In front of the lych-gate is a very ancient oak, reputed to be thirteen hundred years old; the circumference of the trunk is very great, but it is so hollowed that it appears to be supported by the outward shell connected with the roots. The stepped base of the village cross remains under this tree. A chapel, dedicated to St. Matthew, was licensed in this parish by Bishop Lacy on November 23, 1433. A BAPTIST CHAPEL was built here in 1850, and land was given for the site and burial-ground by Mr. John Dawe. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1837, and attended by 40 children.

MEETH, near the confluence of the Torridge and Okement rivers, 3 miles N. by E. of Hatherleigh, is a parish and scattered village in Okehampton union and county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Northen division of the county, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. It had 255 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 2479 acres of land in the manors of Meeth and Fryes Hele, which belong to the Preston Trustees. The CHURCH (St. John) is an ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, porch, and tower containing five bells. The building displays various kinds of architecture, including a fine Saxon doorway. Among its monuments is a very handsome one, erected in 1848, in memory of Mrs. Lamb. The figures represent an angel ascending with the deceased. There is also a monument to Dr. Lemprière, the author of the Classical Dictionary, who died in 1824. The Register dates from 1653. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 7*s.* 6*d.*, in the patronage of Mrs. Guille, and incumbency of the Rev. L. Everard, who has 25A. 3R. 37P. of glebe, and a good modern residence. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1875 at a cost of £350, raised by subscription, and is attended by 30 children. The poor have the interest of £5, given by one Madge, and of £100 left by Samuel Jerman in 1758, except 10*s.* for a sermon.

MEMBURY, 3½ miles from Axminster Railway Station, is a parish and village, on gentle acclivities, bounded by the Yarty rivulet and the borders of Devonshire. It is in Axminster union, county court district, petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell and Honiton rural deanery. It had 733 inhabitants (371 males, 362 females) in 1871, living in 157 houses, on 4089 acres of land. The parish includes Furley and Longbridge hamlets, and many scattered farmhouses, &c. It has a cattle fair on August 10. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor, which they have held since 1474, previous to which it had been given by Robert de Chandos to Goldcliffe Priory, which became a cell to Bec Abbey in Normandy. They have here a number of copyhold tenants. R. M. Davy, Esq., has a freehold estate here. Yarty, an ancient farmhouse, was formerly the seat of the Yarty and Frye families. The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist), an antique structure, having a tower 74 feet high, and containing five bells, was repaired and reseated in 1852; since then several improvements have been effected in the chancel. The Yarty aisle is divided from the nave by an old oak screen. The church contains several monuments of the Frye and other families. The Register dates from 1637. The burial ground was consecrated in 1316. Membury has long been annexed ecclesiastically as a parochial chapelry to Axminster, its tithes and curacy being in the same patronage, incumbency, and appropriation. (See page 118.) The Rev. C. H. Crooke, M.A., is the curate. The Parsonage, occupied by the curate, is a new stone-built cottage; and the tithes were commuted in 1840, the vicarial for £336, and the rectorial for £264 16*s.* per annum. The poor parishioners have 1½ acre of land, purchased with £40 left by Robert and Francis Frye. They have also a yearly rent-charge of 13*s.* 4*d.*, given by an unknown donor out of Ridge Farm. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on January 18, 1875, and consists of Mr. James Griffin (chairman), and Messrs. R. Parris (vice-chairman), James Wyatt, George Pryer, and Edward Pearse. W. Forward, Esq., of Axminster, is clerk. The Board contemplate enlarging their present school.

MERTON, a parish and neat village, 7 miles N. by W. of Hatherleigh, is in Torrington union and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Merton polling district of North Devon, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple and Torrington rural deanery. It had 632 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 3738 acres of land, including the villages of Great and Little Petheridge (or Potheridge). Lord Clinton is lord of the manor of Merton, and owner of the greater part of the soil. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle hold the manor of Potheridge, where the Monks were long seated, and where the mansion was rebuilt by General Monk (Duke of Albemarle) about 1670, but was mostly pulled down after the death of the Duchess in 1734, though the magnificent stables are still standing. Lord Clinton, the Hon. Mark Rolle, and J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., are the principal landowners. The CHURCH (All Saints) consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, south transept, porch, and tower containing six bells, and was originally erected about A.D. 1400. It was thoroughly restored at a cost of £1700 in 1875, mainly through the help of the rector and his family, and the south transept was rebuilt at the sole expense of J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq. The roofs of the nave and north aisle have been carefully repaired, while that of the chancel is entirely new. The new chancel-arch is of wood with rood beams and angels as corbels. The floor of the chancel has been laid with Godwin's tiles, and the steps are formed of Devonshire marble. The old gallery at the west end of the church, as well as the high pews, have been removed, and the edifice seated with open benches of red deal, having pitch pine ends; the choir stalls are of pitch pine, of which material the pulpit is constructed. The reredos, of Caen stone with marble shafts, which was erected about 1864, has been slightly raised, and a super-altar added. The East window of four lights is filled with stained glass, representing the four Evangelists. The building is warmed by one of Pesritt's stoves. The bells have been put in excellent order, and the chiming apparatus of the Rev. H. T. Ellacombe added by Messrs. Hooper and Stokes. The following special gifts were made:—Chancel roof, Rev. Prebendary Kempe; six elaborate candle coronæ of polished brass, Mrs. Kempe; altar cloth, Miss Kempe; pulpit-desk, altar-linen, kneelings and mats, Miss H. F. Kempe —the kneelings being worked by the same lady; cassocks and surplices, Miss F. Kempe; candlesticks and vases, Miss Mary Kempe; lectern, Miss E. A. Kempe; altar-rails, the Hon. Misses Trefusis; font ewer, Rev. C. W. Sillifant. The Register dates from 1688. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £29 15*s.* 7½*d.*, and now at £356 (nett), is in the patronage of Lord Clinton, and incumbency of the Rev. James C. Kempe, M.A., prebendary of Exeter, and proctor for clergy to convocation, who has 65 acres of glebe, and a handsome residence. The tithes were commuted in 1843 for £365 a year. Here is a neat NATIONAL SCHOOL, built 30 years ago by Lord Clinton, and enlarged about fourteen years ago. The rector has 20*s*, and the poor 5*s*. a year, left by Thomas Langdon in 1727.

MESHAW parish is in South Molton union and county court district, Northern division of the county, South Molton petty sessional division and deanery, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Witheridge hundred. It had 218 inhabitants (118 males, 100 females) in 1871, living in 45 houses, on 1751 acres of land. Meshaw village is at the foot of a declivity, nearly 6 miles S.E. by S. of South Molton, and 14 miles N.W. by W. of Tiverton. The parish is a hilly district, over which a road was cut some thirty years ago; and about 700 acres formed an open moor about forty years since, but are now enclosed and cultivated. The manor was held by the Avenells, in the 13th and 14th centuries, and was afterwards in moieties. The greater share now belongs to Miss Mary Preston, and the rest to M. Moore, J. W. P. Greenslade, Esqrs., and other freeholders. Miss Mary Preston is the principal landowner. The CHURCH (St. John the Baptist) was mostly rebuilt in 1838, except the tower, which has four bells; the tower has been since repaired, and the upper portion rebuilt. It is a small structure, and contains a handsome monument of James Courtenay, who died in 1683 at Meshaw House, now occupied by a farmer. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in K.B. at £7 4*s.*, and now at about £260, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Heberden Karslake, B.A., who has a good residence and 83A. 3R. 39P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1838 for £110 per annum. On the Moor is a school and chapel belonging to the BIBLE CHRISTIANS, built in 1839. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1875 at a cost of £200.

MILTON SOUTH. (See South Milton.)

MILTON ABBOT is a parish and pleasant and well-built village on a gentle eminence, 6 miles N.W. by W. of Tavistock, and E.S.E. of Launceston; it is in Tavistock union, hundred, county court district, rural deanery, and petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 1008 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 6617 acres of land, generally fertile and in pasturage, and includes the hamlets of Foghanger, Quither, Edgcumbe, and Chillaton. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manors of Milton Abbot, Foghanger, Week Dabernon, and West Liddaton, formerly belonging to Tavistock Abbey, and granted at the Dissolution to his grace's ancestor, John, Lord Russell. The manor of Ford belongs to J. Carpenter Garnier, Esq., M.P., and Chillaton to W. H. Chichester, Esq. Part of the parish belongs to Mrs. Edgcumbe, the widow of Richard D. Edgcumbe, Esq., whose ancestors have been seated at Edgcumbe since the reign of Henry III., but a large part belongs to the Duke of Bedford. His grace has a beautiful seat here, called ENDSLEIGH COTTAGE, delightfully situated in the picturesque valley of the Tamar, in the midst of sylvan pleasure grounds, through which the river winds in a semicircular reach, amidst some of the most romantic scenery in Devon and Cornwall. The mansion is an elegant cottage ornée, built by John, Duke of Bedford, in 1810, from the design of Sir Jeffery Wyattville, on the sweetly sequestered site selected by Georgiana, the wife of John, Duke of Bedford. To produce picturesque effect, it is built in a very irregular manner, and has many ornamental gables, in one of which is a statue of the last abbot of Tavistock. The dining room, with its emblazoned window; the library, with its choice selection of books; and the other principal apartments, are elegantly and tastefully furnished, and contain many fine paintings and other works of art. But the beauties to be met with outside the cottage form its chief attractions. The view from the terrace—the Dairy dell, watered by a running stream; the Alpine garden, with its Swiss cottage; the numerous paths winding along the banks of the Tamar, and the other sylvan attractions, are so enchantingly disposed, as to render Endsleigh one of the loveliest spots in Devonshire. The beautiful lawn, gardens, and pleasure grounds immediately encompassing the mansion, comprise about 20 acres, and beyond them are about 1935 acres of woods and coppices, and 1487 acres of plantations, to which there are private drives, many miles in length, on the Devon and Cornwall sides of the river. Permission to view these grounds may be obtained of the Duke's steward, at his office in Tavistock. The CHURCH (St. Constantine) is a large handsome structure in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisle, and square tower containing six bells. The church was restored in 1860. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £19 13*s.* 6½*d.*, in the patronage of the Duke of Bedford, who is impropriator of the great tithes, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Sir St. Vincent Love Hammick, Bart., M.A., who has a good residence, erected in 1838, and 87A. 3R. 33P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839—the rectorial for £374 11*s.* 4*d.*, and the vicarial for £455 8*s.* 8*d.* The WESLEYANS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels here. There are three SCHOOLS,—a boys' school capable of accommodating 80 pupils, a girls' and infants' school for 65 children, and a girls' and infants' school at Chillaton for 60 scholars. The dividends of £540 stock, left by Nicholas Jewell, in 1738, belong to the poor of this parish and Stoke-Climsland, two-thirds to the former, and one-third to the latter.

POST OFFICE at Mr. William Gloyne's. Letters are received at 8.30 a.m., and despatched at 4.38 p.m. to Tavistock, which is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX at Chillaton, cleared at 10.25 a.m. week days only.

MILTON DAMERELL, a village and parish including the hamlets of East and West Wonford and Whitbeare, on the north side of the river Waldon, 5 miles N.E. by N. of Holsworthy, is in Holsworthy union, county court district, deanery, petty sessional division, Holsworthy polling district of South Devon, and Black Torrington hundred. It had 619 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 4252 acres of land. Richard Lewis Tapley, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and Earl Stanhope, are the principal owners of the soil. The CHURCH (Holy Trinity) is partly in the Early English style, and has been partially restored within the last few years. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £26 13s. 6½d., with Cookbury annexed, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Dyer Anderson, who has 85 acres of glebe and a good house. The annual value of the united livings is about £500. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have two chapels and the WESLEYANS one in the parish. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on November 24, 1874. Mr. G. Braund is clerk.

POST OFFICE at Mr. John Glover's. Letters, through Brandis Corner, are received at 10.15 a.m., and despatched at 3 p.m. Holsworthy is the nearest Money Order Office. Great Torrington is the nearest Railway Station; but Holsworthy soon will be.

MODBURY is a small ancient market town, consisting chiefly of four streets, diverging to the cardinal points, and pleasantly situated at the foot and on the sides of three acclivities, in the heart of a fertile district, 12 miles E. by S. of Plymouth, 4½ miles S.E. of Ivybridge Railway Station, 7 miles N.W. of Kingsbridge, and 208 miles W.S.W. of London. Its parish is in Kingsbridge union, county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Ermington hundred, Southern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Plympton rural deanery. It had 1751 inhabitants (878 males, 873 females) in 1871, living in 338 houses; the area is 6258 acres, including 25 acres of water. The parish extends westward to the navigable river Erme, and includes 143 acres of woodland, 181 acres of orchards, 144 acres of waste, and 85 acres of common. Its population was 1813 in 1801; 1890 in 1811; 2194 in 1821; 2116 in 1831; 2048 in 1841; 1858 in 1851; and 1621 in 1861. The parish has many scattered farmhouses and five corn-mills; and the small hamlets of Sheepham, Leigh, Brownston, Penquit, and part of Ludbrook, and part of Caton. It has a small weekly market on Thursday; a great cattle market on the second Monday of every month; and a large annual fair, for cattle, &c., on May 4, if that date falls on Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday, and if not, on the Tuesday after. Modbury is said to be an ancient borough, though neither incorporated nor represented. It sent two members to Parliament in the 34th of Edward I., soon after which it petitioned, like many other places, to be exempt from this expense, on account of the poverty of its inhabitants. Among the officers appointed at the court leet of the manor, is a portreeve, who is commonly called the mayor; and by permission of the lord of the manor, he and the leet jury and officers have the profits of the fair, which they expend in two dinners annually. The woollen manufacture was formerly carried on here extensively. The town consists chiefly of small old houses, but is highly salubrious, and has numerous springs of pure water and three public conduits, one of which was built by Adrian Swete, Esq., in 1708.

Modbury is in several manors, of which the following are the names and owners:—Modbury, Mrs. Mary Crispin; Orchardton, H. B. Mildmay, Esq.; Wymston, N. W. Prettyjohn Pitts; Edmerstone, William Froude, Esq.; and Traine, Richard Andrews, Esq. Admiral George Parker, Eton College, Sir William Mitchell, the Rev. John Bartlett, Vincent Calmady, Esq., John Tozer, Esq., Ralph Dawson, Esq., and William Matthews, Esq., are the principal owners of the soil. Modbury, the chief manor, anciently belonged to the Valletorts, from whom it passed to the Okestons. Sir John de Okeston, by command of Edward II., conveyed it to Sir Richard Champernowne, whose family resided here in great splendour till the end of the 17th century, in a noble mansion called Modbury House, which was castellated in 1334, by royal licence, but was all taken down in 1705, except a small portion, now a stable and hay-loft. Tradition speaks very highly of the grandeur of this seat, and of the magnificent manner in which the Champernownes lived; and particularly of their keeping a very fine band of singers and musicians, in the reign of Elizabeth, when they are said to have sold nineteen manors in this neighbourhood. Several of them were knighted for military services. In 1642 Modbury House was taken by a party of Parliamentarians from Plymouth, and Mr. Champernowne, with Sir Edward Fortescue, the sheriff, and others, were taken prisoners. In February, 1643, Sir Nicholas Slanning, having entrenched himself at Modbury with 2000 men, was defeated by the Devonshire clubmen. In the reign of Stephen a priory was founded here for Benedictines, as a cell to the Abbey of St. Peter-sur-Dive, in Normandy, but it was dissolved, with the other alien monasteries, in the time of Henry VI., when its revenues were valued at £70 per annum, and granted to Eton College, to which the manors Priory and Penquit-and-Upton still belong, together with the great tithes of the parish. The Champernownes of Dartington are a younger branch of the family which was seated at Modbury. Oldaport, or Old Port, a farm in the south-west part of the parish, anciently belonged to the De la Ports, and afterwards to the Somaster and Hele families. On this farm, upon a tongue of elevated land, on the east side of the river Erme, where the stream spreads into an estuary, are the foundations of an ancient fort, the outer walls of which may still be distinctly traced, 4 to 5 feet in thickness, and enclosing about 29 acres. When excavating, some time ago, on the south and north-west sides, the foundations of two round towers were found, and also two openings in the walls, 9 feet wide. Near the latter is a well of pure water, in which was found the head of a spear, now in the possession of Mr. Richard Pearse, the occupier of the farm. Traine, Yarnacombe, and some other ancient 'bartons' in this parish have long been occupied as farm-houses. During the late wars, here were barracks for a troop of horse.

PETTY SESSIONS are held at the White Hart Inn, every third Tuesday, by the magistrates of Ermington and Plympton division. (See Yealmpton.)

MODBURY CHURCH (St. George) is a spacious and handsome structure, with a belfry containing six bells; the spire rises to the height of about 134 feet. The spire was rebuilt soon after 1621, but the lower part of the tower and the body of the church are very ancient, but evidently underwent considerable repairs and alterations in the 15th century. Three galleries were erected in 1716, but they have been since all removed. In the south aisle is an alabaster effigy, supposed to represent one of the Champernownes; and on another altar tomb is a mutilated statue, supposed to be the effigy of a knight of the Prideaux family. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £19 11*s.* 0½*d.*, and in 1831 at £355, with Brownston curacy annexed to it, is in the patronage of the Masters and Fellows of Eton College, and incumbency of the Rev. George Clark Green, M.A., who has a good residence and 9 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1840, the vicarial for £406 15*s.*, and the rectorial for £788 8*s.* The latter belong to the patrons, but are leased to J. H. Rhodes, Esq. BROWNSTON CHAPEL OF EASE is a small Gothic building, which was erected in 1844, by subscription and grants, and has a small endowment from Eton College. In the town is a BAPTIST CHAPEL, erected in 1805; and a small WESLEYAN CHAPEL.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on September 29, 1875, and consists of Richard Andrews, Esq. (chairman), the Rev. G. C. Green (vice-chairman), and Messrs. John Hodder, George Pearse, Samuel Callard, Richard Lethbridge, and Philip Foale. Mr. John W. Harris is their clerk. The Board uses the old National School. The INDEPENDENT CHAPEL is now a BRITISH SCHOOL, opened in 1832. MODBURY LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTION was founded in 1840, by Mr. Richard King, who was born here, but in early life settled at New York, in America, where he amassed considerable wealth. During one of his visits to his native place, he erected a neat and commodious building for this institute, and also two adjoining dwellings for its endowment. He vested the buildings in trust for the promotion, especially among young men, of literature and useful knowledge. The institute has now a library of more than 500 volumes, and has occasional lectures. The building is the handsomest in the town, and its front is in the Doric order. Its members number about 100. The Church house and garden were let on a lease for three lives, about 73 years ago, at only 13*s.* 4*d.* per annum, in consideration of a fine. The income is expended in the repairs of the church, as also is a yearly rent-charge of £5 out of Waishwell field, left by Thomas Prideaux, in the reign of James I. A Charity School for twelve poor boys was founded by subscription in 1730, and afterwards endowed with the interest of about £280, which arose from various benefactions. It is now connected with the Board School. In 1684 John Swete left a house and a quarter of an acre of land, for the residence of poor parishioners. Here is also a small garden belonging to the poor, and now let for about 25*s.* This garden is supposed to have been charged with the yearly payment of 6*s.* 8*d.* for the poor, by Thomas Hill, in 1567.

MOLLAND parish is in South Molton union, hundred, county court district, rural deanery, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 577 inhabitants (322 males, 255 females) in 1871, living in 106 houses, on 6168 acres of land. Molland village is situated at the foot and on the side of a bold acclivity, 7 miles E.N.E. of South Molton, and W. of Dulverton. The parish includes about 2275 acres of open common and moorland, rising in lofty hills between and near the sources of the river Yeo and the Duns Brook, the latter of which divides it from Somersetshire. There was formerly a copper mine here, but it has been closed for many years. Sir William Throckmorton, Bart., owns all the parish, and is lord of the manor of Molland Bottreaux, anciently held by the Bottreaux family, and afterwards by the Hungerfords, whose heiress carried it in marriage to a younger branch of the Courtenays, who were seated here till 1732, when their heiress brought it to the Throckmortons. The Bottreaux family and succeeding owners had a mansion and park at West Molland. The manor house of Molland Champeaux, or Champion, was long the seat of the Columbs, and afterwards of the Courtenays. These fine old mansions are now occupied by Messrs. Frank and John Quartly, who are noted for their fine breed of North Devon cattle, for which they have obtained many prizes. The parish has much fine grass land, suitable for breeding, though the soil is generally thin, and rests upon rock. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a handsome structure, in the Perpendicular style, with a tower and four bells. It contains several neat monuments belonging to the Courtenay and other families. The rectorial tithes were given by William Bottreaux to Hartland Abbey, and after the Dissolution they passed to the Courtenays. In 1721 they were vested in trust by Thomas Clarke for the support of a lecturer (or curate), and that office is now filled by the Rev. Joshua Bawden, B.A., of South Molton. The vicarage is consolidated with that of Knowstone, as noticed at page 519. The tithes of this parish were commuted in 1841, the rectorial for £99, and the vicarial for £339 a year. West Molland farm is tithe-free.

The above-named Thomas Clarke left two houses and 15 acres of land, called Leddons, for the relief of the poor and schooling poor children, and they are now let for about £20 a year. The poor have also the interest of £33 10*s.*, left by several donors.

MOLTON, NORTH. (See North Molton.)

MOLTON, SOUTH. (See South Molton.)

MONKLEIGH, 3 miles W.N.W. of Great Torrington, is a parish and a village in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Shebbear hundred, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Hartland rural deanery. It had 604 inhabitants (277 males, 327 females) in 1871, living in 124 houses, on 2177 acres of land, and includes the hamlets of Annery Kiln and Saltrens Cottages. The parish formerly belonged to Montacute Priory, in Somersetshire. J. R. P. Coffin, Esq., is now lord of the manor, which was given to his family after the Reformation; but part of the soil belongs to Mrs. Somes, and John Saltren Willett, and J. P. Ley, Esqrs.; the former of whom resides at Annery, a fine old mansion in extensive grounds commanding a good view of the valley of the Torridge. The mansion, which has been much altered and modernised, was for a long period the seat of the Hankford family. J. S. Willett, Esq., resides at Petticombe, and here are several smaller landowners. Sir William Hankford, who died at Annery in 1422, is said to have been the Lord Chief Justice who sent Prince Henry to the Tower, for striking him a blow on the bench. A large pottery was established in the parish in 1850. The CHURCH (St. George) is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south aisle, and tower containing five bells. The church was restored in 1863, mostly at the expense of the vicar. The aisle is called the Annery aisle, the east end being the property of the owner of Annery, and is separated from the rest of the church by a superbly carved oak screen, bearing the arms of the Stapledons and the Hankfords. The church contains several stained glass windows, and mural monuments in memory of the Saltren, Willett, Coffin, and Tardrew families. The Register of burials and marriages dates from 1548, and of baptisms from 1567. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £14 14*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £181. The Rev. Charles William Willett, M.A., is patron, vicar, and owner of the great tithes. The tithes were commuted in 1845—the vicarial for £156, and the rectorial for £132. The BIBLE CHRISTIAN CHAPEL, at Annery, was erected in 1860; and the Wesleyan Chapel in the village was built in 1833. The SCHOOL was erected in 1876 by the lord of the manor, and has accommodation for 90 children. It is managed by a committee, and is supported by subscription and school pence. Walter Stapledon, Bishop of Exeter, was born at Annery, where his family was seated, prior to the estate coming into the possession of the Hankfords. When Edward II. fled from his queen, he left Stapledon custos of the City of London; on the entry of the Queen, the Bishop was dragged out of St. Paul's, where he had fled for safety, and murdered.

POST viâ Torrington, which is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX in the village, cleared at 4.30 p.m., and another at Saltrens Cottages, cleared at 4.15 p.m.

MONK-OKEHAMPTON, a parish and pleasant village, on the east side of the small river Okement, 2½ miles E. by N. of Hatherleigh, is in Okehampton union, Hatherleigh polling district of South Devon, Okehampton county court district, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Black Torrington hundred, and Okehampton deanery. It had 237 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 1488 acres of land, including Burrows hamlet, and 23 acres of orchards. Hugh Mallett, Esq., is lord of the manor, which is supposed once to have belonged to some monastery. Captain Malet, and Messrs. Oldham, Risdon, Hill, Sillifant, Veale, and Cleave, are the principal owners of the soil. The CHURCH (All Saints) consists of chancel, nave, vestry, porch, and tower containing four belle, and was rebuilt about twenty years ago. The Register dates from 1682. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £6 14*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £131, is in the patronage of Sir S. H. Northcote, and incumbency of the Rev. J. Loveband Francis, who has a good residence and 45 acres of glebe. The tithes have been commuted for £126 per annum. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built thirty-four years ago, at the cost of £120. The poor have 20*s.* a year out of Colehouse Farm, at Broadwood-Kelly, and £2 from Clapp's Charity.

LETTERS are received by foot post from Winkleigh at 8 a.m. Hatherleigh is the nearest Money Order Office. There is a WALL LETTER BOX, cleared at 4.20 p.m. week days only. North Tawton is the nearest Railway Station.

MONKTON, a parish and small village in the picturesque valley of the river Otter, 2 miles N.E. of Honiton Railway Station, is in Honiton union, county court district and petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Colyton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell and Honiton rural deanery. It had 103 inhabitants (51 males, 52 females) in 1871, living in 20 houses, on 1233 acres of land. The parish rises in bold hills on the east side of the valley. Mrs. Gard is lady of the manor, formerly held by the Marcey, Bonvill, Mohun, Hall, Flood, and other families. Lady Ashburton owns Whitehorn Farm in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Mary Magdalene) was, with the exception of the tower, which contains six bells, rebuilt in 1862, in the Norman style, and consists of chancel, nave, and porch. The living is a vicarage, valued at £60 in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Knott Venn, M.A., who resides at Honiton.

MORCHARD BISHOP. (See Bishop's Morchard.)

MOREBATH, a small village on a bold southern declivity, having a station on the Devon and Somerset Railway 1½ mile from the village, is 2 miles N. of Bampton, in Dulverton union, Tiverton county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Bampton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton West rural deanery. It had 447 inhabitants (235 males, 212 females) in 1871, living in 95 houses, on 3449 acres. The rateable value of the parish is £4137 3*s.* 0*d.* It includes half of the small village of Exbridge, which is partly in Somersetshire, near the confluence of the rivers Exe and Barle, where the hills rise in lofty elevations on the borders of the two counties. Montague Bere, Esq., Q.C., is lord of the manor, which was long held by Barlinch Abbey; but part of the parish belongs to Richard Bere, Esq., and several smaller freeholders. The CHURCH (St. George) is of various dates, but was entirely restored in 1874–5, at a cost of £2338, raised by voluntary subscription. It consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, and tower containing five bells. The tower is Early English, the nave, 12th century, and the aisle, 15th century. The East window, of three lights, is filled with stained glass, representing the Ascension, and inserted in memory of Montague Baker Bere, Esq.; the east window of the aisle is also enriched with stained glass, executed by O'Connor and Taylor, of London, and depicting the Resurrection: it was inserted by the widow of the late Rev. Richard Bere, LL.B., at a cost of £100, and is in memory of the above Rev. R. Bere, and other members of the family. The west tower window is in remembrance of Philip Charles Cavan, and was given by his widow, at a cost or £75. There is a good organ, the gift of Mrs. Bere, widow of M. B. Bere, Esq., in memory of their daughter. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £7 8*s.* 9*d.*, and in 1831 at £200, in the patronage of M. Bere, Esq., Q.C., and incumbency of the Rev. S. H. Berkeley, M.A., who has a good residence at the foot of a high cliff, and 5 acres of glebe. The vicarial tithes were commuted in 1841 for £234. The Free School and the almshouse for two poor people, were founded in 1688 by John Brook, of Ashtown, who endowed them with £10 a year for the master; 12*s.* a month for the two almspeople; and £4 a year for repairs, &c., out of an estate now belonging to M. Bere, Esq., Q.C. The school is now conducted on the National system, and the old school house was enlarged in 1876, to accommodate 83 children. The poor parishioners have the interest of £45, left by various donors.

MORELEIGH. (See Morley.)

MORETON HAMPSTEAD is a small market town on the Moreton Hampstead and Newton Abbot Railway, near the eastern confines of Dartmoor Forest, seated on a fertile and highly salubrious eminence, encompassed by lofty hills. It is distant 12 miles W.S.W. of Exeter, 12 miles N.N.E. of Newton Abbot, 12 miles N. of Ashburton, and 185 miles W.S.W. of London. Its parish, which includes the small hamlets of Doccombe, Sloncombe and Houghton, is in Newton Abbot union, county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Teignbridge hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 1551 inhabitants (764 males, 787 females) in 1871, living in 333 houses, on 7656 acres of land. The area includes about 400 acres of wood and several commons. The soil is various, and the surface picturesquely broken into hill and valley, finely diversified with wood, water and rock. At the north-west angle of the parish, overlooking the Teign valley, is an ancient entrenchment, called CRANBROOK CASTLE, occupying about 7 acres, and having a vallum of moorstone, with a double fosse on the north, and a single one on the west, but none on the south, and only a partial one on the east side. The views from this hill are extensive and beautiful, and on the opposite side of the river are the cromlech, logan stone, and other Druidical remains, noticed at page 305. Lower down the valley, upon a bold eminence, is another British camp, called WOOSTEN CASTLE, said to be the most considerable and best preserved of any in the neighbourhood. Moreton Hampstead is noted for the health and longevity of its inhabitants, as appears from the statistics of its annuitant society. It had formerly a share of the woollen manufacture, which declined many years ago. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor of Moreton; but there are three smaller manors in the parish, viz. High Hayne, belonging to J. N. Stevenson, Esq., North Moor, belonging to G. Bray, Esq., and Doccombe, formerly held under the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, by the trustees of the late Rev. George Gregory. WRAY BARTON, a handsome Tudor mansion, is the seat of Robert William Crump, Esq., owner of Wray estate, which has passed by heiresses and bequests to the Chilverstone, Abbot, Wray, Laford, Corslet, Southmead, Courtier, and Crump families. Part of the parish belongs to many small freeholders, but Doccombe is mostly copyhold. In 1335 Hugh de Courtenay obtained a charter for a market and two fairs here, but the latter are now obsolete. The market is held on Tuesdays, and a Market House was built by the lord of the manor in 1827. Great cattle markets are held on the third Tuesday in every month. A portreeve and bailiff were appointed at the Court Leet and Baron.

PETTY SESSIONS are held at the Smethurst School, Greenhill, on the first Monday in each month for Crockernwell division (see page 27); and the magistrates for the division are the Rev. G. H. Hayter-Hames, E. S. Clarke, Esq., John Ponsford, Esq., John Hill, Esq., Edward Drummond Fulford, Esq., and J. B. Gregory, Esq. William Phillips Harvey, Esq., is their clerk.

GAS WORKS were established in 1868 by a company with £1250 in £5 shares. Mr. Edward Yelland is secretary, and Mr. Thomas Dand, manager.

The Inland Revenue Office is held at the White Hart Inn.

The CHURCH (St. Andrew) is a large ancient fabric, in the Transition style, with a lofty tower containing six bells, a clock and chimes. The interior has been restored, and contains some handsome stained-glass windows. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £49 19*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £603, is in the patronage of the Earl of Devon and incumbency of the Rev. W. C. Clack, B.A., who has a good residence and 62 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £792 per annum. Three houses, let for £30 a year, had long been vested for the repairs of the church, but were burnt down in 1845. Here are CHAPELS belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Unitarians. The old Presbyterian Chapel, which has long been held by UNITARIANS, was built in 1692, and enlarged in 1802. It contains two stained-glass windows, put in in 1873, and a fine-toned organ by Bamfield of Birmingham. It is endowed with 6A. 2R. 25P. of land at Well Parks. There was a BAPTIST congregation here as early as 1715; and Micaiah Towgood, an eminent divine, was pastor of the Presbyterian Chapel here from 1722 to 1736. The CONGREGATIONAL CHAPEL, on the Station Road, was built in 1868 at a cost of £1100. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL was built in 1817. As noticed with Exeter, this parish has £10 a year from Hele's Charity for schooling poor children.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on August 22, 1874, and now consists of John Hill, Esq. (chairman), and Messrs. R. W. Crump, George A. Bragg, Simon Newcombe Neck, and William Phillips Harvey. Mr. James Gray is clerk. A new Girls' and Infants' School was built in 1876 on Green Hill, at a cost of £1173, and the Boys' School, in Pound Street, was enlarged, at an outlay of £320, to accommodate 280 children. The Smethurst School was built in 1866, at a cost (including the site) of £650, by the late Rev. John Smethurst, who for upwards of forty years was the Unitarian minister here. It is let for lectures, concerts, &c. A LITERARY SOCIETY and READING ROOM has been established in Forder Street, which has now a library of 500 volumes. Mr. H. Ford is hon. secretary. The remains of the ancient cross stands near a very large and singular elm tree, which has had its lower branches trained so as to form a sort of hollow stage, which is said to have been once boarded over, and to have afforded room for nearly twenty couple to dance, while the fiddler sat in the boughs above. GEORGE BIDDER, the celebrated mental calculator, and an eminent and wealthy civil engineer, was born here of humble parents. Sir Thomas Fairfax was here with his army on January 8, 1646; but the town was not the scene of any conflict during the civil wars of the 17th century. A CONVALESCENT HOME, established here in 1877 by the Misses Philips, of Torquay, has room for fourteen patients. Mr. George H. Collyns is consulting surgeon.

POST, MONEY ORDER, TELEGRAPH and STAMP OFFICE and SAVINGS BANK at Miss E. A. Treleaven's, in New Street. Letters are received at 7 a.m.; delivery commences at 7.30 a.m. Box closes at 6.29, and the mail is despatched at 6.39 p.m. Money Orders granted and paid from 9 to 6 (Saturdays 9 to 8). Telegraph business transacted from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

MORLEY, Morleigh, or Moreleigh, a parish in Totnes union, county court district, and deanery, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, Stanborough polling district of South Devon, and Stanborough hundred, had 115 inhabitants in 1871, living on 1487 acres of land. Morley village lies 6 miles S.S.W. of Totnes, N.N.E. of Kingsbridge, and E. by N. of Modbury. The parish had anciently a market and fair, granted in 1315. The manor passed in moieties to the Ufflete and Maynard families, and the parish now belongs to Mrs. Hare, J. Tayleur, Esq., W. Cubit, Esq., and a few smaller owners. One moiety belonged to the late Viscount Boringdon, who in 1815 was created Earl of Morley, to which title his son succeeded in 1840. The CHURCH (All Saints) is a small ancient structure, said to have been built in the reign of Edward I. by Sir Peter Fitzacre, who, in a quarrel, killed the parson of Woodleigh, to whose parish Morley then belonged. For this crime the Pope enjoined the knight to build a church at Morleigh. The church is now being restored. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 8s., and now at £180, is in the patronage of Henry Stockdale, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Taylor Seale, who has a neat house and 16 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £150 a year. The poor have the interest of £10, given by Mrs. Oldrieve. Part of an old Roman road, extending from Garah Bridge, in the parish of Diptford, to within a short distance of Morley village, and apparently a branch of the Fossway leading to Plymouth, serves as a boundary between this parish and Woodleigh, parts of it being in a fair state of preservation.

MORTHOE, usually called Morte, is a parish in Barnstaple union and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Ilfracombe polling district, Braunton hundred, Sherwell deanery, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 352 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 4246 acres of land and 375 acres of water. The land rises boldly from the sea cliffs and includes the hamlets of Horseborough, Shesborough, and Estacott. It is 5 miles W.S.W. of Ilfracombe, picturesquely seated on the sea coast, where that narrow rock promontory, called Morte Point, juts out more than a mile into the Bristol Channel, between Rockham and Morte Bays, where there is a dangerous reef of rocks, on which vessels have often been wrecked; but a lighthouse is being erected on Bull Point. Endless varieties of actinia may be found here, as well as specimens of adiantum cap. ven. and medusæ. At the extreme end of Baggy Point, which stands out boldly from the mainland, is a precipice hundreds of feet deep, and just beyond the Point may be seen, at low water, one of the guns of 'The Weasel,' which was stranded here. At a short distance from Morte Point is a Druidical cromlech. Barracane Bay is noted for its peculiar shells, some of which are of deep sea water and foreign origin; and Rockham Bay has its beach paved with pebbles, many of them of limestone, and also of foreign origin. Woollacombe has beautiful sands over two miles in extent, and here is a lifeboat station. Earl Fortescue is lord of the manor of Over Wollacombe, and Sir John Palmer Bruce Chichester owns that of Wollacombe Tracy. The latter was long the seat of the ancient family of Tracy; and Sir William Tracy is said to have lived here in seclusion after his participation in the murder of Thomas à Becket.

The CHURCH (St. Mary Magdalen) consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, south transept, tower on north side of nave, and south porch and vestry. The entire structure underwent complete restoration in 1857–9, at the cost of the Rev. J. D. Ness, the vicar, in memory of his eldest (deceased) son. The building is generally of 13th century work, with indications of Norman or Transition architecture in the tower. The church was originally cruciform, the north transept having been altered and connected with the east side of the tower. The chancel arch is original, but those between the nave and north aisle are of very late date. The alterations in this part of the church are of the Perpendicular period. Before the restoration, many of the old windows had been replaced by others of Debased character, but the whole are now new and in the Early Geometrical style of two or three lights, with the exception of two in the north wall of the chancel. The East window, filled with stained glass, representing the Crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension, was executed by Beer, of Exeter, and is in memory of Mr. John Derby Rowe Ness. The reredos and decalogue are of excellent workmanship. Two windows, of two lights, having a priest's door between them, are filled with rich stained glass: the easternmost, designed by Hardman, is in memory of the late Thomas Lee, Esq., architect, who was drowned while bathing on the coast; the other, a memorial of Sir Bruce Chichester, Bart., was executed by Beer. The west window, of two lights, contains glass of a heraldic character, referring to the Ness family. In the north aisle are two handsome stained glass windows, one in memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Ness (died 1867, and wife of the vicar), and the other a memorial of Colonel F. Gostling (died 1874), who married the only daughter of the vicar. Besides the above, there are several other windows similarly enriched. One interesting feature in the church, the tomb of Sir William de Tracey, stands in the south transept. It has been restored as far as could be without destroying its appearance of antiquity. The sides are of freestone, with tracery and armorial bearings, and on the west end, the Holy Rood is represented in rude sculpture. The slab is of black limestone. The figure of an ecclesiastic with part of an inscription are clearly perceptible. This work is of the early part of the 14th century. The roof of the nave was opened and cleaned, and the chancel was newly roofed. The pulpit is of Bath stone, and the desk is carved in oak. The seats of the nave have elaborately carved ends, nearly all original, where not exact copies of the ancient ones. The tower is of two stages, with considerable graduation. The total cost of the restoration was £1200, of which £1000 was given by the vicar. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9 19*s.* 3*d.*, and in 1831 at £128, in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. J. D. Ness, who has a good residence and about 8 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £381. The patrons are appropriators of the rectorial tithes. The WESLEYANS have a small chapel in the village, erected in 1831. A SCHOOL BOARD was formed here in 1875, and consists of the Rev. J. D. Ness (chairman), and Messrs. George Langdon, John Chugg, William Coats, and George Heddon. Mr. J. A. Thorne, of Barnstaple, is clerk. The Board have erected a school near the church, at a cost of £1200, borrowed from the Public Works Loan Commissioners.

MUSBURY, in the vale of the Axe, 3 miles S.W. of Axminster, is a parish and village in Axminster union, county court district, petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell and Honiton rural deanery. It had 536 inhabitants (251 males, 285 females) in 1871, living in 113 houses, on 2178 acres of land, and includes the hamlet of Maidenhayne. Ash, now a farmhouse, was anciently the seat of the De Esse or Ash family, and afterwards of the Drakes. Sir John Drake, who was created a baronet in 1660, rebuilt the old Elizabethan house, which had been partly destroyed in the civil wars. His nephew, John Churchill, the great Duke of Marlborough, was born in the old house in 1650. Ash was occupied by Sir John Pole in 1778, when the stables were burnt down. J. V. Payne, Esq., is lord of the manor of Musbury, which was anciently held by the Courtenays, and afterwards by the Drake and other families. Mr. T. Wills, Mr. F. Gillett, and the Sparke and the Joliffe families have estates in the parish. A fair for cattle is held on the first Monday after Michaelmas. MOUNTFIELD is the residence of Captain J. T. Hill, whose family has possessed for many years past some very interesting articles formerly belonging to Charles I. One of them was the collar worn by him at his execution; a pair of his gloves, beautifully embroidered; a miniature likeness of that king in embroidery; his dressing case (with its contents) wrought in ebony, with silver mountings. The CHURCH (St. Michael) is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing five bells, which was thoroughly restored in 1876-7; the old pews were removed, and free open seats substituted. The East window is filled with stained glass, inserted at the expense of the Lethbridge family; and in the south aisle are two memorial windows, executed by Mr. Drake, of Exeter. The church contains several handsome monuments of the Drake family, with six kneeling effigies; and one in memory of Judge Grundy, who died of the gaol fever in 1754. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £9 11*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £400, is in the patronage of William Payne, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Horace William Thrupp. There is neither parsonage house nor glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £435. The BAPTIST CHAPEL was built in 1859. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on November 12, 1875, and now consists of the Rev. H. W. Thrupp (chairman), Mrs. Emily Robertson, Mr. William Row, Mr. Heber Loveridge, and Mr. W. H. J. Fowler. Mr. William Kilby Halse is clerk. The Board School, with teacher's residence, was built in 1878, at a cost of £1340.

NETHER EXE, a small parish on the banks of the river Exe, 5 miles N. by E. of Exeter, in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division, Hayridge hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. It had 80 inhabitants (43 males, 37 females) in 1871, living in 16 houses, on 450 acres of land. Christopher Hill, Esq., of Wanstead, Essex, owns the greater part of the parish, and has a shooting box here. The CHURCH is a small, but very ancient, structure, and was thoroughly restored in 1877, when chairs were substituted for the old pews. It has one bell, and contains a handsome font considered to be of very early date. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8 10*s.*, and now at £80, in the patronage of eight feoffees, under the will of H. Burroughs, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Paul Britton. The poor have £16 a year, left by Miss Hill, and 20*s.* a year, left by Nicholas Warren; and the parish sends a poor person to Burroughs Almshouse, at Broadclist, alternately with Cadbury.

Stoke Canon is the Post Office, and Thorverton the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office.

NEWPORT is an ecclesiastical district, formed in 1847 out of the parish of Bishop's Tawton, but forms a portion of Barnstaple municipal borough, and is noticed at page 132.

NEWTON ABBOT, in the parish of Wolborough, is a very ancient town, situated at the head of the navigable part of the river Teign, about 7 miles from Teignmouth, and 6 miles from Torquay. It is the head of a poor law union, and is in Newton Abbot and Torquay county court district, Teignbridge petty sessional division, Haytor hundred, Eastern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. The parish of Wolborough-with-Newton-Abbot is a local board district, and had 6082 inhabitants (2744 males, 3338 females) in 1871, living in 1155 houses, on 1231 acres of land; and the neighbouring parish of Highweek which includes Newton Bushel, had 1625 inhabitants (754 males, 871 females), living in 351 houses, on 2422 acres of land. Newton Abbot is the principal market town between Plymouth and Exeter, and during the past twenty-five years has increased very considerably in size and population. It may be said to form one town with Newton Bushel, in the parish of Highweek, being divided from it only by the small river Lemon, which is arched over the greater part of its course through the town, and the streets and houses are so continuous that the division of the parishes is scarcely visible. A canal, about 2½ miles long, made by the father of the late George Templer, Esq., connects the navigable part of the Teign, about a mile from the town, with a railway which was made at a later period, and extends about 7 miles north-west to the Haytor granite works, whence immense quantities of granite are sent down the river, to be shipped at Teignmouth for London and other places, where it is in great request for the erection of public buildings, especially bridges, &c. The manor of Wolborough, which belongs to the Earl of Devon, was originally given to Tor Abbey, near Torquay, by its founder, William, Lord Briwere or Brewer. Some time after the Dissolution, in the reign of James I., it was purchased by Sir Richard Reynell, whose heiress carried it in marriage to Sir William Waller, the Parliamentary General. The heiress of the latter married Sir William Courtenay, an ancestor of the Earl of Devon, the present owner. Sir Richard Reynell built Ford House, a fine specimen of an Elizabethan residence, which has been kept in its original form, and, together with its well-wooded lawn, preserved with great care. On September 15, 1625, King Charles the First came here on a visit to Sir Richard Reynell, attended by the Duke of Buckingham and other lords of his Court, and remained several days, when Sir Richard and his brother received the honour of knighthood. Newton was the first town in which the Prince of Orange made a declaration after he landed at Brixham, in 1688. The following description, commemorating that event, is to be seen on the base of a pedestal in the centre of the town:—'The first declaration of William III., Prince of Orange, the glorious Defender of the Protestant Religion and the Liberties of England, was read on this pedestal by the Rev. John Reynell, rector of this parish, on November 5, 1688.' The prince also visited Ford House previous to his advance to Exeter. Bradley House, the property of Miss Wall, who is the lady of the manor of Highweek, is a very picturesque building of much earlier date than Ford House, portions of the 14th century work still remaining. Henry II. granted this manor to John, the son of Lucas, his butler. It was held in the 13th and 14th centuries by the Bushell family, and passed to the Yardes in the reign of Richard II. The lord of this manor had a charter for a market in 1246, and for two fairs at Bradley in 1308, which were, however, discontinued in the reign of Mary, and the market removed to the parish of Wolborough.

The opening of the South Devon Railway in 1849 gave a great impetus to the improvement of the town. It is the junction for Torquay and Dartmouth on the one side, and for the Moreton Hampstead district on the other. The station was erected at a considerable distance from the town, and a fine, broad road was formed to Courtenay Street, in the centre of the town. The ground has been built over on both sides, and formed into a continuous street, with rows of shops and private houses—many of them of good style and character. The Earl of Devon, the owner of the greater part of the property on the south-west side of the town, contributed greatly to the improvement of the neighbourhood by making new roads, and laying out his lands for building, forming the Courtenay and Ford parks, and planting various prominent points on the hills, which add to the attractiveness of the place. The builders of the district soon took advantage of this, and commenced the erection of numerous houses of various classes, from the designs of his lordship's architect, Mr. J. W. Rowell; and, seeing their success, builders from other districts have been attracted, and the hills are now studded with detached villas a considerable distance from the town. The prospect on the new Drive along the south side of the Wolborough Hill, by the old parish church, overlooking the Milber Down and the Kingskerswell Valley extending nearly to Torquay, is exceedingly fine; while on the west there are most magnificent views of the Bradley Woods, Haytor Rocks, and Lustleigh Cleave, with portions of Dartmoor in the distance; and returning along the North Road a bird's-eye view is obtained of the town, Knowles' Hill studded with villas, the river Teign, with the Haldon Hills and other scenery of a most extensive and picturesque description. There are numerous walks and drives in the vicinity, and altogether it is not surprising that so large a number of residents have been attracted to the place. The facilities for boating on the river Teign, and bathing from the banks within an easy walk of the town, are duly appreciated. The fact that either of the two principal watering-places of the west—Torquay and Teignmouth—are within a few minutes' journey by railway, is said to be an addition to the causes which have led to the great number of persons taking up their residence here during the past few years. The town is exceedingly well-drained, and is supplied with the purest water, brought in pipes from the Hennock Hills, about 600 feet above the level of the sea. The air of the place, especially of the Wolborough and Highweek Hill districts, is very healthful and bracing; the death-rate of the united parishes is very low, averaging only about 17 per 1000 per annum, including the union workhouse.

Newton Abbot Union comprises 39 parishes, having an aggregate population of 68,203 persons (30,146 males, 38,057 females) in 1871, living in 12,438 houses; besides which there were at the census 825 houses unoccupied, and 115 building; the area is 117,524 acres. The population included 85 blind persons, seven of whom were blind from birth; 34 persons were deaf and dumb; 50 idiots or imbeciles (not in asylums); 9 lunatics (not in asylums); 58 persons in hospitals, and 257 in the Union workhouse. The total average annual expenditure of these parishes on the poor during the three years preceding the formation of the union was £16,756. In 1838 it was £12,938; in 1840, £15,997; and for the year ended Lady-day, 1877, £23,562 6*s.* 8*d.* The Workhouse has room for about 400 inmates. The building and furnishing cost about £13,000. The various wards, yards, &c., occupy nearly 2 acres, and attached to it are about 2 acres of garden ground. There are 61 elected guardians. Mr. John Alsop is the union clerk and superintendent-registrar. The Rev. F. P. J. Hendy, chaplain; Messrs. Charles A. Tozer, Joseph Yolland, and John Foaden, relieving officers; Mr. John Moxey, master, and Mrs Ann Mance, matron of the workhouse; Mr. J. S. Gittisham, schoolmaster; Mrs Eliza Moxey, schoolmistress; Mr. George Mortimore, porter; Miss Harriet Bartlett, nurse; and Messrs. John Sowton, William Watson, and Joseph Yolland, vaccination officers. The union is divided into thirteen medical and six registration sub-districts. Mr. James S. Bearne is registrar of births and deaths for Newton Abbot district. The Board is also the Rural Sanitary Authority, and the expenditure of it as such for the year ended Lady-day, 1877, was £1153 7*s.* 7*d.* Mr. John Alsop is clerk, Mr. John Sowton, sanitary inspector, and Mr. L. Armstrong, medical officer of health.

NOTES, &c.—Marked 1 are in Teignmouth registration sub-district; 2 in Chudleigh; 3 in Moreton Hampstead; 4 in Ashburton; 5 in Newton Abbot; and 6 in Torquay; marked w include water.

NEWTON ABBOT is said to have possessed an ancient charter, and was formerly a borough, governed by a portreeve and other officers, still appointed at the courts leet and baron. The office of the portreeve is little more than honorary; but on the night of his inauguration, he gives a good supper to the electors, who light him home to his residence at the close of the entertainment. The Local Board of Health was established here in November 1863. Dr. Armstrong is medical officer; Mr. J. S. Stevens, surveyor; Mr. W. Roberts, collector; and Mr. R. H. M. Balser, clerk.

The TOWN HALL was built in 1868 at a cost of about £1000.

PETTY SESSIONS are held at the Town Hall for Teignbridge division (see page 28), and the magistrates usually sitting here are Col. A. W. Adair, W. Atkinson, Esq., M.D.; J. G. Beaven, Esq., C. A. Bentinck, Esq., W. W. Buller, Esq., M. L. Brown, Esq., Lord Clifford, Rear-Admiral Cornish-Bowden, Sir J. L. Duntz, Bart., Charles Eales, Esq., G. B. Ellicombe, Esq., T. H. Firth, Esq., C. C. Fletcher, Esq., Colonel Germon, P. M. Hoare, Esq., W. R. Hole, Esq., Earl Morley, R. M. Marsh-Dunn, Esq., C. J. H. Monro, Esq., Lieut.-Col. Nightingale, Col. Saville, D. R. Scratton, Esq., J. T. Soltau, Esq., Sir R. R. Torrens, J. G. S. Templer, Esq., C. Tonge, Esq., Charles Turner, Esq., J. Vicary, Esq., C. J. Wade, Esq., W. J. Watts, Esq., J. Woodley, Esq., Sir B. P. Wrey, Bart., and H. B. T. Wrey, Esq. R. H. M. Baker, Esq., is their clerk.

The GAS WORKS were constructed in 1839 at a cost of £3000, raised in £6 shares; the company was registered in 1869 as a limited liability company, with a nominal capital of £20,000 in 1000 £20 shares; only 800 shares have yet been taken, upon which £14 a share has been paid up.

The COUNTY COURT is held at the Town Hall every month, for a district comprising the parishes in Newton Abbot union, and called the Newton Abbot and Torquay County Court district. Matthew Fortescue, Esq., is judge, J. Pidsley, Esq., registrar.

At Newton Abbot is a great market for cattle, &c., on the last Wednesday in February, and three annual fairs, held on June 24, and the Wednesdays after September 11, and November 6. The old market-house and shambles stood in the middle of Wolborough Street, but they were removed in 1826, after the completion of the present convenient market place, built on an open space at the end of Market Street. In 1868 the Local Board obtained compulsory powers to purchase land and build new markets and slaughter-houses, which form a very commodious and handsome pile of buildings, and the cost of their erection was £8000. The Market and Alexandra Hall (originally intended for a corn exchange, but now used as a skating rink, and concert and lecture hall) were built in 1871, and the slaughter houses in 1877. The market, held every Wednesday, is numerously attended by the farmers, &c., of the surrounding district, and is well supplied with all sorts of provisions.

The GLOBE HOTEL, erected by the Earl of Devon, at the cost of about £6000, is constructed of granite, and has a handsome portico, and a spacious and elegant ball room, for the accommodation of assemblies, concerts, &c. This room has been recently restored and beautified, and contains two fine portraits of the Earl of Devon; the oil painting, by George Richmond, Esq., R.A., cost £1000, and was subscribed for by the whole of the Devon estate tenantry.

Wolborough Parish Church (St. Mary) stands on an eminence more than half-a-mile south of the town, and is a large cemented structure, with a tower and four bells. The chancel has three stained glass windows, and contains a handsome monument, with recumbent effigies of Sir Richard Reynell and his lady, who died in 1633 and 1652. The church was reseated in 1866, when the chancel was restored; the old oak screen regilded; the organ enlarged; and a brass eagle lectern, which is said to have been stolen, it being thought gold, during the Commonwealth, and taken to Bovey Tracy, has been placed in the church. The living is a donative, valued at £235, with the curacy of Newton Abbot annexed, in the patronage of the Earl of Devon, and incumbency of the Rev. Harry Tudor, M.A. There is neither parsonage nor glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1845 for £260 a year.

Newton Abbot Chapel of Ease (St. Leonard) was built by subscription in 1836, when the old one was pulled down except the tower, which contains a clock and six bells, and is left standing in the middle of Wolborough Street. A new chancel has been erected, open benches substituted for the old pews, the organ enlarged, and three windows filled with stained glass.

Highweek Parish Church (All Saints), in the small village of Highweek, is seated on an eminence about a mile north of the town. It is an ancient structure of the time of Henry VI., and has an embattled tower containing six bells. The church was renovated a few years ago. In one of the windows are remnants of ancient painted glass, and a window in the chancel was recently enriched with beautiful stained glass, designed by Clayton and Bell, and inserted at the cost of J. Vicary, Esq. The living was formerly consolidated with the vicarage of King's Teignton, but separated therefrom in 1864, and is now endowed with the rectorial tithes. The rectorial tithes are commuted at £133 10*s.*, and the vicarial at £245; the present vicar has £60 a year out of the tithes of this parish. The Bishop is patron, and the Rev. Samuel G. Harris, M.A., rector. There is a glebe of 13A. 2R. 8P., and a rectory house, built in 1867.

Newton Bushel Chapel of Ease (Virgin Mary) is an old Gothic fabric, which was repaired and enlarged in 1826, and has a tower containing one bell. It stands in Highweek Street, and was built by Richard Yarde, it is supposed, in the 15th century. The interior was reseated and otherwise improved in 1870.

St. Paul's Chapel of Ease, in the centre of Devon Square, is a neat Early English cruciform structure, consisting of broad nave, two transepts, and apsidal chancel, with organ chamber and vestry, and bell turret, surmounted with a spire. It was built in 1862 from designs by J. W. Rowell, Esq., of Newton Abbot, at a cost of £4000, defrayed solely by the Earl of Devon. There are five windows filled with stained glass; the beautiful East window, containing a representation of the Crucifixion, is in memory of the late Earl of Devon, and was inserted by his tenants. The seats, half of which are free and unappropriated, are low and open, and will accommodate 550 persons. The church contains a very fine organ (subscribed for by the parishioners), a reredos, sedilia, and a credence table. The handsome font, of red marble and granite, was the gift of the late Bishop Phillpotts; the communion plate was provided by Major Yates; the altar cloth and other furniture by residents near the church; and the lectern by the mechanics of the Railway Engine Works. The founder endowed the church with £100 a year. The Rev. Frederick Robson is the curate.

The Baptist Chapel, in East Street, was erected in 1863, at a cost of £1300, and has 500 sittings; the Rev. R. Hall, B.A., is the minister. The Baptists have another chapel, which was built in 1820. The Congregational Church in Queen Street, a neat stone structure, with a square tower, was erected in 1876, at a cost of £5000; there are 650 sittings, and the Rev. Joseph Sillicks is the minister. The Independents have another chapel, which was built in 1836, at a cost of £800; and has an endowment of £38 a year. The Free Methodist Church, in Courtenay Street, built in 1853, was enlarged in 1873. The Wesleyan Chapel, in Queen Street, was erected in 1848, at a cost of £550, and there is another but smaller chapel in Mill Lane. The Bible Christian Chapel, in Queen Street, built in 1865, at an expense of £2000, has 450 sittings: the Rev. G. Bridgman is the minister. The Christian Brethren have a chapel in Queen Street, erected in 1861, at an outlay of £400, and having 150 sittings: the Rev. William Harrison is the pastor. The Roman Catholics have a small chapel in Queen Street.

Wolborough National School, in East Street, was built in 1869, at a cost of £1200, and is attended by about 320 children. There is an Infant School in connection with St. Paul's Church, in Osborne Street. In Highweek Street are National Schools belonging to that parish. The Roman Catholic School is in St. Paul's Road. There is also a British School, as noticed below.

The Newton Abbot Proprietary College was established by a limited company in 1869, and is an establishment of high standing. It is governed by a council of twelve, the Earl of Devon being the president, and the Lord Bishop of the diocese the visitor. The College is situated on Wolborough Hill, and has a chapel, cricket and recreation grounds, together with all the requirements of a first-class school. An additional master's house is in course of erection, the foundation stone being laid on July 30, 1878, by the Archdeacon of Totnes. The Rev. George T. Warner, M.A., is head master, and Francis Watts, Esq., secretary to the council.

Augustine's Priory was built in 1860, from the designs of Mr. Hansom, of London, and stands in its own grounds of 34 acres: these nuns were originally established at Louvain, but being driven thence in 1793, by the Revolution, they first took up their abode at Amesbury, and seven years afterwards they removed to Spettisbury, near Blandford, in Dorset, where they remained until the completion of the present building, in 1861. The average number of inmates is 45. Mrs. Southwell is the Rev. Mother Superioress, and Messrs. Brindle and Edwards are the priests.

The town has a Literary Society, with a good library; a Mechanics' Institute, established in 1836; a well supplied News Room, and an Agricultural and Labourers' Friend Society. It has several provident and friendly societies. The Newton Club, established in 1870, is situated in Queen Street, and has sixty members: Mr. Francis Watts is the hon. secretary. The ALEXANDRA ASSEMBLY ROOMS adjoin the Market Hall, and there is also a CONCERT HALL in Courtenay Street; and the TEMPERANCE HALL is in Queen Street. The SOUTH DEVON CRICKET CLUB was established in 1860. The NEWTON ABBOT AND NEWTON BUSHEL HORTICULTURAL AND COTTAGE GARDEN SOCIETY was established on May 1, 1869. Mr. W. J. Watts, jun., is hon. secretary. The 10th Devon Rifle Volunteer Armoury is in East Street, and the company musters upwards of 100 strong. The FREEMASONS have two lodges in the town—the Devon Lodge (No. 1138), meeting at their own hall (built in 1867), in Devon Square, every Tuesday, on or before full moon; and the Morning Star (No. 1396), meeting at the Queen Hotel, on every second Monday in the month.

WOLBOROUGH.—The Parish Lands, &c., have been vested in trust from an early period for the relief of the poor, and the adorning and repairing of Wolborough Church and the chapel of Newton Abbot, and for other public and charitable uses in the parish. They comprise 15A. 3R. 2P., and about twenty-four houses and cottages, let in 1820 at rents amounting to only about £109, but now worth more than £350 per annum. Large fines were paid on the granting of the leases for 99 years, terminable on three lives. The trustees also derive 18*s.* a year from small rent-charges. Out of the income about £15 per annum is distributed in clothing among the poor, and the rest is chiefly applied in the service of the church and chapel. New trustees of these and other charity estates of this parish were appointed in the Court of Chancery, after much litigation, in 1821. A new scheme for the management of these charities was issued by the Charity Commissioners in November 1863. In 1640 Lady Lucie Reynell founded an Almshouse in this parish for the reception of four poor widows of clergymen of Devonshire or the city of Exeter, to be appointed by the trustees, and her heir being the owner of her capital messuage of Ford House, the latter of whom having the casting vote. For the payment of yearly stipends of £5 to each of the four widows, and for other charitable purposes, the foundress gave 29 acres of land at Paignton, now let for about £90, and a house and several acres of land at Wolborough. About 1790 the old almshouses were taken down, and two houses, for the residence of two clergymen's widows, who each received £10 per annum, were built; and in 1864 the lands in Wolborough were sold, with the permission of the Charity Commissioners, and two other houses built. Now, therefore, there are four clergymen's widows accommodated, each of whom receives £12 per annum. The rest of the clear income is applied to charitable uses, pursuant to a decree of the Court of Chancery. In 1606 Robert Hayman gave four small almshouses for the residence of poor parishioners, and for their reparation and the relief of the poor he gave an adjoining tenement, garden, and orchard, now let for only 10*s.* per annum. The poor have the dividends of £100 Four Per Cent. Stock, left by John Sloman in 1789. A yearly rent-charge of £12 was left in 1777, by Aaron Tozer, to be applied as follows. viz., £4 towards the support of a young man preparing for the Independent ministry, and £8 towards the support of the minister of the Independent Chapel in Wolborough Street. In 1788 Hannah Maria Bearne gave £1450 vested on mortgage, and £1000 Three per Cent. Consols, in trust that the interests and dividends should be applied in supporting a Free School for the education of poor children of Highweek and Wolborough, except £30 a year to be paid to the minister of the above-named chapel, on condition that he should deliver a weekly lecture on Thursday evenings. The mortgages have been redeemed, and the property now belonging to this charity consists of £3350 Three per Cent. Consols, yielding £100 1*s.* 8*d.* per annum, of which about £90 is paid to the schoolmaster and mistress. A school-house was built by the trustees some years ago, and many of the children belong to the Established Church, though five of the seven trustees appointed by the foundress were dissenters. It is now conducted as a British School, and the building is situated in Queen Street, and was built in 1859, at a cost of about £400; it will accommodate 200 children.

HIGHWEEK.—The Parish Lands, &c., vested in trust for charitable uses from an early period, comprise about 8 acres and five houses, let for £34 9*s.* per annum, and a house and garden occupied by paupers. There is also belonging to the trust a sum of £200 Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, purchased with money which arose from fines and the sale of timber. There is also on the estate a small almshouse, occupied by poor people. Most of the clear income is distributed in money and clothing among the poor, and £5 is paid yearly in aid of the National School. Gilberd's Almshouse was founded as an hospital for lepers, by John Gilberd, who endowed it, in 1538, with an adjacent close of one acre, and with a yearly rent-charge of £4, paid by the Corporation of Exeter. The almshouse has four tenements for as many inmates. The acre of land is held by the feoffees of the parish land in consideration of their repairing the almshouse and paying 12*s.* a year to the inmates. The poor parishioners have the following yearly sums, viz.: 20*s.* left by John Peter out of the tithes of Cornworthy; 2*s.* left by one Bickford, out of Wannell's house; and £2 from a house and garden left in 1632, by Robert Hayman, for distributions of shirts and shifts.

MACKRELL'S CHARITY.—T. Mackrell, Esq., of Barnstaple, gave £5000 to be invested in Three per Cent. Consols as an endowment for the charity, besides giving the land and houses. The inmates of the houses are to be appointed by the trustees out of the poor of Wolborough, and must be over 50 years of age. A man and his wife or two women are eligible for each house. The present trustees are the Earl of Devon, D. R. Scratton, Esq., the Rev. H. Tudor, Lewis Bearne and W. J. Watts, Esqs., and Thomas Mackrell, Esq., the founder. The buildings were erected in 1877, from the designs of Mr. J. W. Rowell.

The COTTAGE HOSPITAL is supported by voluntary contributions and subscriptions. The hospital belongs to the trustees in fee. It is managed by committees of ladies and gentlemen of the town. Drs. Gaye and Haydon are the medical men attached to the hospital. The present trustees are D. R. Scratton (who is also honorary secretary), John Vicary, jun., W. J. Watts, jun., R. H. M. Baker, Philip Michelmore, John Alsop, and F. W. Bowden, Esqs.

The POST, MONEY ORDER, and TELEGRAPH OFFICE is in Courtenay Street, and Mr. James is postmaster. Money Orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. (on Saturday to 8 p.m.); the Telegraph Office is opened from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. (on Sundays to 10 a.m.). Letters are delivered in the town at 7 a.m., 10.15 a.m., and 4.5 p.m. Box closes for London at 11.25 a.m. London, Bath, Bristol, Exeter, Teignmouth, &c.,

NEWTON FERRERS is a parish in Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Ermington and Plympton petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Ermington hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Plympton rural deanery. It had 732 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 3091 acres of land, including the village of Torr, 3 miles from the parish church, and part of that of Bridgend which is partly in Revelstoke parish. Newton Ferrers village is pleasantly situated on the hillside facing south of a small navigable creek branching from the main estuary of the Yealm, 7 miles S.E. by E. of Plymouth, and 1½ mile from the open sea. The parish extends 2 miles northward along the east side of the estuary, by which it is separated from the parishes of Wembury, Brixton, and Yealmpton on the west. The tortuous estuary is navigable to its head. A variety of fish is taken here, and there are oyster beds in it, which together with the fishery, and the ferry across to Wembury, belong to Baldwin J. P. Bastard, Esq., of Kitley. In the land-locked basin near the Yealm's mouth, which serves as a harbour for a small fleet of sea fishing boats, 4 yachts are kept belonging to gentlemen of the neighbourhood. The manor of Newton anciently belonged to the Ferrers family, whose co-heiress carried it in marriage to Lord St. John. It afterwards passed to the Bonville, Copleston, Hele, and other families. The name, however, of Ferrers or Ferris is still to be found among the neighbouring population. The manor now belongs in moieties to John Michael Williams and William Holberton, Esqrs., the latter of whom has a pleasant seat, called Torr House, where his family resided for many generations, but it is at present occupied by Mr. Charles Cornthwaite. Gnaton Hall, late the seat of Henry R. Roe, Esq., was long the residence of the Heles, and was rebuilt about 50 years ago. The property was purchased in 1853, by Michael Williams, Esq., and now belongs to his son, John Michael Williams, Esq., of Caerhayes Castle, Cornwall. The house is now occupied by Charles Freeman, Esq., a handsome mansion with extensive and well-wooded grounds. A Life Boat, the Bowman, was placed here in 1878, by the National Life Boat Institution.

The manor of Postlinch, or Puslinch, was given by one of the Ferrers to the de-Poselynche family, from whom it passed to the Mohuns, and from the latter to the Uptons—with an heiress of whom it passed in 1709 to James Yonge, M.D., of Plymouth, and it now belongs to his great-great-grandson, the Rev. D. Yonge, who resides at Puslinch House, a large and handsome mansion of red brick, which was built by Dr. Yonge soon after he came to the property, at the cost of about £9000. The house has tasteful grounds, and commands a fine view of the vale of the Yealm. The manor includes the northern parts of the parish. Torr Villa, occupied by the Misses Yonge, is a delightful residence by Torr hamlet, shut in on the east and west by high tors and woody acclivities. At Torr there is a large quarry (the property of the Charity Feoffees of Exeter) of limestone and dolomite, under which a cavern was some years since discovered containing antediluvian remains of hyæna, bear, elk, and other extinct animals. Above this quarry is a noble pile of rocks at the top of which there is a hollow, called the Rounds Nest (oundle Saxon for eagle), whence a magnificent view of the surrounding country is obtained. A short distance above Torr Bridge by the side of the fresh-water river Yealm, are remains of extensive stream tin works. Baldwin J. P. Bastard, Esq., has an estate in this parish, as have also Miss Mariann de-Porre, Charles Baring, Esq., Brixton Charity Feoffees, Thomas and Vaughan Holberton, Esqs., Eton College, and a few smaller owners. The general character of the soil is a slaty clay.

The CHURCH (Holy Cross) in Perpendicular style, with remains of Early English in the chancel, was reseated in 1866. The massive square tower, from which four pinnacles were removed at the beginning of the present century, contains five bells (in key of F. minor), of which one was recast in 1864. A clock of superior workmanship was placed in the tower, at a cost of £110, in 1847 by the late rector, as a memorial to one of his family. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £45 2*s.* 1*d.*, and in 1831 at £533, and commuted in 1839 for £444 per annum, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Duke Yonge. The Rev. John Yonge was inducted in 1813, and at his death in 1877, was the oldest incumbent in the diocese. The advowson was purchased by the above-named Dr. James Yonge from the Duke of Leeds in 1728; the glebe is 88A. 3R. 6P. Near Poslinch House stood the ancient CHAPEL of ST. OLY (Olave), but its remains were removed some years ago. In the village of Newton Ferrers stands the base of the ancient Cross, and at Collaton Cross the octagonal shaft of a wayside cross still in existence. An almshouse with no endowment, supposed to have been founded by Sir Warwick Hele in 1625, was rebuilt by the parishioners about 1815, but was sold by them when the Poor Law Act came into operation. The poor have 10*s.* a year, chargeable on house property in Plymouth, left by Walter Carkeete. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1837, and a handsome Infant School in 1875, both by the present rector. There is a READING AND NEWS ROOM in the village.

NEWTON POPPLEFORD, a tything or chapelry at the eastern extremity of Aylesbeare parish, had 661 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 524 acres. It has a long irregular village extending to the Otter, which is here spanned by a handsome stone bridge of three arches. This bridge was built at the cost of the county in 1840, at an outlay of £2500. Newton Poppleford has two annual cattle fairs, held on Holy Thursday, and on the Wednesday after October 18 (St. Luke's-day). There is a factory for silk-throwing on the bank of the Otter, now worked by W. Wood, Esq., who employs more than 150 hands. Many females here, and in the neighbouring parishes, are employed in making Honiton lace. A child's cap of this material, beautifully made by one of the parishioners, was some years since presented to Her Majesty for one of the royal infants. The Queen graciously accepted the gift, and liberally rewarded the donor. The Otter is justly celebrated for its trout, and is a favourite resort for the fly-fisher. The CHURCH (St. Luke) was anciently a chantry chapel, and was founded and endowed in 1331 by Hugh, Lord Courtenay, shortly after Bishop Grandison's accession to the see of Exeter. This endowment has been long sunk. The church, with the exception of the interesting old tower, which has one bell, has been recently restored by private subscription. The fabric is principally of stone. Newton Poppleford is a titular vicarage, with a separate incumbent, the Rev. Holled D. Cave Smith Horlock, D.D., and is in the patronage of the Vicar of Aylesbeare. It has an endowment of £85 per annum, partly arising from glebe land of 14 acres, on a portion of which a parsonage house is being built. Newton has a small INDEPENDENT CHAPEL, built in 1816. New and capacious SCHOOL ROOMS, with a master's residence, were built here by the Aylesbeare, Harpford and Venn Ottery School Board (see Aylesbeare), at a cost of about £1300, in 1877, on a commanding site given by the Hon. Mark Rolle.

POST OFFICE at Miss Mary Tilke's. Letters are received at 8.20 a.m. from, and are despatched at 4.50 p.m. to Ottery St. Mary, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

For DIRECTORY, see Aylesbeare.

NEWTON ST. CYRES, a pleasant village and parish on the south side of the vale of the river Creedy, 4½ miles N.W. of Exeter, and 3½ miles E.S.E. of Crediton, has a station on the Crediton and North Devon Railway. Is is in Crediton union, county court district, petty sessional division, and hundred, Northern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Cadbury rural deanery. The parish, which includes the tithings of Smallbrooke, Norton, and Ford, and the hamlet of Winscott, had 960 inhabitants (477 males, 483 females) in 1871, living in 224 houses. The area (inclusive of that of Sherwood villa, formerly an extra-parochial estate, but now a separate civil parish) is 4305 acres. John Quicke, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor of Newton, and resides at NEWTON HOUSE, where his family has been seated since the reign of Elizabeth. This manor was given at an early period to Plympton Priory, by Robert de Pontearal, or Pont-Arch. The estate, called Hayne, belongs to Sir S. H. Northcote, Bart., and was formerly the seat of his family, but the mansion was reduced to a farm house many years ago. The manor of Norton belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, who have several copyhold tenants here. Hayne Barton belongs to John Quicke, Esq. A cattle fair was formerly held in the village on the Monday before Christmas-day. Two mines are worked in this parish, from one of which manganese is obtained, and lead lode from the other. The CHURCH (St. Cyres) stands on a fine eminence, and has a tower and five bells. It was built in the 12th or 13th century, and has a large burial-ground surrounded by fine lime trees, &c. The interior was repewed at the cost of £1000 in 1831, and the roof was re-slated a few years ago at the cost of £100. In the interior are several monuments of the Northcote and Quicke families, one of which has effigies of Jacob Northcote, Esq., and his two wives, who died in the 17th century. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16 15*s.* 5*d.*, and in 1831 at £425, is in the patronage of John Quicke, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Edward T. May, M.A., who has 27 acres of glebe and a handsome residence, the outer walls of which have been rebuilt, and new windows inserted. The vicarial tithes are commuted for £352, and the rectorial for £360 a year. The latter belong to J. Quicke, Esq. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a place of worship here. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on January 12, 1875, and consists of J. Quicke, Esq. (chairman), Rev. E. T. May (vice-chairman), and Messrs. E. Ellis, J. Rew, and W. K. Wyatt. Mr. T. W. Butt is clerk. New schools were built in 1876 at a cost of £1350, for the accommodation of 200 children. The poor have four rent-charges, amounting to £3 5*s.* per annum, and left by John, Robert, and Thomas Quicke. They have also the interest of £20, which arose from £10 left by John Rock, in 1735. Abraham Franks, in 1795, left £100 secured on the Okehampton turnpike, in trust to pay yearly £1 18*s.* to the poor of this parish, and £2 2*s.* to Devon and Exeter Hospital. Dr. Downman, the poet, was a native of this parish.

NEWTON ST. PETROCK, 7 miles S.W. of Great Torrington, in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. It had 254 inhabitants (122 males, and 132 females) in 1871, living in 44 houses, on 1556 acres of land, and includes West Hole, and several scattered houses, &c. Mrs. Buck is lady of the manor and owner of a great part of the soil, and the rest belongs to J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., Mr. Walter, and smaller owners. Woodford Bridge was repaired by J. C. Moore-Stevens, Esq., at a cost of £250. The CHURCH (St. Petrock) is a small antique structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south aisle, south porch, and tower containing three bells. It is picturesquely situated among trees, and has a wagon roof; the floor is laid with tiles of very curious device, and the ancient oak seats are handsomely carved. The restoration of the edifice is in contemplation. The church contains several mural tablets in memory of former rectors. The Register dates from 1578. In the churchyard is a very curious tombstone, in memory of Mrs. Potter, who died in 1689. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £8 5*s.* 9½*d.*, and in 1831 at £277, in the patronage of the Rev. M. R. Workman, and incumbency of the Rev. Walter Powell Jones. There is a glebe of 77 acres, and the parsonage is an old residence, erected with the material brought from an ancient chapel at Shebbear. The tithes were commuted in 1840 for £151 a year. SHEBBEAR SCHOOL BOARD, for the united parishes of Newton St. Petrock and Shebbear, was formed in October 1874. (See Shebbear.) The SCHOOL was erected in 1876, on land given by Mrs. Buck, at a cost of £700, to accommodate 65 scholars.

NEWTON TRACEY, a small parish, 4 miles S.W. of Barnstaple, and 5 miles E.N.E. of Bideford, is in Barnstaple union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and Fremington hundred. It had 108 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 336 acres of land, belonging to Major Hogg and a few smaller owners. The CHURCH (St. Thomas-à-Becket) consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower, and was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower and chancel arch, in 1867, at a cost of £400, raised by subscription. The seats are of pitch pine, and open, and the pulpit of oak. The font is square and very ancient. The original church is supposed to date from the middle of the 13th century. The benefice is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £5 8s. 1½d., and now at £69, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held by the Rev. John Dene, of Horwood, who has 38A. 3R. 10P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1848 for £50 a year.

NORTHAM, a large and well built village, is pleasantly seated on the peninsula between Barnstaple bay and the river Torridge, from 1½ to 2½ miles N. of Bideford. Its parish is in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Shebbear hundred, Northern division of the county, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Hartland rural deanery. It had 4330 inhabitants (1886 males, 2444 females) in 1871, living in 924 houses; the area is 4190 acres, of which 1690 are water (see also 'Vital Statistics' page 81). Its parish includes the prettily situated seaport town of Appledore; a district called Northam Ridge, curiously situated on the other side of Bideford parish; a large common called 'the Burrows,' of about 700 acres in extent; and the new and rising watering-place of Westward Ho! The manor of Northam was given by Henry I. to the Abbot and Monastery of St. Stephens, at Caen, in Normandy. At a later period it was held by Frampton Priory. It is now the reversionary property of the Melhuish family, who granted a long lease of it for 200 years, of which nearly one half has still to run. The late Colonel Cleveland, of Tapley Park, Westleigh, held the manor under this lease, but granted a sub-lease on lives to the late T. B. Chanter, Esq., by whose eldest son, Thomas Scott Chanter Siddons, Esq., it is now understood to be held. The LOCAL BOARD was formed in 1867 and consists of 19 members; Mr. C. W. Hole is clerk, and Mr. William Ward, surveyor. There are few large landowners in this parish, the property being in many hands. Where there are so many gentlemen's houses, it would be invidious to mention any specially. The CHURCH (St. Margaret, or as some think, St. Mary the Virgin) is a very fine and handsome structure, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, south transept, and a handsome tower containing six bells. It underwent very extensive and thorough restoration from 1849 to 1866, during the incumbency of the Rev. I. H. Gosset, M.A. The roofs are very fine, while its modern stone pulpit, its reredos, its elaborately carved organ case, and modern stained glass windows, are all good of their kind. In the churchyard will be observed a mortuary for the reception of the bodies of shipwrecked sailors, marking the dangerous character of this coast of the Bristol Channel. Queen Elizabeth granted the tithes and advowson of the vicarage to the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The vicarage, in the patronage of Dean and Chapter of Windsor, valued in K.B. at £10 10s., is now worth about £275 nett, and is held by the Rev. M. D. Dimond-Churchward, who has a good residence. The tithes, commuted at £525 per annum, and the rectorial glebe, are leased to the Corporation of South Molton, who it is stated have agreed to purchase the property from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

There are Chapels in Northam belonging to the INDEPENDENTS and WESLEYANS. The former was erected in 1870 at a cost of £900, and will seat 250 people. The foundation stone of a new Wesleyan Chapel was laid on February 22, 1878; its cost being estimated at £900. There is an Infant School, converted out of an old monastic building, which was given to the parish with an endowment, by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Thorold, and a large NATIONAL mixed school for boys and girls. The above endowment consists of three fields of land, now let for about £33 per annum. There is also an ALMSHOUSE for four widows and four old maids. The other united charities of the whole parish from old bequests for the benefit of the poor, produce at present an income of about £120. They are managed by a Board of twelve Trustees, appointed by the Charity Commissioners.

The parish of Northam has become a highly popular place of residence, on account of the beauties of its situation, its sloping hills, inclining in charmingly varied undulations to the river Torridge, and towards the estuary and sea. This has led to the building of many good houses and villas in all directions. There is a large shipbuilding yard, ropery, and steam sawing machine in this parish, on the bank of the Torridge.

NORTHAM BURROWS.—This fine common of grass land, on which the inhabitants of the parish exercise rights of pasture, is mainly protected from the sea by a large ridge of carboniferous pebbles. This pebble ridge has always been of much interest to visitors. During the last fifteen years, owing to some unexplained demolition of the whole foreshore, which consists chiefly of soft peat and clay, the pebble ridge has been much weakened, and the common on this N.W. side, as well as on the N.E. side towards the estuary, has suffered very considerable damage, and it is feared that the very existence of the common is seriously threatened. On January 31, 1877, the whole pebble ridge was thrown back several yards by the sea. On the Burrows stands a life-boat house, containing two life boats belonging to the Royal National Life Boat Institution, by means of which, and their predecessors, fully 200 lives have been saved from shipwreck.

One of the greatest permanent attractions to residents and visitors, is the excellent Golf Course on the Burrows, played over by the Royal North Devon and West of England Golf Club, which is under the patronage of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The club already numbers 250 members—and is yearly increasing, as this excellent Scotch game comes to be more generally known in England—a game which attracts young and old, which can be played all the year round, and in this respect and many others far surpasses all other outdoor means of exercise and amusement. Golf is also played by ladies over a separate course on the Burrows, and is acknowledged to have attractions far in excess of the game of Croquet.

OMNIBUS several times a day between Westward Ho, Northam village, and Bideford. An omnibus also runs between Appledore and Bideford. There is also easy communication between Appledore and Bideford by boats, or by crossing to and from Appledore viâ Instow railway, station and quay NORTH BOVEY is a parish and pleasant village with a well-wooded green, in the picturesque valley of the West Teign, 1½ mile S.W. of Moreton Hampstead. It is in Newton Abbot union and county court district, Crockernwell petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Teignbridge hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Moreton rural deanery. It had 516 inhabitants (278 males, 238 females), living in 104 houses, on 5654 acres of land, and includes the hamlets of Wormhill and Lettaford, and about 1000 acres of common, on the eastern hills of Dartmoor Forest, where there are two tin mines called Birch Tor and East

Birch Tor. There was formerly a cattle fair in the village on the Monday after Midsummer-day. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor; but part of the parish belongs to a number of small freeholders, and a portion of it is in the manor of West Teign, which belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall. On the village-green is an ancient rude granite cross, and near the parish is Grims-pound, a remarkable circle of stones, supposed to be Druidical. The CHURCH (St. John) is a large antique fabric, in the Perpendicular style, with a tower and six bells. The Register dates from 1565. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £22 10*s.* 5*d.*, and in 1831 at £303, is in the patronage of the Earl of Devon, and incumbency of the Rev. William Henry Thornton, M.A., who has a good residence and 25A. 2R. 26P. of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £328 per annum. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL was erected in 1877. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL, endowed with £3 a year from the estate of Higher Langdon. The church lands, &c., are let for 40*s.* In 1723 Thomas Parr left a yearly rent-charge of £3, out of Higher Langdon, for schooling poor children.

NORTHCOTT hamlet comprises that portion of Boyton parish which is in Devonshire, the remainder being in Cornwall. Northcott is 7 miles N.W. of Launceston, and is in Launceston union and county court district, Holsworthy petty sessional division, Black Torrington hundred, Southern division of the county, Truro diocese, and Trigg Major rural deanery. The rateable value is £465. This hamlet had 87 inhabitants (45 males, 42 females) in 1871, living in 18 houses, on 802 acres; while the remaining portion (Boyton village) had 379 inhabitants (200 males, 179 females), living in 79 houses, on 4154 acres. Northcott is occupied by the following farmers: Richard Fulford, Francis Oliver, and Richard Smith. The Rev. Thomas Walters, M.A., is the vicar.

POST viâ Launceston, which is the nearest Money Order Office.

NORTH HUISH parish includes the hamlet of Lupridge and part of the hamlet of Avonwick (formerly called Newhouse), and is in Totnes union, county court district, and deanery, Stanborough and Coleridge petty sessional division, and Stanborough hundred. It had 436 inhabitants in 1871, living on 2662 acres of land. The village is picturesquely situated on the western acclivities of the Avon valley, 5½ miles E. of Ivybridge, 7 W.S.W. of Totnes, and 2 from Kingsbridge Road Railway Station. The manor, formerly held by the Damarell, Trenchard, and other families, was purchased in 1786 by the late Richard King, Esq., and is now the property of his son, Thomas King, Esq. William Bowden, Esq., owns Norris and Coombe Farms; Henry T. Kingwell, Esq., owns Whetcombe; Mark Gregg, Esq., of Plymouth, owns Butterford (formerly called Boterford), which is a large mansion, once the seat of a family of its own name, and afterwards of the Strodes and Palks, the latter of whom rebuilt the mansion about 1790; but it is now occupied with the farm by Mr. S. Cockrem. The handsome residence called Black Hall, the property and seat of the late James Cornish, Esq., and now of his daughter, is the residence of F. J. Cornish-Bowden, Esq., J.P. The CHURCH is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells, and crowned with a lofty spire. It is in the Decorated style, and was neatly restored in 1871. It comprises chancel, nave, and two side aisles, with a small addition called the Butterford aisle. The organ was erected in 1848; and all the windows are modern insertions, except that at the west end. The first Register dates from 1656. The living is a rectory, in the gift of the family of the late Rev. John Comins. The present incumbent is the Rev. E. R. Pemberton, D.C.L., and his curate is the Rev. F. S. Stone. The rectory is a large and handsome residence, with extensive and very beautiful grounds; and the endowment comprises 75 acres of rich glebe, and tithe rent-charge commuted at £400 a year. There is a good SCHOOL ROOM built on land given for that purpose by the rector in 1846. There are 4 acres of land, let for £5 10*s.*, and a convenient house, let for £7 10*s.*, which have been for many years vested in feoffees for the benefit of the poor; and a bequest of the Rev. Peter Pering, in 1843, of £200, which was vested in Consols, the interest to be given by the rector among the poor, with preference to those not receiving parish relief.

NORTH LEIGH, a parish and small village, on the banks of a rivulet, 3½ miles W.N.W. of Colyton, and 4 miles from Honiton Railway Station, is in Honiton union, county court district and petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Colyton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell and Honiton rural deanery. It had 248 inhabitants (127 males, 121 females) in 1871, living in 53 houses, on 994 acres of land, and includes Triccombe, Bucknoll, and Puddlebridge. The Rev. William Henry Baptist Probyn is lord of the manor, formerly held by the Leigh, Bonville, Petre, How, and other families; but Sir E. M. Elton, Mrs. Gard, Lady Prideaux, and a few smaller freeholders have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Giles) is an ancient structure, and has a tower containing four bells. It was restored in 1869 at a cost of £1000; the east window is filled with stained glass, representing Christ in Glory, and was inserted by Miss Daniell, in memory of the Rev. H. P. Daniell, a former rector. The church has a fine Norman arch, and contains two beautiful screens; the old carved ends of the old seats are retained in the new benches. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £10 9*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £240, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Yarde, M.A., who has 47 acres of glebe, and a handsome modern residence, built of flint and rag, with dressings, mullions, &c., of Beer stone. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £174 10*s.* per annum. The SCHOOL was built in 1844, and was enlarged in 1871 to accommodate 50 children. The Parish Lands, given by Jane Marwood, and other donors, comprise about 8 acres, let for £16, which is distributed on New Year's-day among the industrious poor. The dividends of £175 4 per Cent. Stock, left by the Rev. James How, in 1816, are applied—one-half towards the support of the Sunday School, and the other in distributions to the poor in bread on Christmas-day.

NORTH LEW, 4 miles S.S.W. of Hatherleigh, is a parish and a large and pleasant village, on a lofty eminence, commanding delightful views. It is in Okehampton union, county court district and rural deanery, Hatherleigh petty sessional division, Okehampton polling district of South Devon, Black Torrington hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 861 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 7427 acres of land, including 2000 acres of common, 200 acres of wood, and the hamlet of Whitston. John Bayly, Esq., is lord of the village manor, and the rector, of the rectorial manor. Harper's Hill belongs to J. Vowler, Esq., Holloway. The other principal landowners are the Woollcombe family, the rector, the Vowler family, J. Bayly, Esq., Lord Portman, and Earl Fortescue. Redcliffe, which belongs to Archdeacon Woollcombe, has a freestone quarry, and the remains of an ancient chapel. The Celtic-British Church throve in West and Mid-Devon, under the Bishops of St. German, &c., moved eastward, and meeting (about Glastonbury and Sarum) the main current from Roman Britain, became strong enough to found St. Alban's, and flow north-west to Bangor, Man, &c. The massive granite cross here was probably a British preaching station, six centuries before Tavistock Abbey sent forth its Saxon Evangelists to remind 'Week St. Germans' and all this northern slope of Broadbury, of the backsliding from the faith of their forefathers. The still existing North Lew Cross, Lych-gate, and Church, exhibit marks of the revolutions and great epochs in Devon history, from the 2nd or 3rd to the 19th century. The untoward people certainly deserved Cranmer's rebuke in his celebrated letter of 1549–50, commencing 'O! ye ignorant men of Devon.' The ancient ponderous (perhaps British) Cross was in utter ruin in 1847. The rector, assisted by other parishioners, restored it in 1849. The first CHURCH, with its remarkable Norman font, was enlarged in Plantagenet times, and dedicated to 'Thomas of Canterbury, Martyr;' further enlarged in Tudor times, with three eastern chapels of the three manors, enclosed with rich carved work around the three altars; a sumptuous rood-screen not uncommon in the 14th and 15th centuries. In the 16th, the nave and west aisles were filled with elaborately carved benches, finished in 1537. Rebellions and revolutions in the 17th, and neglect in the 18th, have nearly ruined this once gorgeous church, stripped the chancel, baptistery, and font, found mutilated in 1847. In 1858 the rector commenced works for restoration in the chancel; laid his plans before the other land-owners, proprietors of the chapels, and the parishioners responsible for the nave, aisles and tower. Various untoward circumstances have delayed the works, which are still waiting the lead of a patron, and encouraging help from the public. The Register dates from 1700. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £27 8*s.* 9*d.*, and in 1831 at £342, is in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas England, M.A., who has 74 acres of glebe, and a neat residence, built in 1849. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £370 per annum. The BIBLE CHRISTIANS have a chapel in the village, and another at Whitston, at the distance of two miles. The NATIONAL SCHOOL was built in 1866, and is supported by Archdeacon and Miss Woollcombe, &c. The poor should have the interest of £21, left by John Watkins.

POST OFFICE at Mr. John Gay's. Letters are received from Exbourne at 10 a.m. and despatched at 3.45 p.m. Hatherleigh is the nearest Money Order Office. Ashbury is the nearest Railway Station.

NORTH MOLTON parish, which includes the hamlets, &c., of Heasley, Ben-Twitchen, Hunston, Walscott, Upcott, and Flitton, is in South Molton union, hundred, county court district, rural deanery, and petty sessional division, North Molton polling district of North Devon, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 1703 inhabitants (871 males, 832 females) in 1871, comprised in 378 families, living in 355 houses, on 14,351 acres of land. North Molton village is on the western acclivity of the river Mole, 2½ miles from South Molton Station, on the Devon and Somerset Branch of the Great Western Railway, 11½ miles from the South Molton Road Station, on the London and South-Western Railway, and 3½ miles from South Molton town. The parish extends about 5 miles north and north-east of the village to the sources of the Mole and Duns Brook, among the lofty hills on the borders of Somersetshire and Exmoor Forest.

About forty years ago a very rich copper mine was discovered in the northern part of the parish, called Bampfield-Mine, and containing a mixture of gold. The ore is of the purest kind, in large bunches, and pieces of gold of some size have been occasionally found. An old copper mine which had been closed many years was reopened in 1813, but was soon abandoned; but there are now two mines working in the parish. The Florence Iron Mine Company have cut a tramway from their mine to the Devon and Somerset Railway, near the South Molton Station. The parish is celebrated for its fine breed of North Devon cattle. A railway is in contemplation from South Molton Station to near Lynton, and it is proposed to use the tramway for a portion of the distance; this would open up access to the 'prettiest spot in England.' The village has two cattle fairs, on the Wednesday after May 12, and last Wednesday in October. It had formerly a weekly market, and a fair on All Saints'-day, granted in 1270 to Roger le Zouch. The Zouch family obtained the manor from King John, and is said to have had a castellated mansion here, the remains of which were to be seen till the middle of last century. A co-heiress of this family brought the manor to the St. Maurs, and it passed with a co-heiress of the latter to the Bampfyldes. Lord Poltimore resides occasionally at COURT HALL, an old mansion, which was enlarged and much improved about fifty years ago, and stands in a well-wooded park east of the church. His Lordship is also owner of Court House, a large ancient mansion, finely mantled with ivy, and formerly belonging to the Earl of Morley. Lord Poltimore owns most of the parish; and Court Hall, being in the neighbourhood of Exmoor Forest, was long occupied by his family as a hunting seat; and the few wild red deer which still linger in that mountainous region render it a desirable abode for the lovers of the chase. A court leet and baron is held twice a year, and the jury are popularly called the council, and the foreman the mayor. The Rev. J. L. H. Southcomb has an estate here.

The CHURCH (All Saints) is a fine antique structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch, and a handsome octagonal tower containing six bells and a clock. It stands on a commanding eminence, and the nave and chancel are separated by a richly-carved screen. The whole fabric was renovated in 1849, when two windows were filled with stained glass. Mrs. Langdon, of Flytton, is about to insert a stained glass window to her brother, the late Mr. James Davey. The church contains several monuments belonging to the Bampfylde and other families, and was appropriated by Alan le Zouch, in 1313, to the monastery of Lilleshull, in Shropshire. The chancel and chancel-aisles were reseated about six years ago with oak. The Register dates from 1564. Lord Poltimore is now impropriator of the rectory and patron of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £16 16*s.* 1*d.*, and now at about £250, with the curacy of Twitchen annexed to it. The Rev. Frank Ley Bazeley, M.A., is the incumbent, and has here 3A. 2R. 18P. of glebe. The Vicarage House was rebuilt after being destroyed by fire in 1801, and was restored in 1877. The living received four augmentations from Queen Anne's Bounty in 1789, 1798, and 1825. All the tithes were commuted in 1842 for £1292 17*s.* per annum. There were formerly episcopal chapels at South Radworthy, Hollywell, and Ben-Twitchen, in this parish.

The WESLEYANS have a chapel in North Molton village, and another at Heaselly Mill; the latter was built a few years ago on a site given by Lord Poltimore, at a cost of about £300. The PRIMITIVE METHODISTS have a wooden chapel at Molland Cross, erected about thirteen years ago.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on May 26, 1874, and now consists of Dr. Spicer (chairman), Mr. R. Stranger (vice-chairman), and Messrs. Hayes, Haydon, and Rew. Mr. C. A. Passmore is clerk. The National School was transferred to the Board, and was enlarged in 1876 at a cost of about £300. The Board have another school at Heaselly Mill, built in 1876, at an expense of £340, to accommodate sixty pupils. The Church Lands and twenty-one houses, &c., have been vested for the repairs of the church from an early period, and are let for £80 a year. Here is an old Almshouse for six poor parishioners, founded by one of the ancestors of the Earl of Morley, who endowed it with a yearly rent-charge of £5 4*s.* The school and poor have the dividends of £69 18*s.* 2*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, given by Grace Moorman; and the interest of £50, left by William Moorman in 1780. The poor have £5 4*s.* yearly out of Nogel's estate, left by Sir Amias Bampfylde in 1625, and the interest of £63 10*s.*, left by various donors. Also the interest of £500, less legacy duty, left by the Dowager Lady Poltimore, in 1863, to the poor of North Molton, to be distributed annually by the vicar and churchwardens.

POST and MONEY ORDER OFFICE and SAVINGS BANK at Miss Elizabeth Passmore's. Letters are received from South Molton at 8.10 a.m., and despatched at 5.30 p.m. week days; and 9.20 a.m. Sundays. South Molton is the nearest Railway Station.

NORTH PETHERWIN (or Petherwyn), is a parish and large village in Launceston union, and county court district, Southern division of the county, Lifton petty sessional division, Black Torrington hundred, and Trigg Major rural deanery in the diocese of Truro. It had 999 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 8157 acres: the parish includes the villages of Helscott Bolesbridge, Penruse and Billacott. The rateable value of the parish is £4941. It is mostly in the Duke of Bedford's manor of Werrington but R. Kingdon, Esq., and many smaller freeholders and leaseholders have estates here. The CHURCH (St. Paternus) is an ancient structure with a tower containing five bells. The Register dates from 1653, and the church contains memorials of the Yeo and other families. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £9 10*s.* 10*d.*, and in 1831 at £135, is in the patronage of the Duke of Bedford, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Braithwaite Trentham, B.A. The patron is impropriator of half of the great tithes, and one-fourth belongs to Mr. J. Veale, and the rest to the landowners. The poor have 25*s.* a year, left by John Credacott and another donor. Whickett Estate is charged with 10*s.* a year for a sermon on New Year's Day. There are five small chapels in the parish, two belonging to Wesleyans, two to Bible Christians, and one to Association Methodists. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on February 20, 1873. The names of its members are as follows: Richd. Banbury, Richard Hawke, jun. (clerk), Wm. Rockey, John Symons, Rev. Thos. Braithwaite Trentham (chairman).

NORTH TAWTON, a parish and small ancient town, pleasantly situated on the east side of the Taw Valley, 6½ miles N.E. of Okehampton, and 10 miles W. of Crediton, is in Okehampton union, county court district and rural deanery, South Molton petty sessional division, North Tawton hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry. It had 2081 inhabitants in 1871, and comprises 5814 acres of land. In the parish is a station on the North Devon Railway. It was anciently a market and borough town, and is still governed by a portreeve elected annually, who has a small field during his year of office. From its ancient appellation of Cheping Tawton, it is evident that it had a market long before the grant of John Valletort in 1270, of a market on Wednesday and a fair for three days at the festival of St. Nicholas. The market, which was afterwards held on Friday, was discontinued about 1720; but in 1849, a small market house was erected in the town at the cost of £750, raised in £5 shares, and the market was re-established, to be held on Thursday. Here are three annual fairs, on the third Tuesdays in April and December, and the second Tuesday in October. In the town is a large tan yard and a woollen factory, the latter of which has been employed in the manufacture of serges, &c., from a very early period. Most of the modern brick and slated houses occupy the sites of old thatched cob buildings, which were burnt down during the last 50 years. The manor was an ancient demesne of the Crown, and was held successively by the Valletort, Champernowne, St. Leger, and Fellowes families, the latter of whom purchased it in 1718. The Earl of Portsmouth is now lord of the manor and owner of a great part of the parish, and the rest belongs to the Hon. Mark Rolle, and several smaller owners. Crook Burnell, alias Stone, belongs to the Sturt family. Near the church is a moated site, supposed to have been the ancient seat of the Valletorts.

PETTY SESSIONS are held at the Market House bi-monthly by the South Molton magistrates. (See South Molton.)

The CHURCH (St. Peter) is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The Register dates from 1538. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £32 4*s.* 7*d.*, and in 1831 at £884, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. R. Hole, B.C.L., who has a good residence in the Elizabethan style. The glebe is 95 acres, and the tithes were commuted in 1844 for £797 15*s.* 10*d.* per annum. The INDEPENDENTS, BIBLE CHRISTIANS, and PLYMOUTH BRETHREN have small chapels here. The church lands and cottages are let for about £28 a year. The Free School was endowed in 1746 by the Rev. Richard Hole, with a house and 10 acres of land at West Newton. The SCHOOL BOARD, which was formed in 1872, consists of the Rev. Robert Hole (chairman), and Messrs. William Salter (vice-chairman), John Pedder, John Shillson, and Hugh Pyke. Schools, accommodating 260 children, were built in 1874, at a cost of £1800. NORTH TAWTON MIDDLE CLASS SCHOOL, a handsome building adjoining the rectory house, was erected in 1863, on a site given by the Earl of Portsmouth, at a cost of £1000, raised by subscription, his lordship contributing £500. The poor have about 26*s.* 8*d.* yearly from the gifts of Christopher Kelland and Edmund Rowland.

POST, MONEY ORDER, AND TELEGRAPH OFFICE AND SAVINGS BANK at Mr. Frank Skinner's. Letters are received from London, Bristol, Exeter, &c., at 5.9 a.m, and despatched at 8.6 p.m. Second delivery at 3 p.m. Box closes at 7.55 p.m.

NYMET ROWLAND, or Rowland's Leigh, is a small parish in the Taw valley, 4 miles S. by E. of Chulmleigh, in Crediton union and county court district, South Molton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, North Tawton hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Chulmleigh rural deanery. It had 98 inhabitants (49 males, 49 females) in 1871, living in 18 houses, on 595 acres of land. The parish mostly belongs to Mr. John Partridge, of the Barton, and Mr. A. Snell, of Cleavehanger. The manor was dismembered many years ago. The CHURCH (St. Bartholomew) is a small structure, with a tower and one bell. The chancel was restored about 1875, at a cost of £200, raised by subscription. The rectory, valued in K.B. at £6 1*s.* 3*d.*, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Frederic Emanuel Gutteres, who is rector of Nymet Rowland and Coldridge. There are 71 acres of glebe and a parsonage house, recently built. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £81 per annum. This parish is united with Lapford as a School Board district.

NYMPTON ST. GEORGE, or Nymet St. George, or George Nympton, is a parish in South Molton union, county court district, rural deanery, petty sessional division and hundred, South Molton polling district of Devon, and Barnstaple archdeaconry. It had 227 inhabitants (123 males, 104 females) in 1871, living in 44 houses, on 2240 acres of land. George Nympton village is in the valley of the river Mole, 2 miles S. by W. of South Molton. Sir T. D. Acland is lord of the manor, which was anciently held by the Nymet and Hache families. The Rev. J. G. Pearse has two estates here, and a pleasant seat called Broom House, formerly belonging to the Hale and Gay families. The Rev. W. Karslake, the Rev. J. L. H. Southcomb, R. Cross, Esq., Dr. Hatherley, and several smaller owners have estates here. The CHURCH (St. George) is a neat structure in the Perpendicular style. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of Sir T. D. Acland, and incumbency of the Rev. J. Richey, M.A. The glebe is 110 acres, and the rectory house is a commodious residence, beautifully situated, and in great part built in 1868. The tithes were commuted in 1842 for £280 a year. The PAROCHIAL SCHOOL, a handsome building, was erected in 1871, entirely by voluntary contributions. John Huxtable left £100 invested in the Three per Cent. Consols, the interest to be given to the poor in bread and coal about Christmas by the churchwardens.

OAKFORD, or Okeford, is a parish in Tiverton union and county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Bampton polling district of North Devon, Witheridge hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Tiverton West deanery. It had 578 inhabitants (303 males, 275 females) in 1871, living in 113 houses, on 5464 acres of land. The village is seated on an acclivity, between the Exe and one of its tributary streams, 3 miles W. by S. of Bampton, 6 miles from Dulverton Railway Station, and 9 miles N.N.W. of Tiverton. The manor was anciently held by the Montacutes, and afterwards by the Pollards. Thomas C. Daniel, Esq., now owns about 1400 acres, and W. Spurway, Esq., 1200; there are many other landowners, possessing from 400 to a few acres. The CHURCH (St. Peter) was, except the tower, rebuilt in 1838, and consists of nave, small chancel, porch, and square tower containing eight good bells. The organ was given by the late Mrs. Parkin. The Register dates from 1568. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £24, and now at £700 (nett), in the patronage of Sir William Anson, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Temple Hillyard, Canon of Chester Cathedral, who has built a new parsonage on the glebe, of which there are 86 acres. The tithes were commuted in 1844 for £431 a year. The SCHOOL, erected by the late Mrs. Parkin, was considerably enlarged in 1876, and a Girls' School built on a site given by Mrs. Daniel, the cost of each being defrayed by subscription. The parish has £25 for a schoolmaster and schoolmistress, and 40*s.* each for a poor man and woman, from Mrs. Pyncombe's Charity. (See Poughill.) For distribution in bread the poor have £3 a year, left by Richard Hill, otherwise Spurway, in 1630, out of three closes. The late Rev. James Parkin left a sum of money for augmentation of schoolmaster's and organist's income, which produces about £68 a year.

POST OFFICE at Miss Loveday Marley's. Letters are received at 8.15 a.m., and despatched at 5.30 p.m., daily, except Sunday, viâ Tiverton; but Bampton is the nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office. Dulverton is the nearest Railway Station.

OFFWELL, a parish and village on the hills near the source of a rivulet, 2½ miles E.S.E. of Honiton Railway Station, and 12 miles from Cullompton, is in Honiton union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Colyton hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Dunkeswell and Honiton rural deanery. Its parish, which includes part of Wilmington village, which is partly in Widworthy parish, had 367 inhabitants (174 males, 193 females) in 1871, living in 85 houses, on 2206 acres of land. The manor of Offwell, anciently held by a family of its own name, and afterwards by the Orway, Vere, Bray, Collins, and other families, was dismembered many years ago. The parish belongs principally to Sir E. M. Elton. Offwell House, built by the late Dr. Copleston, bishop of Llandaff, who was born in the rectory and died in 1849, now belongs to the Rev. J. G. Copleston, but the house is occupied by Major Speid. An ornamental tower, on Honiton Hill, in this parish, was built by the late Bishop of Llandaff, in 1843, and commands extensive prospects. The CHURCH (St. Mary) has a tower and five bells, and is of the age of the 15th century. The church was repewed by the rector in 1863, and a new organ added. The trustees of Bishop Copleston are patrons of the rectory, valued in K.B. at £14 3*s.* 6½*d.*, and in 1831 at £380. The Rev. Jno. Gay Copleston, M.A., is the incumbent, and has 80 acres of glebe, and a large and handsome rectory house, in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1845, at the cost of about £1800. The tithes were commuted in 1843 for £270 a year. In Offwell village is a School and a pump, both built by the late Bishop of Llandaff. In 1752 £60 given to the poor parishioners by Henry and Dorothy Southcott, and other donors, was laid out in the purchase of 3½ acres of land, called Graystone, now let for £10.

OGWELL, EAST and WEST. (See East and West Ogwell.)

OKEFORD. (See Oakford.)

OKEHAMPTON, or Oakhampton, a parish, old disfranchised borough, and a small but busy market town, having a station on the Devon and Cornwall Railway, and giving name to a large union, county court and a polling district of South Devon, is in Hatherleigh petty sessional division, mostly in Lifton hundred, and Totnes archdeaconry. Its parish, which had 2470 inhabitants (1306 males, 1164 females) in 1871, living in 438 houses, on 9552 acres of land, includes the hamlets, &c., of Chicecott, Brightley, Lower Fatherford, Meldon, and Kigbear, the latter of which includes Southcott, Maddaford, Nethercott, and Croft Farms, &c., and comprises about 1400 acres all in Black Torrington hundred. The town is on the high road from Falmouth to Exeter, 22 miles W. by N. of the latter; 16 miles N.N.E. of Tavistock, 12 miles N.W. of Moreton-Hampstead, and 194 miles W. by S. of London, and is picturesquely seated near the northern extremity of Dartmoor Forest, in the valley of the river Okement, which is formed here by the confluence of two moorland streams, called the East and West Okement, which unite below the East and West Bridges, the former of which was rebuilt in 1841, and the latter in 1831. The parish extends several miles round the town, and includes several large commons and moorland tracts, containing slate, limestone, and granite. There is a very superior quarry of limestone at Meldon. Near Cranmere Pool, among the rude and mountainous tors and hills, and the deep rocky glens of Dartmoor, about 6 miles south of Okehampton, seven rivers have their sources, namely, the East and West Okement, which unite below the town; the Taw, Teign, Dart, Tavy, and Lyd. (See page 19.) In Domesday, the town is called Ockmenton, from the river, and is described as having a castle, four burgesses, and a market; and as being the head of a great barony or honor, which was given by William the Conqueror to Baldwin de Sap, or de Brioniis. Richard de Redvers, or Rivers, Earl of Devon, obtained the Barony of Okehampton from William II., and in the thirteenth century it passed to the Courtenays, (Earls of Devon, &c.), as noticed with the account of that noble and ancient family, at pages 47 and 48. After the death of Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon, in 1556, without issue, the baronial estates were divided among four co-heiresses, who married into the families of Arundell, Trethurfe, Mohun, and Trelawny. Their shares afterwards passed to various other families.

On the summit and declivities of a high rocky mound, in the valley of the West Okement, and at the feet of the lofty hills of Dartmoor, about half-a-mile S.W. of the town, are the venerable ivy-clad ruins of Okehampton Castle, which was built by Baldwin de Brioniis in the eleventh century. It was long the seat and fortress of its powerful Barons, who held ninety-two manors in fee, and had here a numerous retinue. The declivities of the mound are thickly clothed with foliage, and on its lofty summit rise the massy mouldering walls of the keep, some fragments of which are higher than the rest, and appear ready to fall on the assault of the next boisterous tempest from the neighbouring wilds of Dartmoor; but, owing to the durable quality of the cement, they may long withstand the fury of the elements. There are still remains of the centre gate, the moat, the base court, and the chapel. The extensive area occupied by the ruins, the solidity of their structure, and the advantages of the situation, prove that this fortress, before it was dismantled, in 1539, must have been of great strength and importance. The site of the castle was purchased by Sir R. R. Vyvyan, Bart., about 25 years ago. The Park, which adjoins the castle and extends nearly 3 miles along the southern side of the West Okement valley, contains about 1600 acres, and belongs to the representatives of the Rev. J. Luxmoore. It was disparked and alienated by Henry VIII., at the instance of Sir Rd. Pollard, but is said to have abounded in fine oak trees till the latter part of the last century. During the civil wars Okehampton was occasionally occupied by the contending parties, but was seldom more than a temporary station. Prince Maurice was here with 2000 troops in 1644 from July 2 to 19; and the King was here on the 29th. Sir Richard Grenville was quartered here in December, 1645, with a considerable force, but he suddenly left the town on the approach of Sir Thomas Fairfax, who was here again in March, 1646. In the 20th of Edward I. Hugh de Courtenay, then lord of the barony of Okehampton, gave to the Portreeve and Commonalty about 300 acres of land, near the town, to be used by the burghers and inhabitants of the borough as a common pasture, in satisfaction of the rights which they had previously exercised in the castle park. About 60 years ago the lord of the manor claimed the sole right of pasturage on this common during the summer half of the year, and restricted the burgesses to the winter half. The common is now enclosed and five-sixths of it have been allotted to the lord of the manor, and the remainder to the landowners and inhabitants of the borough, after selling 39A. 3R. 15P., for £1011, to pay the enclosure expenses. The portion belonging to the inhabitants is let, and the rents applied to public uses.

The Borough comprises a circuit round the town of about a mile in diameter. By prescription and feudal charters, the burgesses enjoyed a market and many important rights, from an early period, under the government of a portreeve; but the borough was not incorporated till 1623, when James I. granted it a charter, which vested the government in a mayor, eight principal burgesses, and eight assistants, with a recorder, town clerk, and other officers; and directed that the mayor should be chosen portreeve—thus uniting, in the same person the feudal and corporate offices. This charter was confirmed and enlarged by another granted by Charles II. in 1684. The latter is still the governing charter, as the borough is not included in the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, though it was disfranchised by the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832. It first sent two members to Parliament in the 28th of Edward I., but after the 7th of Edward II. it ceased to return representatives till 1640, when the privilege was restored, and was regularly exercised till 1832. The right of election was in the freeholders and freemen, who numbered about 180. The mayor is chosen yearly by the corporate body from two burgesses nominated by the late mayor; and the mayor, the ex-mayor during one year after having filled the office of mayor, and the recorder, are justices of the peace, and hold general quarter sessions for the borough, but the court of pleas has been long disused. The mayor and burgesses are lords of the borough, and have a guildhall, a small prison, and a chapel. The corporate body and officers are as follows, namely :—principal burgesses—Alfd. Jno. G. Waters, Esq. (mayor), Wm. Ponsford, Esq. (ex-mayor), and Messrs. Jas. H. Holley, H. Drew, E. Newcombe, W. Paddon, and E. P. Burd; assistant burgesses—Messrs. C. Seymour, H. Treliving, W. B. Pearse, W. Wood, S. Newcombe, J. Ball, C. Geen, and W. Newcombe. E. B. Savile, Esq., is recorder, Wm. Burd, Esq., town clerk, and Messrs Jno. Harris, and Joseph Sprague, serjeants-at-mace.

OKEHAMPTON UNION comprises 28 parishes, and had 19,249 inhabitants (9721 males, 9528 females) in 1871, living in 3817 houses, on 126,797 acres of land; besides which there were 203 houses empty and 12 building. The population included 22 blind persons, of whom three were blind from birth; 9 deaf and dumb persons; 31 idiots or imbeciles (not in asylums); 6 lunatics (not in asylums); and 99 paupers in the union workhouse. The annual average expenditure of these parishes during the three years preceding the formation of the union was £9157, but in 1838 it was only £6201; and for the year ended Lady-day 1876, £13,581. The workhouse, built in 1838, has room for about 230 paupers.

The following enumeration of the parishes shows their territorial extent, the population and inhabited houses in 1871, and the present rateable value :—

NOTES.—Marked 1 are in Bratton Clovelly registration sub-district; 2, Hatherleigh; 3, Okehampton; 4, Chagford; 5, North Tawton.

The COUNTY COURT for all the parishes in Okehampton union is held at the Guildhall every eighth Wednesday. Matthew Fortescue, Esq., is judge; William Burd, Esq., registrar and high bailiff.

The town was formerly engaged in the manufacture of serges and other coarse woollens. It has been much improved during the last fifty years. The present commodious market buildings were erected in 1826, when the old shambles were removed from the street. The market, held every Saturday, is extensively supplied, and great quantities of agricultural produce are bought here for the markets of Exeter and Plymouth, and there are also large cattle fairs on the second Tuesday after March 11; on the second Thursday in May; on the Thursday after July 5 and August 5; on the Tuesday after September 11; and on the Wednesday after October 11. Here is a great market on the Saturday before, and a giglet, or pleasure fair, on the Saturday after, Christmas-day.

At Brightley, in this parish, was a small abbey, founded by Richard de Rivers, Earl of Devon, and afterwards removed by his sister to Ford, near Thorncombe. On the site is an ancient house, and the remains of a chapel. The PARISH CHURCH (All Saints) stands on a bold eminence, nearly half a mile W. of the town, and was destroyed by fire, except the tower, on February 13, 1842. It was rebuilt soon afterwards, at the cost of about £3500, and is a spacious and handsome structure, in the Perpendicular style. The tower contains six bells, and has crocketted pinnacles. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £20, and in 1831 at £450, in the gift of J. H. Holley, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. C. W. H. Holley, M.A., who has 230 acres of glebe, and a good modern residence in the Tudor style. The tithes were commuted in 1839, the vicarial for £370, and the rectorial for £271 per annum. A. B. E. Holdsworth, Esq., is impropriator of the latter. ST. JAMES'S CHAPEL, an ancient building in the town, was founded as a chantry, but is now the sole property of the Corporation. Divine service is conducted in it by a chaplain. The INDEPENDENTS have a chapel here, built in 1822, the WESLEYANS one erected in 1841, and the BIBLE CHRISTIANS one in 1872.

The SCHOOL BOARD was formed on January 9, 1872, and consists of J. H. Holley, Esq. (chairman), the Revs. C. W. H. Holley and Henry Trigg, and Messrs. Henry Drew and Henry Newcombe. They have built new schools in North Street, for 200 children, at an expense of about £1500. The LITERARY SOCIETY was established in 1834.

The Parish and Church Lands comprise 8 acres and three houses, which had belonged to a chantry, and were purchased at the Reformation. The Common Lands, mostly acquired at the same time and in the same manner, are vested in trust for the poor and the general benefit of the borough and parish. They comprise about 84 acres and four houses, &c., mostly let at low rents, in consideration of fines paid by the lessees. Half of the clear income is carried to the churchwardens' accounts, and the other half belongs to the Corporation, except 40s. a year for the poor parishioners, who have also the following charities, viz., the rent of 90 acres of moorland, at Blackdown, left by Walter Holditch, in 1485; and about £21 per annum arising from the benefactions of Richard Brock, R. Harragroe, Mary Field, J. Buckle, A. Palmer, and H. Macey. In 1713 John Northmore left for the poor of Okehampton and South Tawton a farm of 45 acres at Drewsteignton, now let for about £32 a year. The Almshouses in Castle Lane, for two poor people, were rebuilt in 1848, and were founded in 1588 by Richard Brock, and endowed with a field of 1A. 0R. 31P. They have also the interest of £20 given by several donors. The Western Almshouse, a small old building, had no endowment, and has been sold. John Stone, in the 2nd of Richard III., left a farm of 150 acres at Lower Westacott, for repairing the bridges and highways. The rents and fines are paid to the Charity Trustees recently appointed, and are applied by the Local Board, among other objects, to the repair of the streets, bridges and roads in the borough.

POST, MONEY ORDER and TELEGRAPH OFFICE, SAVINGS BANK and GOVERNMENT ANNUITY and INSURANCE OFFICE, West Bridge; Mr. Stephen Wellington, postmaster. Letters from London and all parts are delivered at 7.30 a.m. and 3.30 p.m. Box closes at 7.30 p.m. Money Orders are issued and paid from 9 a.m. to 5.30 p.m., and on Saturdays till 8 p.m. On Sundays, the office is open from 7 a.m. to 10 a.m.

OKEHAMPTON MONK. (See Monk Okehampton.)

OTTERTON, a parish and long village, on the eastern bank of the river Otter, within a mile of the sea, and 11 miles S.E. by E. of Exeter, is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Woodbury petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, East Budleigh hundred, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. It had 1103 inhabitants (511 males, 592 females) in 1871, living in 233 houses; the area is 3479 acres, of which 45 acres are water. The parish extends southward to the mouth of the Otter, and including the small hamlets of Northmost-town, Pitson, Passford, and Pinn. Many of the female inhabitants are employed in making Honiton lace; and two fairs are held here on the Wednesday in Easter week, and the Wednesday after October 10. King John founded here a Priory of four monks, subject to St. Michael's Abbey, in Normandy, and endowed it with the manors of Otterton, Sidmouth, and East Budleigh. These monks were to perform divine service, and to distribute 16*s*. worth of bread weekly among the poor. As an alien priory it was dissolved by Henry III., and given to Syon Abbey. At the Dissolution, its yearly revenues were valued at £87 10*s*., and granted to Richard Duke, whose family was seated here till 1741. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are now lords of the manor of Otterton, and owners of most of the parish. The Church (St. Michael) was, the tower excepted, rebuilt in 1870, by the Hon. Lady Rolle, and now consists of nave, chancel and aisle. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are impropriators of the great tithes, and patrons of the vicarage, valued in K.B. at £22, and in 1831 at £314. The Rev. James Bradly Sweet, M.A., is the vicar, and has a good residence, and 23 acres of glebe. The vicarial tithes were commuted in 1840 for £336 per annum. There was anciently a chapel at a place called Hederland. The National School was rebuilt at the same time as the church, and is principally supported by the Rolle family, and a voluntary rate. The cost of the erection of both the church and school was £10,000. For a monthly distribution of bread, the poor have £5 per annum from the trustees of the late Lord Rolle, as interest of £100 left by Henry Austin, in 1701. They have also £5 yearly from the same trustees, as interest of £100 left by Richard Duke, in 1745; and a yearly rent charge of 10*s*., left by a Mr. Channon, out of a field at Crediton. A house and garden, occupied by paupers, are supposed to have been purchased with £20, left by Anthony Isaack, in 1639.

CARRIER, Thomas Till, to Exeter, Tuesday and Friday

OTTERY ST. MARY is an ancient and irregularly built market town, picturesquely seated on the south eastern part of the county and the east side of the river Otter, which about equally divides the parish: it is sheltered on the east and west by boldly swelling hills, and distant 11½ miles E. by N. of Exeter, 15 miles S.E. of Tiverton, 6 miles N. by E. of Sidmouth, and 162 miles W.S.W. of London. Its parish had 2415 inhabitants in 1801, 2880 in 1811; 3522 in 1821; 3849 in 1831; 4194 in 1841; 4421 in 1851; 4340 in 1861; and 4110 (1918 males, 2192 females) in 1871, living in 904 houses, on 9942 acres of land: the decrease of population during the decade 1861–71, is said to be owing to a fire, which in 1866, burnt 111 houses, most of which had been rebuilt (see also 'Vital Statistics' page 81). The parish is in Honiton union and county court district, Ottery petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery rural deanery, and is a hundred of itself. It includes the eight tithings of Alphington, Cadhay, Fluxton, Gosford, Ottery town, Rill, Tipton, and Wiggaton, which extend from one to three miles on all sides of the town, and on both sides of the Otter valley, but chiefly on the eastern side, where the hill rise in lofty summits, overlooking the Sid valley on the east, and commanding extensive views of the coast and the English Channel, about six miles to the south. The parish includes also the villages or hamlets of Alphington, Tipton, Taleford, Comelake, and Metcombe, and many scattered farm houses, &c. The manor and hundred, which are co-extensive with the parish, were given by Edward the Confessor to the Dean and Chapter of Rouen, who obtained a charter for a market and a fair here, in 1226. The weekly market, formerly held on Tuesday, is now held on Thursday, for butchers' meat and other provisions; and there are monthly markets for cattle, &c., on the first Thursday in February. Here were also three annual fairs for cattle, &c., on the Tuesday before Palm Sunday; on the second Tuesday after Whit-Sunday; and on August 15, when it falls on Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday, or if not, on the Tuesday after the 15th, but these three fairs are now reduced to two which are held on the last Thursdays in March and September. The town has an Agricultural and Industrial Association, and several good houses, inns, and shops. It had formerly a regular corn market. The woollen manufacture which formerly flourished here is extinct, but there is in the town a large silk factory, employing about 400 hands.

PETTY SESSIONS for Ottery division (see page 28), are held at the Town Hall on the third Thursday in each month, and the magistrates for the division are the Hon. Leonard A. Addington, William R. Bayley, Esq., Wentworth, W. Buller, Esq., William R. Coleridge, Esq., Charles John Cornish, Esq., Sir Henry A. Farrington, Bart., Lieut.-General William T. Hughes, the Rev. John Huyshe, Sir John Henry Kennaway, Bt., John B. Lousada, Esq., Richard Marker, Esq., and Thomas Kennet Were, Esq. Edmund Stamp, Esq. is their clerk. Edmund Stamp, Esq., is also clerk to the Commissioners of Taxes for East Budleigh and Cliston district who meet at the London Tavern. Frederick A. Smith, Esq., is steward, and Edmund Stamp, Esq., deputy-steward of the court leet and baron, held yearly, in November, for the manor of Ottery, when an inspector of weights and measures, a water bailiff, ale taster, scavenger and other officers are appointed. Sir John Henry Kennaway, Bart., M.P., of Escot House, is lord of the manor, but a great part of the soil belongs to Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., Sir F. H. Bathurst, Lord Coleridge and other branches of his family, R. J. Marker, Esq., and many other freeholders. The ancient mansions called Holcombe, Knightstone, Bishop Court, are now farm houses, as is also Cadhay House, where it is said Henry VIII. slept a night. HEATHS COURT is the country residence of Lord Coleridge, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and SALSTON HOUSE is the pleasant seat of William Rennell Coleridge, Esq., son of the Rt. Rev. William Hart Coleridge, formerly Bishop of Barbadoes, &c. Cadhay, an imposing Elizabethan mansion, is the property of Sir Thomas Hare, and was the seat of the late Admiral Lord Graves, who died in 1802, but it is now occupied by Mrs. Collins. Gosford House is the residence of Sir H. A. Farrington, Bart. The manor house is the residence of Miss Mary Francis Keble Coleridge. Sir Walter Raleigh had a residence in the town, but it was destroyed by fire in 1805; and Samuel T. Coleridge, the eminent poet, was born here in 1772, his father being vicar of the parish. During the early part of the civil wars, Ottery was occupied by the King's forces, who retreated on the approach of Sir Thomas Fairfax, in October, 1645. After having been quartered some time round Exeter, General Fairfax made Ottery his head-quarters from November 15 to December 6, in the same year. Ottery was the birth-place of Babington, Bishop of Exeter, and afterwards of Worcester. In his time the manor of Crediton, which had been affixed to the See of Exeter since 907, was alienated therefrom. He died on February 10, 1610.

The Local Board was formed in 1854. J. T. Davy, Esq., is clerk, F. A. Smith, Esq., treasurer; and Mr. Robert Square, surveyor. John Grandison, Bishop of Exeter, having obtained the manor of Ottery in exchange in 1335, founded here in 1337 a college of secular priests, and endowed it with the manor and the tithes of the parish. This college consisted of 30 members, comprising warden, minister, precentor, sacristan, four canons, eight vicars choral or priest vicars, three priests, twelve clerks, eight choir boys, and a master of grammar. When suppressed in the 37th of Henry VIII., its yearly revenues were estimated at £303 2*s.* 9*d.*; but the same property would now yield about £10,000 per annum. The King gave the great tithes of the parish to the Dean and Canons of Windsor, to whom they still belong, and by his letters patent he gave the church, the college houses, and the small tithes to 'the Church Corporation' thereby created under the name of the Four Governors and assistants of the hereditaments and goods of the Church of St. Mary, of Ottery, for the support of the vicar, the chaplain, and the master of the grammar school, as afterwards noticed. The Church is one of the largest and handsomest parochial churches in the county, and is undergoing a thorough reparation. On each side is a square tower, opening into the body, and forming two transepts, as in Exeter Cathedral. The towers are furnished with pinnacles and open battlements, and that on the north side is crowned by a small spire. At the north-west corner is a richly ornamented chapel, built by Bishop Grandison; the roof of which is covered with highly wrought, fan-shaped tracery. The altar screen is of stone, finely carved into niches and tabernacle work, and on the south side of the communion table are three stone seats rising one above another. The organ, which has been restored and converted from a G to a C organ, has been removed from the south transept to the north aisle of the chancel, the whole cost being borne by Lord Coleridge and the vicar. Most of the windows are narrow and lancet shaped. In the body of the church, between two pillars, arched pyramidally, is the effigy of a man cut in stone, armed cap-a-pie, with a lion couchant at his feet; and opposite to this is the defaced effigy of a woman. These monuments have been long obscured by seats, and are supposed to have been raised in memory of the father and mother of Bishop Grandison. Lord Coleridge is restoring a transept in memory of the late Lady Coleridge. The discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £20, and in 1831 at £150, is in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. William Henry Metcalfe, M.A. He is assisted by the Rev. George Smith, M.A., the chaplain priest, appointed by the four governors of the Church Corporation trust, afterwards noticed. The great tithes of this large parish were commuted in 1845 for £995 15*s.* per annum; and moduses, amounting to £250 12*s.* 10*d.* per annum, are paid in lieu of the small tithes. In the churchyard, which is being enlarged, is a granite cross in memory of the late Sir John Taylor Coleridge, erected by the parishioners.

Alphington Chapel (St. James), in Alphington tithing, about 1½ mile N.E. of the town, was built in 1848–9 by the late Hon. Justice Coleridge, and is in the patronage of Lord Coleridge, and the Rev. Tay Leaver is curate-in-charge.

Escot Church (St. Philip and St. James) is in Gosford tithing, about 1½ mile N.N.W. of the town, and was built by its patron Sir John Kennaway, Bart., in 1837–8, at the cost of about £3000, for a district comprising part of this and part of Talaton parish, and having 554 inhabitants in 1871. It stands near Escot House, the seat of the founder, and is a beautiful structure of Early English architecture, with a turret and bell. Its vicarage, valued at £115, has been endowed by the founder, and is in the incumbency of the Rev. Edmund Simons. St. Michael's Chapel of Ease, in Fluxton tithing, on West hill, about 1½ mile S.W. of the town, was built by subscription in 1845–6. It is a neat structure, with stained glass windows. Its district was assigned it in 1863, and had 302 inhabitants in 1871. The vicarage is in the patronage of the vicar, and incumbency of the Rev. George Lloyd.

Tipton St. John's, in Tipton tithing, is about two miles S. of the town, and was built by subscription in 1837–8. A district was assigned to it in 1841, and it had 387 inhabitants in 1871. It is in the Early English style, with a bell turret, and its vicarage, valued at £73, is in the gift of the vicar, and incumbency of the Rev. A. A. Hunt, M.A.

In the town is an Independent Chapel, Baptist Chapel, and a Wesleyan Chapel, the former of which belonged to Presbyterians in 1715. An organ was built in the Independent Chapel in 1876, at a cost of £180. A new Baptist Chapel is being erected in Batts Lane, adjoining the old building, at an estimated cost of £600. Messrs. Packham & Crook, of Exeter, are the architects; and Mr. E. Carnell, the builder. Here is a Mutual Improvement Society, embracing a numerous list of members.

The Grammar School, commonly called 'The King's School,' as already noticed, forms part of the Church Corporation Trust, the governors of which appoint the master, and allow him £10 a year and the free use of the school premises and a field. He had also 20*s.* a year as the ground rent of a house adjoining the school. This house reverted to the school in 1867, and is supposed to occupy the site of a tenement given by Edmund Prideaux in 1680. The schoolmaster receives £8 8*s.* yearly from Axe's Charity, as noticed below; and about £21 per annum as the rent of 19 acres of land at Whimple, bequeathed in the 17th of Charles II. by Edward Salter, to be applied towards the support of poor boys from this school at Oxford, or, in default of such, for the education of two free scholars of this parish. All the other boys pay for their instruction, and the master takes boarders, for which he has ample accommodation in his residence called the College. The Rev. George Smith, M.A., is the present master.

Ottery School Board was formed on November 23, 1873, and consists of the Rev. George Smith (chairman), F. L. Ellis, Esq. (vice-chairman), Sir J. H. Kennaway, Bart., M.P., W. Massey, Esq., and R. Newton, Esq. W. J. D. Whitaker, Esq., is clerk and treasurer. West Hill Board School (mixed) was built in 1876, at a cost of about £1160, to accommodate 80 children, and Broad Street Infant School was opened in January 1877 for 132 pupils, at an expense of £1354. There is a NATIONAL SCHOOL in Yonder Street for boys, and one in Sandhill Street for girls; the latter was erected by Lord Coleridge. A Reading Room and Lecture Society was established in 1853.

OTTERY FEOFFEE CHARITY, which yields about £600 per annum, is in two branches, called the Ottery and Somersetshire Trusts. The former comprises 220 acres of land and 22 houses, &c., in this parish, left by John Lawrence in 1440; and the latter consists of 2 houses and 73 acres of land at Ilton, Ashill, and Abbot's Isle, in Somersetshire, left by Henry Beaumont in 1590. Formerly a large part of the income was improperly applied in aid of the poor rates, but it is now distributed among the poor parishioners, chiefly in sums varying from £1 to £2 to each individual or family. The present feoffees are the Rev. W. H. Metcalfe, the Rev. A. A. Hunt, William Rennell Coleridge, Esq., F. L. Ellis, Esq., Robert Warren, Esq., and Messrs. John Burgoin, William Taylor Thomas, William Pearse Blake, John B. Wreford, Daniel Power, and Matthew Ellis.

The CHURCH CORPORATION TRUST includes part of the property which had belonged to the College of St. Mary Ottery, and which was vested by letters patent in the 37th of Henry VIII., with 'four governors' and assistants, for the support of the church and parsonage, and of a vicar, a chaplain-priest, and a schoolmaster. The only property vested with the four governors and seven assistants, which yields an income, consists of the small tithes of the parish and the pews in the chancel, yielding about £100 per annum; but they also hold the houses and premises occupied by the vicar and schoolmaster, and the chaplain. They pay the following yearly stipends:—£20 to the vicar, £21 to the chaplain-priest, and £10 to the schoolmaster. They are also trustees of Thomas Axe's Charity, left in 1691, and now producing about £150 per annum, arising from the rents of two houses in Southwark, and from the dividends of £1426 5*s.* 10*d.* 3 per Cent. Stock, purchased with £900, which was paid for three houses taken down in 1790. Out of the income, £8 8*s.* each are paid yearly to the vicar, chaplain, schoolmaster, and parish clerk; and £8 8*s.* to buy drugs for the poor. Three-twelfths of the rest of the income are given in marriage portions to young people who have lived as servants in the parish, and are qualified according to the donor's will, and the remainder is distributed among the poor parishioners. The Blandford Property, which was left by Thomas Axe, the above-named donor, in trust with his 'right heirs,' has been many years under the management of the Governors of the Church Corporation Trust, and consists of a house, three cottages and land at Blandford, left for £55 per annum, of which nine-twelfths belong to the parish clerk, and three-twelfths are to be applied in providing medical and surgical aid for the poor. As noticed with Exeter, three poor persons of Ottery have coats, hats, stockings, and shoes yearly from Jeffrey's Charity.

The vicar has £23 a year, from land supposed to have been left by John Barnard in 1721, for preaching a monthly sermon previous to the administration of the sacrament. Pursuant to the will of William Evans (dated 1777), the trustees of the Independent Meeting House distribute the interest of £100 as follows:—£2 to their minister, and £3 among poor weavers, &c. The poor attending the church regularly have £2 a year as the interest of £50 left by Dorothea Mundy in 1807, secured on the tolls of the Exeter turnpikes. In the same year, William Woodrow left £100 in trust to pay half the interest towards the support of the Church Sunday School, and to divide the remainder among the poor parishioners. Half of £48 15*s.* 8*d.*, bequeathed to the poor in 1816 by Mary Kestell, was applied in 1820 in paying the legacy duty on £400 4 per Cent. Stock, left by the Rev. James How in 1817, for the benefit of the Sunday School. The trustees, called the Church Corporation, now consist of Messrs. Robert Warren, William T. Thomas, W. P. Blake, and Frederick Abraham Smith, governors.

An Hospital, standing in tastefully laid-out grounds near the church, and having room for seven patients, was founded in 1870, at the sole expense of a lady who resides therein and personally superintends the management. The freehold of the property has been purchased and vested in trustees for the purposes of the hospital after the death of the foundress.

PAIGNTON parish, which includes the hamlets of Collaton-Kirkham, Goodrington, Blagdon, Preston, Polsham, Yalberton, &c., gives name to a petty sessional division, and is in Totnes union, and county court district, Paignton petty sessional division, Eastern division of the county, Haytor hundred, Totnes archdeaconry, and Ipplepen rural deanery. It had 3590 inhabitants (1621 males, 1969 females) in 1871, living in 728 houses, on 5092 acres of land. Paignton is an improving town and bathing place, pleasantly situated on the central part of the semi-circular shore of Torbay, about 3½ miles S.W. of Torquay, 6 miles N.W. of Brixham, and 5½ miles E. by N. of Totnes; the parish extends more than 2 miles S. from the town, and 1 mile north along the shore of the beautiful bay. Paignton has risen into notice as a resort for invalids during the last forty years, and is capable of being made a first-class watering-place. It has a good beach of solid sand about a mile in length, and a large extent of contiguous ground which is being converted into a beautiful esplanade and drive, and when completed it will be half a mile in length. This Paignton Green is often the scene of gaiety. Here the gentler sex, belonging to the Archery Clubs, exercise their skill in the weapons of their savage forefathers; and here may be seen men, struggling on horseback for the goal at the manly game of Polo. A large number of bathing machines is kept; and in addition to the train service, an omnibus runs between Torquay and Paignton, thrice daily. In 1865, the late R. Fletcher, Esq., of Birmingham, bought 60 acres of land adjoining the shore and beach for the erection of villa residences; and with the aid of Mr. G. S. Bridgman, of Torquay, produced plans of the future extension of Paignton seaward, which greatly enhanced the value of the contiguous building land, most of which has since been mapped and laid out by the same architect, leading one to expect that the line of terraces and roads will harmonize with one another. The late J. M. Singer, Esq., having purchased nearly 100 acres of land, erected a mansion and pavilion stabling here at a great cost, under the guidance of G. S. Bridgman, Esq. On these grounds may be seen one of the finest conservatories in Devonshire. It is octagonal in form, having a base of 70 feet, and height of 60 feet, and is constructed of iron and glass. The parish and neighbourhood form one of the most fertile parts of Devon, and abound in extensive orchards, celebrated for excellent cider, of which great quantities are shipped here for London and other markets in small vessels which bring in coal, &c. The district is also famous for very large and sweet cabbages, called 'Paignton cabbages,' of which great quantities are sent to all parts of the country. Paignton was held from an early period by the Bishops of Exeter, who had a palace here, of which there are still some ivy-mantled remains near the church. Bishop Veysey conveyed it, by royal requisition, to the Earl of Pembroke, and it was sold in 1644 to Sir Henry Carey. It was purchased, in 1654, by S. Kelland, Esq., but has for some time been held by the Templers, and now belongs to J. G. J. Templer, Esq. Collaton-Kirkham belongs to Mrs. Hogg. Primley is the property and residence of J. F. Belfield, Esq.; Oldway, Mrs. I. E. Singer; Parkfield, A. H. Dendy, Esq.; Redcliffe, R. C. Smith, Esq.; Goodrington, J. Brown, Esq.; Kingshurst, the Rev. T. G. Hall; Barcombe, — Keates, Esq.; Bishop's Palace, Colonel Bridgman; The Quarry, F. H. Spragge, Esq.; and the Fletcher, Butland, Browse, Hunt Jackson, Distin, Lidstone, and other families have estates here.

A PIER was constructed here in 1838, under the powers of an Act of Parliament, which enables vessels of 150 tons to load and unload their cargoes. The pier cost about £5000, raised in £10 shares. Mr. W. R. Hunt is secretary to the company. The COASTGUARD STATION is at Roundham; Mr. Henry Steward is chief officer, and has seven men under him. PETTY SESSIONS are held at the Town Hall on the first Thursday in each month; at Churston on the second and fourth Wednesday in every month; and at Torquay every Monday. The magistrates of this division are F. H. Spragge, Esq., Lord Churston, H. Studdy, Esq., Capt. H. T. Uniacke, C. S. Hayne, Esq., H. Toms, Esq., Ll. Llewellyn, Esq., Sir H. Seale, Bart., J. H. Seale, Esq., W. Froude, Esq., H. C. March Phillipps, Esq., the Rev. T. Kitson, E. Vivian, Esq., H. Phillpotts, Esq., W. B. Fortescue, Esq., the Rev. F. A. Stewart-Savile, W. H. Halliday, Esq., W. T. Bridges, Esq., P. B. Drinkwater, Esq., Randolph Robinson, Esq., L. B. Bowering, Esq., De Castro F. Lyne, Esq., and O. Bradshaw, Esq. Mr. George Hearder, of Torquay, is clerk.

The TOWN HALL was built in 1868–9, has a large room which is fitted up and used both as a Local Board Room and Petty Sessions Room; the room over is used by the Freemasons, who rent it from the Local Board; there are also two smaller rooms which they occupy. The School Board has also their offices here. The POLICE STATION, in New Street, for the Devon Constabulary, was built in 1873, and has five cells. Mr. John Smith is police sergeant. The LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH for the parish was formed in 1862, and has its offices at the Town Hall. The Board now consists of Messrs. J. T. Goodridge (chairman), Pollard, Earle, Couldrey, Palk, Crossman, Hodge, Hannay, Hunt, Mudge, Rossiter, and Browse. Mr. A.

Gregory, treasurer; Mr. Henry G. Lidstone is clerk; Mr. John P. Stone, medical officer; Mr. I. G. Walters, surveyor and inspector of nuisances; and Mr. Arthur Waycott, collector.

The Paignton Gaslight, Coal and Coke Company (lim.) was formed in 1861 with a capital of £3800 in £5 shares. The charge for gas is 5*s.* 10*d.* per 1000 cubic feet. There are 76 street lamps. Mr. Henry Murch is secretary and manager; and Mr. Francis Puddicombe, collector.

A monthly market is held on the property of A. H. Dendy, Esq., on the third Monday in each month; and a general fair in Whitsun week; the latter was granted in 1294. Here is a Branch of the Devon and Cornwall Bank, of which Mr. Alfred Gregory is manager; a branch of the West of England and South Wales District Bank at 3 Gerston Place, Mr. Thomas Arnold is cashier; and at 2 Dartmouth Place is Paignton Penny Savings' Bank, Mrs. Hunt Leaman being manager. There are very good hotels, the principal of which are the 'Esplanade Hotel,' facing the sea, and situated within its own ornamental grounds; the 'Gerston Hotel,' adjoining the Railway Station; and the 'Crown and Anchor.'

The Church (St. John) is a large and handsome structure, consisting of nave, aisles, transepts, and tower containing six bells. The west entrance, under the tower, is a fine specimen of the enriched Anglo-Norman style, with receding columns, and the chevron and other ornaments of the period of Henry I. The chancel has been restored by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who have enriched it by laying down Minton's tiles and boarding the panels of the ceiling. The tower has been newly roofed, and the stucco removed from the outside; the bells re-hung (one being re-cast); a new clock with four faces (one illuminated), chiming the quarters and striking the hour, placed in the tower; the nave entirely reroofed and the chancel arch rebuilt; the ugly gallery at the west end removed, thus opening the noble tower arch and fine tower window; and the nave, aisles and tower refloored and reseated. All the windows in the tower, in the south aisle, and one in the north aisle have been restored; the East window has been enriched with stained glass by various donors; one of the north windows in the chancel, similarly enriched, by subscription, is in memory of the late vicar, the Rev. R. Gee; the stained-glass window, over the south porch, has been erected by D. Jenkins, Esq., M.P.; and the two windows to the east of the south porch have been put in by Mrs. Singer. The organ now stands in the south chancel aisle. The battlements and pinnacle of the south aisle have been restored, the stuccco removed from the outside and a new panelled ceiling erected. The lower room of the vestry has been restored by the vicar and his friends; the ceilings of the tower and nave, the sedilia and part of the chancel walls have been handsomely decorated by Vernon Benbow, Esq. The cost of the above improvements, except as otherwise specified, has been between £3000 and £4000, which was raised by subscription, concerts, &c., among the parishioners and their friends. Other improvements, including the restoration of the battlements, pinnacles and ceilings of the north aisles and transepts, the roof and upper room of the vestry, the windows on the north side of the church, and the renovation of the Kirkham Chantry, are in contemplation, and will be undertaken as soon as funds permit. The estimated expense of these last is about £1000. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £52 1*s.* 0½*d.*, and now with the curacy of Marldon annexed, in the patronage of Sir S. H. Northcote, Bart., and Heirs of Templer, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Frederick Wm. Poland, who has a good residence, built in 1863 at a total cost of about £3000. There is a glebe of half an acre, and the vicarial tithes of Paignton are commuted at £430, and the rectorial at £90. The rectory and manor of Preston were appropriated to the Precentor of Exeter Cathedral by Bishop Quivel, in the reign of Edward I. Collaton Church (St. Mary the Virgin) was built in 1866, from the designs of J. W. Rowell, Esq., of Newton Abbot, and is a neat structure in the Early English style, consisting of nave, chancel and tower, at the south-west angle of the nave, containing a clock. A Mission Church (St. Andrew) has been recently erected at a considerable cost, through the exertions of V. Benbow, Esq. The Rev. A. V. Cox is curate-in-charge. The ecclesiastical district was formed in 1864, and had 319 inhabitants in 1871, living on 2321 acres of land. The living is a vicarage, valued at £300, in the patronage of Trustees, and incumbency of the Rev. Peter Lilly. There is no glebe; but a parsonage house has been erected.

The Congregationalists have a place of worship here, called Betah Congregational Church, which was erected in 1876–7, in a Gothic style, at a cost of £2800, and has a tower surmounted by a turret. The old Independent Chapel is used for school purposes and various religious meetings. The Wesleyan Chapel was built in 1869, at a cost of £600, and has 300 sittings, and the Plymouth Brethren have a preaching room. The School Board was formed in 1874, and now consists of Messrs. Y. Eastley (chairman), A. H. Dendy, J. R. Parnell, James Lewis and F. H. Trevithick. Mr. Walter Drew is their clerk. The Board have four schools under their control, namely, two Infants', accommodating respectively 120 and 200 children; one Boys', holding 200 pupils, and one Girls', for 136 scholars. The Boys' and Infants' Schools in Curlege have been built by the Board, at an outlay of £2239, borrowed from the Public Works Loan Commissioners. The National Schools, built in 1829, with two rooms for boys and girls, and enlarged in 1846 by the addition of a room for infants and a house for the teacher, have been transferred to the Board. They are called the Church Street Schools, and the residence is occupied by the master of the Curlege Street School.

The Bijou Theatre was built about seven years ago, and really forms part of the Gerston Hotel.

The Parish Lands, &c., comprise about 20 acres, and seven houses let for about £52 a year, to which are added the dividends of £500 Three per Cent. Consols, purchased by the trustees with money derived from fines paid by the lessees, except £18 left by Jane Yabbacombe. Part of the land was purchased with £150 left by John and Charles Kellond in 1692 and 1695. The rents and dividends are applied chiefly in schooling and apprenticing poor children. The dividends of £1000 Three per Cent. Consols, left by Allan Belfield in 1800, are paid to the schoolmaster for teaching twenty poor children to read, write and cast accounts, and for finding them school-books, &c. Steps are being taken for the establishment of a Cottage Hospital for Paignton and the neighbourhood.

The poor have the following yearly gifts, viz. 20*s.*, left by John Peter out of Cornworthy tithes; 6*s.* 8*d.*

left by Richard Kelly; £4 left by Matthew Neck, in 1709, out of Langridge close; 20*s.* left by Thomas Butland; 20*s.* left by Wm. Furneaux; 20*s.* out of Furze Park, left by John Gardner; and 10*s.* as the interest of £10, left by Margaret Squarry in 1747.

William Adams, a native of Paignton, and buried here in 1687, was one of the five persons whose extraordinary escape from slavery at Algiers, and wonderful preservation in an open boat, in their passage to the coast of Spain, are related in 'Wanley's Wonders of the Little World.'

The Torbay Lodge of Freemasons (No. 1358) was established here in 1871, and meets on the last Tuesday in the month. At 2 Dartmouth Place is a Band of Hope, which was formed in 1875. Mr. J. Lewis is the secretary.

PANCRASWEEK, Pancraswyke, or Week St. Pancras, a village and parish, including the hamlets of Kingford, Woodsdown, and Dexbeer, 4 miles W.N.W. of Holsworthy, is in Holsworthy union, county court district, deanery, and petty sessional division, Holsworthy polling district of South Devon, and Black Torrington hundred. It had 352 inhabitants (178 males, 174 females) in 1871, living in 66 houses, on 3782 acres of land. Sir George Stucley Stucley, Bart., is lord of the manor, but part of the soil belongs to Earl Stanhope and others. The CHURCH (St. Pancras) is a handsome building with a fine tower containing five bells. In the church is a hagioscope, and the structure is to be restored this year. The living is annexed to Bradworthy vicarage. Mrs. Barker is impropriator of the great tithes, which have been commuted for £260 a year, and the small tithes for £100. The glebe is 8 acres, and the parsonage is a small cottage. The WESLEYANS have a chapel in the parish, and there is a Voluntary Elementary School.

PARKHAM, a parish and scattered village, near the source of the small river Yeo, 6½ miles S.W. of Bideford, includes the small hamlets of Ash, Horns Cross, East Goldsworthy, Hoops, Newhaven, and part of the small fishing village of Bucks Mill. The parish, which is bounded on the north by Barnstaple Bay, is in Bideford union, county court district, and petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Hartland rural deanery. It had 936 inhabitants (464 males, 472 females) in 1871, living in 191 houses, on 5808 acres of land. Ash Moor was enclosed in 1850. The Hon. Mark Rolle is lord of the manor, but part of the soil belongs to T. Kekewich, J. R. Pine-Coffin, T. Rogers, T. Kirkwood, Esqrs., and others. The CHURCH (St. James) is a large, ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, aisles, and tower containing six bells. It was restored in 1868–75 at the cost of about £2500; the edifice was re-roofed, a new floor was laid, the church refitted, and other improvements effected. The living is a rectory, valued in K.B. at £20 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in 1831 at £738, in the patronage of W. H. Stone, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Hensley, M.A. There is a glebe of 129 acres, two superior cottages, and a good residence. The tithes were commuted in 1841 for £730 a year. In the parish are two Wesleyan Chapels, and one Bible Christian. The SCHOOL BOARD was formed in 1873, and consists of J. R. Pine-Coffin, Esq. (chairman), and Messrs. George Andrew (vice-chairman), Giles George, John Nance-Kivell, and George Heywood. The rector is clerk to the Board. The very handsome School, with teachers' residence, which was erected by the rector in 1865, was purchased from him by the Board in 1877 for £750: it has accommodation for 130 children. The Poor's Land, 4½ acres, is let for £3 a year, but the charity is in course of reorganisation. The poor have 40*s.* a year, left by Robert Honnacott and Mary Cholwill, but the former has not been paid for several years.

PARRACOMBE is a parish among the high moorland hills, and includes the picturesque hamlets of Parracombe Mill, Heal, and Bodley. It is in Barnstaple union and county court district, Braunton petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, and Sherwell rural deanery and hundred. It had 366 inhabitants (187 males, 179 females) in 1871, living in 76 houses, on 4363 acres of land. Parracombe village is on the Lynton Road, and 5 miles S.S.W. of Lynton and E. of Combemartin, and 12 miles N.N.E. of Barnstaple. The village of Parracombe is 638 feet and the church 848 feet above the sea level. Parracombe manor was granted by William I. to William Fallaise; it descended to the Fitz Martyns through the Traceys, barons of Barnstaple; in the time of Edward I. it was the property of the St. Albyns, and seems to have so continued until 1860, when Langley St. Albyn, Esq., gave up the manorial rights to the landowners for 70 acres of common lands. There are three manors within that of Parracombe—Middleton, formerly called Midland, the property of Mr. William Dovell; Court Place, held by Mr. Charles Blackmore, jun.; and Rowley, which belongs to J. N. Pyke-Nott, Esq., whose uncle, John Nott, Esq., purchased the property from the family of Mrs. Roach, heiress of the Locks, in whose family it had been for many generations. Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, M.P., Messrs. George, James H., and John Smyth, William Lock, and others, have estates here. The common lands, consisting of about 900 acres, were enclosed in 1860. The small river Heddon runs through the parish, and after passing some of the most picturesque scenery in the neighbourhood empties itself into the Bristol Channel at the small bay called Heddon's Mouth. A cattle fair, which was commenced here in 1856, is held on August 18, and sometimes as many as 500 sheep and 100 oxen are offered for sale. In digging the foundations for the brewery in 1876, silver ore was found. At Holwell is a singular circular mound called the castle. A POLICE STATION having two cells was erected here in 1862. The old CHURCH dates from the 12th century, and consists of nave, chancel, south aisle, south porch, and tower containing three bells. A new CHURCH, which will be dedicated to Christ, is now being built in the village on glebe land, in the Early Decorated style, at an estimated cost of £3000, raised by subscription, grants from building societies, and proceeds of bazaars, &c. It will consist of nave, chancel, north aisle, vestry, and tower containing a clock and six bells, two of the latter being brought from the old church. The old church will be repaired and used as a mortuary chapel. The Register dates from 1600. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £13 10*s.* 10*d.*, is in the patronnge of J. N. Pyke-Nott, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. P. N. Leakey, M.A., who has 64A. 3R. 25P. of glebe, and a handsome rectory house, built in 1827 at the cost of £1000, and seated on an acclivity overlooking a romantic valley. The WESLEYAN CHAPEL, which was erected in 1839 at an expense of £100, was repaired in 1866, and two front windows put in at a cost of £30; the chapel will seat 100 persons. The BRETHREN have a meeting room here. The SCHOOL was repaired and enlarged in 1874 at an outlay of £30. The poor should have the interest of £28, which was vested with the overseers.

PAYHEMBURY, or Peyhembury, is a pleasant village, on a declivity, near a small rivulet, 5½ miles W. of Honiton, 13 miles N.E. of Exeter, 1¾ from Sidmouth Junction, and 4 north from Ottery St. Mary. Its parish rises boldly on the north-west, and includes the hamlets of Cheriton, Tale, and Upton, and many scattered farmhouses, &c. It is in Honiton union, county court district, Cullompton petty sessional division, Hayridge hundred, Northern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Ottery rural deanery. It had 508 inhabitants (253 males, 255 females) in 1871, living in 113 houses, on 2698 acres of land. On a lofty eminence is a large treble entrenchment, called Hembury Fort, supposed by some to have been the Roman station Moridunum, which others suppose to have been at Seaton. Near this entrenchment is a house, which was built by the late Admiral Samuel Graves, a distinguished officer, who invented the lifeboat. The manor of Payhembury, or Peahembury, belonged to the Giffords in the reign of Henry III., and afterwards passed to the Stanton, Crewkerne, Prous, and other families; but was dismembered some years ago. Sir John Kennaway, Bart., is owner of the manor of Tale, which was formerly held by Ford Abbey. Leyhill and Uggaton estates belong to Mrs. Drewe, and the old farmhouse, on the former, was long a seat of the Willoughby and Trevelyan families. Several smaller freeholders have estates in the parish. The CHURCH (St. Mary) is a handsome Gothic structure, with an embattled tower and six bells. The nave and chancel are separated by an elegant screen and rood loft, and in the chancel is a fine monument in memory of Mrs. Goswell. In 1852 the chancel was restored and a window was filled with stained glass by Mrs. Catherine Messiter, in memory of the Rev. T. T. Jackson. In the churchyard is one of the largest and oldest yew trees in the county, split with age or lightning, and supposed to have braved the storms of several centuries. The church was appropriated to Ford Abbey, and the great tithes, except a portion belonging to the vicar, are in the impropriation of J. H. C. Wyndham, Esq. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £18 4*s.* 2*d.*, and in 1831 at £251, is in the patronage of Trustees, and incumbency of the Rev. G. T. M. Messiter, M.A. The vicarage house is an ancient ivy-mantled residence, and the glebe is 81A. 2R 24P. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £147 per annum to the vicar, and £150 to the impropriator. Here is a NATIONAL SCHOOL, built in 1851. The poor have a yearly rent-charge of £8, left by Jane Saunders, in 1669, out of a house and land. They have also the dividends of £148 4*s.* 4*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, purchased with arrears of this rent-charge, and £26 given by Thomasine Piggott and Richard Venn. The poor have the dividends of £100, left by Mr. Edward Frost, of Tuck Mill, and distributed yearly at the discretion of the vicar and churchwardens.

POST OFFICE at Mr. William Hole's. Letters are received from Exeter through Ottery St. Mary at 9.10 a.m., and despatched at 4.15 p.m. Ottery is the nearest Money Order Office.

PENNYCROSS, or Weston Peverell, about 2½ miles N. of Plymouth, is in Plympton St. Mary union, East Stonehouse county court district, Midland Roborough petty sessional division, Southern division of the county, Totnes archdeaconry, deanery of Three Towns, and Roborough hundred. The civil parish contained 435 inhabitants (177 males, 258 females) in 1871, living in 76 houses on 1252 acres of land, including part of the village of Weston Mill. The manor, anciently held by the Peverells, and subsequently by the Carew, Prowse, Harris, and Hewer families, now belongs to the Rev. J. H. Parlby, M.A., J.P. The CHURCH (St. Pancras), an ancient structure consisting of nave, aisles, chancel, transept, was rebuilt in 1820, and restored in 1870 at a cost of £1500, and contains 300 sittings. In the south transept is a window filled with stained glass as a testimonial to the Rev. C. T. Collins Trelawny on his resigning the office of minister which he held here for 27 years; several other windows are similarly enriched, the East window being the gift of the Rev. J. H. Parlby, M.A., and that in the north transept of Col. FitzGerald. Ecclesiastically, Pennycross is a tithing annexed to the vicarage of St. Andrew, Plymouth. The Rev. C. Wilkinson, D.D., is vicar, and the Rev. P. W. Bates curate in charge. Baldwin Bastard, Esq., owns the great tithes.

PETROCK STOW, or Stow St. Petrock, a parish and pleasant village, 4 miles N.N.W. of Hatherleigh, is in Torrington union and county court district, Great Torrington petty sessional division, Northern division of the county, Shebbear hundred, Barnstaple archdeaconry, and Torrington rural deanery. It had 570 inhabitants (291 males, 279 females) in 1871, living in 116 houses, on 4000 acres of land. The parish includes 210 acres of woodland, 1360 acres of open moor, and the deer park of Heanton Satchville (136 acres) where the ancient mansion was burnt down many years ago, as noticed at page 488. The present handsome mansion, called HEANTON HOUSE, stands in the adjoining parish of Huish, and is the seat of Lord Clinton, the lord of the manors, and owner of most of the soil of both parishes. The old house was for some time a seat of the Rolles, and afterwards of the Earls of Orford. Merland belongs to Mr. James Bonifant, and formerly belonged to the Zouch and Fitzwarren families; and Mr. Henry Bonifant has an estate here. The CHURCH (St. Petrock) is ancient, and consists of nave, chancel, porch, and tower containing five bells. It contains a much admired Norman font. The church is being rebuilt, the foundation stone of the new church being laid on June 13, 1878, by Lord Clinton. Mr. J. F. Gould, of Barnstaple, is the architect, and Messrs. Medland and Grant, of Torrington, the builders. The living, a rectory, valued in K.B. at £17 0*s.* 2½*d.*, and in 1831 at £285, is in the patronage of Lord Clinton, and incumbency of the Rev. Louis Woollcombe, M.A., who has a good residence and 43 acres of glebe. The tithes have been commuted for £277 per annum. The PARISH SCHOOL was built by Lord Clinton, in 1842, at the cost of about £700. The WESLEYANS and BIBLE CHRISTIANS have chapels here, and the poor have £2 a year, left by several donors.

POST OFFICE at Mr. William Trace's. Letters from Beaford, by foot post, are received at 9 a.m., and despatched at 4.30 p.m. Delivery on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday only. Hatherleigh is the nearest Money Order Office.

PEYHEMBURY. (See Payhembury.)

PILTON, a parish and village partly in the borough of Barnstaple (see page 125), is in Barnstaple union, county court district, archdeaconry and rural deanery, Braunton petty sessional division and hundred, and Northern division of the county. It had 2033 inhabitants (943 males, 1090 females) in 1871, living in 435 houses, on 1861 acres of land. It includes Bradiford and Raleigh hamlets. The manor of Pilton, which belonged to a Benedictine Priory, passed at the Dissolution to the Chichester family, and is now held by the Hon. Mark G. K. Rolle, who owns a great part of the parish. An annual fair was granted to Pilton in 1344. Pilton House is the seat of Charles H. Williams, Esq., late M.P. for Barnstaple. Upcott, about 1½ mile north-west of the town, is the property of Lieut.-Col. Harding. Raleigh factory, formerly occupied as a woollen factory and afterwards as a lace mill, is now used as a furniture manufactory. The CHURCH (St. Mary) stands on an eminence near the north entrance to the town. The Benedictine Priory of which it formed a part, was one of the most important and ancient ecclesiastical establishments in the neighbourhood, and formed a cell or appendage to the Abbey of Malmesbury. According to Leland, Speed, and others, it was founded by King Athelstane, and apart from documentary evidence, copies of the official seal of the Priory are in existence which bear upon them the figure and name of that monarch. A list of the successive priors is extant, dating from 1200 to the Dissolution, when the priory and adjoining estates, which were valued at £56 12*s.* 8*d.*, were leased by Henry VIII. Some of the monastic buildings were probably destroyed about this time, but the church and chapelries appear to have undergone but little alteration until the civil war of 1646, when the tower was partially demolished, as appears from an inscription over the porch, and the extensive buildings on the north and east sides laid in ruins. The tower was rebuilt in 1696, and now possesses the finest and largest peal of eight bells (with the exception of Exeter) in the west of England. The church consists of a chancel, chancel aisle, nave, and north and south aisles. The north aisle, which is separated from the nave by three plain and massive Early English arches, seems originally to have had a sloping roof with no windows. The present wagon roof was erected in 1639 when four windows were inserted. The south aisle with the chancel aisle has six arches, and dates from the middle of the 15th century, with the exception of the south wall which was partially rebuilt in 1875. The church has been recently fitted with open seats of American pitch-pine in lieu of the high and narrow pews; the oak plates and hammer beams formerly concealed by a plaster cornice in the style of the 18th century, have been cleaned. The roofs of the nave, and the north and south aisles have been restored, and the inter-spaces filled with panelling. In the chancel is the ancient burial place of the Chichester family; the earliest inscription records the death of Richard Chichester in 1498, and there are others to Sir Jno. Chichester (1569), and Sir Robert (1627). The latter has six life-size stone effigies. The carved canopy over the font and the handsome rood screen are covered with paint. Attached to the pulpit is an iron hand and arm holding an hour glass. There are projecting corbels against the pillars of the north aisle, marking probably the site of a 'gild' altar; and there are brasses to Alexander Bret (1536), and Robert Bret (1540). The church contains a reredos. The living, a vicarage, valued at £105, including about 20 acres of glebe, is in the gift of C. W. Hodge, Esq. The incumbent is the Rev. W. C. Hall, M.A., who has erected a neat modern residence. The tithes, formerly belonging to the priory, have been mostly sold to the landowners. The National School, built in 1840 by the present vicar, was enlarged and improved in 1874 at a cost of about £65.

The parish lands, &c., which have been vested in feoffees from an early period for poor parishioners, comprise eleven almshouses, with 30 inmates. The charity derives yearly £53 0*s.* 11*d.* from stock, and £164 12*s.* 5*d.* from rents of houses and land. The stock was purchased by the feoffees at various times with money received in fines on the granting of leases. During the year ended Lady-day 1877, £50 1*s.* 2*d.* was received for dilapidations. The income is chiefly distributed to the poor in clothing; and the feoffees subscribe to schools. Some of the almshouses were rebuilt in 1849, by the Rev. Thomas Bowdler, and others by the late T. W. Harding, Esq. St. Margaret's Hospital, for the reception of lepers, stood in this parish, and its site, and the land and buildings belonging to it, were sold to the feoffees of the parish lands, in 1735, for £70, on condition that they should continue to appoint, as vacancies occurred by death, a prior brother and sister of the said hospital from among the poor at Pilton, and divide among them the clear yearly rents of the property belonging to the hospital. For the year ended Lady-Day 1877, £2 9*s.* was received as dividends; £75 8*s.* 3*d.* from rents, £9 from dilapidations. £21 was paid to the prior brother and sister, £13 19*s.* in lengthening quay, and £52 10*s.* 1*d.* in rebuilding store, besides which there were several other payments. The poor parishioners have the following yearly sums:—26*s.*, left by Sir John Acland, in 1616, and paid by the corporation of Exeter; 13*s.*, left by Edward Fairchild, in 1653, out of Lane estate, in the parish of Charles; 36*s.*, left by Robert Incledon, in 1746, out of the Unicorn Inn; 55*s.*, as interest of £60 left by John Rogers, and John Exeter, invested in the feoffees of the parish lands; 20*s.*, left by Thomas Harding, in 1767, out of Cladovin estate; and 26*s.* left by Christopher Lethbridge, out of Westaway estate; together with 10*s.* for repairing his monument and the church roof. The above-named Edward Fairchild also left 13*s.* for schooling poor children.

PINHOE, a parish and pleasant village, 2½ miles N.E. of Exeter, is in St. Thomas union, Exeter county court district, Wonford petty sessional division and hundred, Eastern division of the county, Exeter archdeaconry, and Aylesbeare rural deanery. The parish, which is generally fertile and rising in bold undulations, had 530 inhabitants (262 males, 268 females) in 1871, living in 120 houses, on 1735 acres of land. On Beacon Hill, a commanding eminence near the village, are several neat houses. In 1001, King Ethelred's army was defeated here, with great slaughter, by the Danes, who burnt Pinhoe, Broad Clist, and other neighbouring villages. The manor was part of the royal demesne, and is described in Domesday Book as containing the vills or farms of Monkerton, Pinpound, Langaton, Herrington, and Wotton. It was successively held by the Vallibus, Multon, Streech, Cheney, Walgrave, Elwill, and other families. Lord Poltimore is lord of the manor; but a great part of the soil belongs to Sir Frederick H. Bathhurst, F. W. A. Sanders, Esq., George E. Elliott, and John R. A. Salter, Esq. The vicar of this parish receives a pension of one mark (13*s.* 4*d.*) a year, one of the most ancient royal donations existing. It is supposed to have been granted in recognition of services rendered by the priest of the church, at the battle which took place between the Danes and the men of Exeter, referred to above. The Church (St. Michael) is an antique stone fabric, consisting of nave, chancel, north aisle, and embattled tower, containing four bells. The nave is separated from the chancel by an old carved oak screen of Perpendicular date, and the church contains an early Norman font. In the churchyard, opposite the porch, is a large stone cross, in a good state of preservation; for very many years the cross was buried, to preserve it from the image breakers of the 17th century, but discovered and re-erected about 50 years ago. The restoration of the church is contemplated. The Register dates from 1561. The living is a vicarage, valued in K.B. at £14 13*s.* 4*d.*, and in 1831 at £227, in the patronage of the Bishop of Exeter, and incumbency of the Rev. F. W. Pulling, B.A. The glebe is 1 acre, and the vicarage house is a neat brick residence, on an eminence commanding a fine prospect of the surrounding country. The rectorial tithes are commuted for £235, and the vicarial £265. Miss Arundell and the Misses Rashleigh are lessees of the rectorial tithes, held under the see of Exeter. John Reynolds, a learned divine, and writer against the Roman Catholics, was born here about 1546. His brother, Thomas, was instituted vicar of Pinhoe in 1530; he was Dean of Exeter and (Roman Catholic) bishop-elect of Hereford, but was not consecrated, owing to the death of Queen Mary. Tradition says that he was born on the family estate of Pinhoe, and that he died in the Marshalsea Prison on November 24, 1559. In 1655, £175 was given by Grace Bampfield, and other donors, and was laid out in the purchase of a house and 13 acres of land, at Broad Clist, now let for about £30 a year. Five-ninths of the rent of this estate belong to the poor of Pinhoe, and the rest to the poor of Stoke-Canon and Thorverton parishes. The poor of Pinhoe have £4 10*s.* a year as the rent of land, left by Humphrey Wilcocks, in 1686; and £6 18*s.* a year from £230 8*s.* Three per cent. Consols, purchased with £200 left by John Land, in 1817. They have also two yearly rent-charges, viz., 30*s.* left by John Sanders, in 1729, for giving bread to the poor of the parish, and 40*s.*, left by Sir John Elwill, for teaching the children to read; and an extra 20*s.*, left by John Sanders, also for teaching children to read.

PLYMOUTH.

(See also DEVONPORT and STONEHOUSE.)

PLYMOUTH, DEVONPORT, and STONEHOUSE, are commonly called the 'Three Towns,' though they adjoin each other, and form one of the largest seaports and principal naval and military stations in England, situated at the south-west corner of Devon. They extend about 3 miles from east to west, and comprise, with their northern suburbs of Morice Town, Stoke, and Ford, nearly 200,000 inhabitants. Plymouth is on the east, Stonehouse in the centre, and Devonport on the west; and their eastern, southern, and western sides, are skirted and deeply indented by the broad, deep, and extensive creeks and harbours in the estuaries of the Tamar and Plym, which meet in Plymouth Sound, and take the names of Catwater, Sutton Pool, Mill Bay, Stonehouse Pool, and Hamoaze; to the latter of which the great naval arsenal of Devonport Dock Yard presents its massive sea wall and numerous docks, slips, &c., in a semi-circular range of more than half a mile, exclusive of the Gun Wharf, and the large Government Steam Yard on the north, opposite Torpoint, to which there is a steam ferry across the estuary of the Tamar. Plymouth Citadal and Mill Bay front that broad arm of the English Channel called the Sound, in which the force of the Atlantic surges is considerably broken by a stupendous breakwater, while the harbours and creeks on either side are shut in from the violence of ocean storms, on the west by that bold peninsular range of hills, extending from Cornwall to Mount Edgcumbe, and that long projection of Stonehouse terminating at the Devil's Point, opposite Mount Edgcumbe; and on the east by the bold promontory of Mount Batten, at the entrance to Catwater, the mouth of the river Plym, from which Plymouth has its name. The Three Towns are now connected with both the Great Western and the London and South-Western Railway Companies, the former of which has been recently amalgamated with the South Devon Company. There is a branch railway to Tavistock and Launceston; and the Cornwall Railway, which now connects the westernmost county with the London and South-Western line, extends to Falmouth and Penzance. The London and South-Western Railway, opened to Devonport in 1876, is likely to be of great advantage to the neighbourhood. A fine and commodious terminus has been erected at Stoke, near Devonport, a joint station at North Road, Plymouth; and a large range of Station buildings are rapidly approaching completion at the east end of Plymouth, near Sutton Harbour. The Great Western Railway Company also purpose re-erecting the old station at Mill Bay, and developing the resources of the Docks there. The South-Western Company has similar work in hand at Sutton Harbour, at the eastern end of the town, and a scheme is on foot for enclosing Stonehouse Creek and developing mercantile matters there. The population of the Parliamentary Borough of Plymouth in 1871 was 70,091; and that of Devonport (including the parish of Stonehouse) 64,034, making a total of 134,125 for the three towns, but the number considerably exceeds this at the present time, for not only have the towns increased in extent over their original borders, but every available building space in the interior has been taken advantage of. The large modern town of Devonport which is separated from Plymouth by that of Stonehouse, was called Plymouth Dock till 1824 (see page 270).

PLYMOUTH is the most eastern of 'The Three Towns,' and occupies on important maritime situation at the head of Plymouth Sound, which here extends its expansive waters into the noble harbours of Catwater, Mill Bay, Sutton Pool, Stonehouse Pool, and Hamoaze, and receives on the east and west the broad estuaries of the Plym and the Tamar. It is distant 44 miles S.W. of Exeter; 29 miles W. of Dartmouth; 15 miles S. of Tavistock; 5 miles E.S.E. of Saltash; and 216 miles W.S.W. of London. The population of its Municipal Borough was 16,030 in 1801; 20,803 in 1811; 21,591 in 1821; 31,080 in 1831; 36,520 in 1841; 52,221 in 1851; 62,599 in 1861; and 68,758 in 1871. Its street arrangements are very extensive, and its site ascends on a bold and broken gradient, back from Mill Bay and Sutton Pool, and the intermediate headland occupied by the Citadel and the Hoe; and is such as to render some of the streets steep, and the entrance from the north-east rather inconvenient; but many of the streets and some of the entrances to the town have been much improved during the last 45 years. There are now in the suburbs many handsome villas and rows of neat houses; and in the town good streets and many commodious public buildings, well-stocked shops, and first-class hotels, large inns, and taverns.

In the Saxon era, the site of Plymouth was called Tameorwerth, but after the Conquest, it acquired the name of Sutton, or South Town, in reference to its more ancient neighbour Plympton. In the reign of Edward I., one part of it was called Sutton Prior and the other Sutton Valletort; the north part of the town being on the lands of the Prior of Plympton, and the south part on the estate of the Valletorts. These names were relinquished in the reign of Henry VI. for the more appropriate appellation of Plym-mouth. In the beginning of the reign of Edward II., great disputes arose between the Prior of Plympton and the king, respecting certain rights and immunities, claimed by the former, but always contested by the Crown. At length, by a writ issued from the Exchequer in 1313, a jury was summoned to examine the various claims, and determine the differences between the King and the Prior. By their decision, the Prior, in consideration of a fee-farm rent of £29 6*s.* 8*d.* to be annually paid into the Exchequer for the use of his Majesty, was confirmed in the exercise of various privileges, among which were—the right of granting leases of houses as lord of the fee; of having a manor view of frank-pledge, assize of bread and beer, a ducking-stool and pillory, and the fishing of the waters from Catwater to the head of the river Plym. In the reign of Edward III., the manor was given to John de Eltham, Earl of Cornwall, who had many disputes with the Prior, whose claims were again confirmed by a special jury. About this period, Plymouth, which had been much improved under the liberal building leases granted by the Prior, became an object of jealousy to the French, who landed here and endeavoured to destroy the town by fire, but were repulsed, with the loss of 500 men, by Hugh Courtenay, Earl of Devon, under whose conduct the surrounding gentry and their retainers had associated with celerity. In a second attempt, in the 6th of Henry IV., the French were more successful. Landing at the head of Sutton Pool, near Britonside, they burnt upwards of 600 houses; but failing in their attempt to destroy the castle and the higher parts of the town, they retired to their ships, and proceeded to Dartmouth, where Mons. du Chastel, one of their commanders, and about 400 men, were killed, and 200 others were made prisoners. (See page 257.) From the time of this occurrence till the reign of Henry VI., the town dwindled to a mere fishing village, but it was then improved by the Prior of Plympton, who rebuilt many of the houses at his own expense; and by liberally granting certain privileges, and leases at small fines, occasioned a considerable increase of inhabitants. Trade revived, and the spirit of industry and enterprise being awakened, its capacious harbours were again frequented by merchant and other vessels. About 1438, the inhabitants petitioned Henry VI. for a charter of incorporation, and also that they might have a wall built round the town, for its better defence. In the following year, the king granted a charter which incorporated the inhabitants by the name of the Mayor and the Commonalty of Plymouth and divided the town and borough into four wards, called Old Town, High Vintry, Low Vintry, and Looe Street Wards; each to have a captain and inferior officers, but all to be under the control of the Mayor. In the 4th of Edward IV. a confirmation of the liberties and franchises of Plymouth was granted to the Mayor and Commonalty, on condition of their paying a fee-farm rent of £41 to the Prior of Plympton, and one of ten marks to the Prior of Bath; and from this period 'the lordship of the fee of the manor of Sutton Prior and Valletort' (now Plymouth), was vested in the Corporation of Plymouth, together with the assize of bread and beer, fishery of the waters, view of frank-pledge, tolls of the markets and fairs, and the use of the ducking-stool and pillory. In the reign of Elizabeth, a new charter was granted to the borough, through the solicitation of the celebrated Admiral Sir Francis Drake, by which the former charters were confirmed, and the Corporation declared to consist of a mayor, 12 aldermen, 24 common councilmen, and an indefinite number of freemen, with a recorder, town clerk, coroner, and a number of inferior officers. The above-named gallant Admiral was born near Tavistock, and was the first Englishman that circumnavigated the globe. Through his skill and perseverance, a stream of water was brought to Plymouth from the sources of the river Meavy, in Dartmoor, by a winding channel nearly 24 miles in length. This noble undertaking was entirely executed at his own cost, and the channel has ever since been vested with the Corporation, and still supplies the town water-works. The Corporation claims to be by prescription, and has charters from eleven monarchs, beginning with Henry VI. and ending with William III. The borough sent two members to parliament in the 26th and 33rd of Edward I.; in the 4th and 7th of Edward II., and the 4th of Edward III.; and it has regularly returned two members since the 20th of Henry VI. A market is said to have been established here as early as 1253. In the reign of Edward I., the port had 325 vessels. In 1512, an Act of Parliament was passed for fortifying Plymouth and other seaports in the west; and in 1520, Bishop Lacy granted an indulgence to all such persons as should contribute to the fortifications at Plymouth. Leland, who visited it in the time of Henry VIII., says, 'the mouth of the gulph, where the shippes of Plymouth lyith, is waullid on eche side, and chained over in case of necessitie; on the south-west side of the mouth is a block-house, and on a rocky hill hard by it is a strong castle quadrate, having on each corner a great round tower. It seemeth to be no very old peace of worke.' The little island of St. Nicholas, or Drake's Island, was afterwards strongly fortified, and batteries and block-houses were erected on all sides of the town. On July 20, 1588, part of the English fleet, consisting of 120 sail, under the command of Lord Charles Howard and Sir Francis Drake, lay at anchor in Plymouth Sound, when the Spanish Armada sailed up the channel, and some of its ships looked into the Sound, where the Spanish Admiral is said to have fixed upon Mount Edgcumbe as his future residence; but not liking the company he saw, his fleet passed out to sea, followed by the English, who overtook the enemy on the following day, kept up a running fight till the 24th, and being joined by another squadron off the Isle of Wight, drove the fight to a more general engagement, and continued it at intervals till the 28th, when they assailed the Armada with fireships, and in two days saw the 'invincible' sea-force totally destroyed or dispersed. To this victorious fleet, Plymouth contributed seven ships and one fly-boat, a quota greater than that supplied by any other port except London. In 1595, twenty-two chests of the Pope's bulls and indulgences, which had been taken from a discomfited party of Spanish invaders in Cornwall, were publicly burnt in Plymouth market-place. In 1596, Plymouth Sound was the grand rendezvous of the fleet for the expedition against Cadiz. In 1625, Charles I., with his whole court, a fleet of 120 ships and 6000 troops, remained ten days at Plymouth, and was sumptuously entertained by the Corporation. In the following year, the plague carried off nearly 2000 of the inhabitants.

During the Civil War of the 17th century, Plymouth was in the hands of the Parliament, who retained it even at the time when most of the important places in the west were in the possession of the Royalists. Soon after the commencement of the war, the Earl of Ruthen was appointed governor of the town, and Sir Alexander Carew had the command of the fort and island of St. Nicholas. Various attempts were made by the Royalists to gain possession of this important post. Sir Ralph Hopton appeared before it in December 1642, but was driven from his quarters by the Earl of Stamford. It having been discovered in the September following that Sir Alexander Carew was on the point of betraying his trust, he was sent prisoner to London, and suffered death on Tower Hill. In the early part of September 1643 Colonel Digby was sent with a considerable force of horse and foot to blockade Plymouth, and took up his quarters at Plymstock. The blockading army had batteries at Oreston and Mount Batten, and a guard at Hooe. Early in October they planned an attack on Mount Stamford, a fort so called from the Parliamentary general, the Earl of Stamford. Their guard at Hooe was defeated with much loss on the 8th, about which time Prince Maurice, having captured Dartmouth, advanced with his whole army to besiege Plymouth. The Prince's head-quarters were at Widey House, and his army was stationed at Plympton, Plymstock, Cawsand, Egg-Buckland, Tamerton, &c. On November 5 Mount Stamford was taken by the besiegers, and the fort at Lipson attempted. At this critical period, Colonel Wardlaw, the governor, required all the inhabitants to take a vow and protestation to defend the towns of Plymouth and Stonehouse, and the fort and island of St. Nicholas, to the uttermost. On December 3 the Royalists took a fort at Lory Point, but were soon repulsed by the garrison, who retook the fort. On the 18th of the same month an attempt was made to storm the town, but the besiegers were repulsed with much loss, and the siege was raised on the 25th. Among the Devonshire officers engaged in this siege were the Earl of Marlborough, Sir Thomas Hele, Sir Edmund Fortescue, and Sir P. Courtenay. In April 1644 Sir Richard Grenville advanced with his forces towards Plymouth, but Colonel Martin, then governor of the town, marched out with the greater part of the garrison, and defeated him at St. Budeaux, and took two companies prisoners. About three days after Sir Richard advanced again, but with no better success; and he was again repulsed before Plymouth in July, when Col. Kerr was made governor. About this time Prince Maurice again attempted the capture of Plymouth, but not succeeding, he left Sir Richard Grenville to blockade the town. The Earl of Essex and his army approached Plymouth about the end of the month, and Sir Richard hastily abandoned the blockade. After the surrender of Essex's army in Cornwall, the King came before Plymouth on September 9, 1644, attended by Prince Maurice. On the 11th, Lord Roberts, the governor, was summoned to surrender the town; but on his refusal it was determined, at a council of war, not to undertake an assault or close siege; and the blockade was again entrusted to Sir Richard Grenville. The King lodged at Widey House, but left, with the greater part of his army, on the 14th. In January 1645 Sir Richard Grenville, having a force of 6000 men, assaulted the town, and gained possession of the four great out-works, but was soon afterwards repulsed with great loss. Mount Stamford was retaken by the garrison on February 18, and Grenville was again defeated on the 24th. In June the command of the blockade was entrusted to Sir John Berkeley, and in September to General Digby. Colonel Weldon was made governor of Plymouth in October; but on January 10, 1646, the blockade of Plymouth was finally abandoned. (See pages 42 and 325.) In 1654 a special order was directed from Oliver Cromwell, then Protector, directing that in future all persons who wished to be married must be united at the Guildhall, by the Mayor and Justices for the time being. This occasioned a considerable ferment among all ranks, and a sort of remonstrance; but the order was made peremptory, on the ground that marriage was a civil contract. At this time the borough paid its two representatives for their services in Parliament. In 1670 Charles II. visited Plymouth, and was presented by the Corporation with a purse of 150 broad pieces. In 1683 the borough charter was surrendered to the King, on the requisition of Judge Jefferies, and a new one was granted, at the expense of £417 19*s.*, which vested the power in ten aldermen and twelve assistants only. This continued in force till 1697, when the old charter was restored.

When the combined fleet was in the Channel in 1779, and the prison-ships were crowded with French and Spanish captives, great apprehensions were entertained for the safety of the place, but a corps of volunteers was raised by Wm. Bastard, Esq., and under their escort the prisoners were marched to Exeter. During the alarms of invasion from France in 1798, 1803, and 1805, great exertions were made for the defence of Plymouth town and dock, but they were not attempted by the enemy. The town, in connection with its dock-yard, arsenal, and harbours, was the scene of much bustle throughout the last war with France, and rose so rapidly in importance, that its suburb of Stonehouse became doubled in population, and its western suburb of Devonport, then called Plymouth Dock, increased from almost nothing to the bulk of a rival town. Though it might have been expected to suffer reaction, and fall into languor and decline after the return of peace, it has, on the contrary, continued to prosper, and has undergone striking improvements, not only in its architecture and the appearance of domestic comfort, but in the number and character of its literary and charitable institutions. Plymouth is supposed to have had about 10,000 inhabitants in the reign of Edward III., for we find that in 1377 (soon after a great pestilence) it contained 4837 persons of 14 years of age or upwards, then rated to the poll tax, from which only clergymen and mendicants were exempt. As a seaport, it has from an early period been one of the principal rendezvous of the British navy. From this port, Edward the Black Prince, after having been detained forty days in Sutton Pool by contrary winds, sailed in 1355 on his successful expedition to France, which was crowned with the glorious victory of Poictiers; and here he landed on May 1, 1357, with the French King, and his son, the Dauphin, as prisoners in his train. In 1470 the Earl of Warwick, with the Duke of Clarence, and the Earls of Pembroke and Oxford, landed here to excite the revolt which caused the temporary restoration of Henry VI. In 1346 this port furnished 25 ships and 603 mariners for the blockade of Calais. Catherine of Arragon landed here in 1501; and from this port were fitted out the vessels of the Earl of Cumberland, Drake, Gilbert, Carlisle, Grenville, Cavendish, Cook, and Wallis, when they set sail on their respective voyages of discovery. The celebrated Sir Martin Frobisher, not only sailed from this port, but is said to have died here in 1594. Sir Walter Raleigh is said to have been arrested on his landing here, previous to the enforcing of the sentence in 1618. (See page 310.) In 1633 there was so great a flood here that boats floated into the streets. During the high tide in 1744 property to the amount of £3000 was destroyed in the town, and casks and boats floated about the streets. The old barbican was washed down in 1762. The Princess Amelia was at Plymouth and Mount Edgcumbe in 1766, and in that year the streets began to be paved and lighted. The Duke of Cumberland was here in 1769, the Duke of Gloucester in 1782, and George III. and Queen Charlotte in 1789. Their Majesties were sumptuously entertained at Saltram House, and during their stay there was a naval review and a grand sham fight, in which the fleet formed into two separate lines of battle, one being considered French and the other English. In 1796 the Dutton East Indiaman was wrecked near the Citadel. In 1791 and 1799 the two piers which form the entrance to Sutton Pool were erected. The magnificent Hotel and Theatre were built by the Corporation in 1811, and the colossal Breakwater was commenced in the following year. On July 5, 1815, the Bellerophon dropped anchor in Plymouth Sound, having on board the fallen Emperor Napoleon. After waiting eight days for the decision of a cabinet council, he was transferred from the Bellerophon to the Northumberland, which ship and her consorts immediately proceeded to St. Helena, where they arrived after a tedious passage of ten weeks. The long war, which had cost England so much money and blood, was now terminated; and the extensive Prison of War (see Princetown), which had been built in Dartmoor Forest, for the relief of the crowded prison-ships of Plymouth, gave up its thousands of captives. The Grand Duke Michael of Russia visited Plymouth in 1817, and in the same year an Act was obtained for settling disputes between the Corporation and the Board of Ordnance. George IV. was proclaimed here in 1819, in the midst of great rejoicings, and a dinner was given to the poor, but there were greater rejoicings, and the poor were much more liberally entertained at his coronation, in the following year, when upwards of 5000 dined in the market place. The prosperity of the town suffered a severe check during the great panic of 1824, when the Plymouth Bank failed, like many others in the kingdom. During the year there was an extremely high tide; household furniture floated about some of the streets, and many boats were destroyed. Races were established on Chelson Meadow in 1826. Plymouth has received and entertained many royal visitors, and was honoured with the presence of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert in 1843. It has at various periods suffered severely from plagues and other maladies, as it did in 1832 and 1849 from cholera, and more recently from small-pox.

Fortifications.—With the exception of strengthening the works on Drake Island, no important addition was made to the fortifications of the Three Towns from the erection of the Citadel down to 1860, the arsenal being considered to have the first claim upon the Government. But in that year a Royal Commission recommended the construction of a chain of forts, entirely enclosing the Three Towns, which are now nearly completed, and which render Plymouth almost impregnable. The cost of the works, including barracks, &c., will reach nearly £4,000,000. Commencing at Tregintle on the west, in the parish of St. Germans, where there is a strong fort with extensive barracks, it extends to Scraisdon, in the parish of Sheviock, on the river Lynter; there are two heavy batteries at St. Budeaux, on the Devon side of the Tamar; another at Knackersknowle, and others at Egg-Buckland and Efford, on the banks of the Plym. Then crossing the river, we find another fort at Plymstock, and on Staddon Heights two powerful forts with barracks; and another at Bovisand, the latter forming the eastern extremity of the chain of forts, which may be roughly described as forming an immense horseshoe. Similar forts exist at Picklecombe and Cawsand, on the western shore of the Sound. New works of great strength have been constructed on Drake's Island; the fort already existing at Cremyll has been strengthened, and a fort erected near the Breakwater.

The Citadel at Plymouth is a large fortification on the south side of the town, occupying that bold headland which extends from the western side of Sutton Pool into the Sound, at the confluence of the Catwater. It was erected on the site of an old fort, by order of Charles II., who inspected it personally in the year 1670. It is built chiefly of limestone and granite, and consists of three regular and two irregular bastions; and the curtains of the former are strengthened by ravelins and hornworks. The east, west, and north sides are circumscribed by a deep ditch, counterscarp, and covered way, pallisadoed; and the south side is defended by a lower fort, constructed upon the rocks on the shore, and chiefly intended to defend the Sound. Cannon are mounted both on this fort and on the upper parapets, where there are embrasures for 120 pieces. Two gateways with drawbridges form the entrance from the town; and the second gateway, which opens immediately into the Citadel, displays a sculpture of the Royal Arms and other devices. In the centre of the spacious Esplanade, where the troops are exercised (and round which stand the officers' houses, chapel, magazine, armoury and barracks), is a bronze colossal statue of George II., in the costume of a Roman warrior, wreathed with laurel. From the ramparts, which are nearly three-quarters of a mile in circuit, the views are extensive and beautiful.

The Hoe is a commanding eminence, bounded on the east by the Citadel, on the south by the Sound, and on the west by Millbay. It is justly styled 'the lungs of Plymouth;' for here the inhabitants of all grades resort for air and exercise. Great improvements have been made of late years by the formation of carriage drives and public walks, with seats at intervals. The facilities of access from the town to this extensive and delightful promenade have recently been increased by several new avenues. The Band often enlivens the promenade, and for their accommodation a handsome band-stand has recently been erected by the town authorities; and in the central part is a camera obscura and an obelisk, which serves as a mark for vessels entering the harbour. The views from this elevated promenade are extensive, embracing, seaward, the Sound, Drake's Island, the Breakwater, the Mew Stone, and in clear weather, Eddystone Lighthouse, fourteen miles distant in the English Channel. On the right the Cornish coast is seen from Penlee Point to the shelving shores of Cawsand, and thence over the nearer and well-defined groves and lawns of Mount Edgcumbe; and still more westerly, the town of Devonport, with its column and steeples, and the elevated suburbs of Stoke. On the left is seen the line of the coast of Staddon Point to Mount Batten, guarding the entrance to Catwater; and thence, looking inland over the town, may be seen the extensive woods of Saltram, and the more distant hills of Dartmoor. On the whole, it may be safely asserted that there is no more commanding position in England than the Plymouth Hoe, embracing, as it does, panorama of land, sea and sky, town and moorland, in endless variety. There is a landing-place under the Hoe, whence a boat can be procured for a trip to Drake's Islnnd and the Breakwater.

St. Nicholas' or Drake's Island, is near the middle of Plymouth Sound, and comprises only about three acres, strongly fortified, and connected with the south-western shore by a range of rocks, which is uncovered at low water, and is commonly called the Bridge of Rocks. Even at high water no vessels can pass these rocks, except those of very small burthen. The island is surrounded with rocks, and has always been the chief defence of the port. It was strongly garrisoned by the Parliamentarians during the Civil Wars of the 17th century; but was once or twice on the eve of being treacherously surrendered to the Royalists, as already noticed. The garrison is generally formed by a detachment of troops (Artillery) from the Citadel. The landing-place is on the north side, where the rock is ascended by a flight of steps through a vaulted passage. A large portion of the area of the island is occupied by the fortifications, and barracks for about 140 soldiers and 40 gunners. The fortifications have been greatly augmented during the last two centuries, and the principal battery was completed in 1846, and mounts 19 pieces of cannon, ranging from 32 to 68 pounders. Its defences have been lately greatly strengthened, some of the heaviest guns in the locality being placed upon the island. In addition to its defences, the fort contains furnaces for heating balls red hot. Some authors consider this island as the site of the Tamarweorth of the Saxons, so-called from its being 'the river-island of the Tamar,' which here mingles its waters in the Sound, after passing the noble harbour of Hamoaze. Westcote says the island of St. Nicholas was a place of refuge to divers gentlemen in the insurrection of 1549 (see page 324), when the insurgents plundered and set fire to Plymouth. Before the erection of its fortifications it had an ancient chapel, which Camden calls St. Michael's. In 1548 the Mayor of Plymouth received orders from the Privy Council to convert this chapel into a bulwark.

On the highest point of the promontory on the south side of the entrance to Catwater, opposite the Citadel, stands Mount Batten, an ancient circular fort, having no entrance but at a considerable height from the ground, to which access is afforded by ladder. The interior is arched in the form of a dome, with solid and durable masonry. During the wars between Charles I. and the Parliament it was the scene of repeated skirmishes and much bloodshed. In addition to the fortifications completed about twenty-five years ago at Bovisand, Picklecombe Point, and Drake's Island, a large fort, called the Prince of Wales' Redoubt, was erected in 1849 near the Victualling Yard, and a battery and barracks bearing the name of the Western King Battery. The defence of the Sound and Harbour is now as complete as can be rendered.

The Breakwater is a stupendous national work, about two miles south of the Citadel, extending about a mile in length across the central part of the Sound, between Cawsand and Bovisand Bays. The broad and often turbulent waters of the Sound are here about three miles broad, and open into the English Channel about two miles further to the south. From the frequent occurrence of storms from the south-west, which endangered vessels at anchor, it was deemed an object of great importance to make the Sound a safe roadstead; consequently, in 1811, Government determined on the adoption of a plan submitted to them by Messrs. Rennie and Whidbey, of forming this gigantic Breakwater. For its construction they purchased, for £10,000, a mass of limestone rock at Oreston, covering 25 acres. The first stone (a vast block) was deposited August 12, 1812; and in the following March the Breakwater had so far advanced that parts of its irregular surface were seen above low water. In June 1847 no less than 3,620,440 tons of limestone had been used in this great work, though 70 yards of the eastern arm, requiring 50,000 tons more, were then unfinished. In addition to this enormous bulk, 2,512,696 cubic feet of granite and other stone were used in the paving and facings. The total cost of the Breakwater was about £1,500,000. The centre part is a straight line, extending one thousand yards, and at each end is an arm or kant, 350 yards long, projecting towards the shore at an angle of 120 degrees; but the low-water line extends 70 yards further. The top is 45 feet broad, and is at the ends two feet, and in the centre three feet above the high water of spring tides. Above 500 yards of the centre rests upon shovel rocks and shoals, and the rest stretches out into deeper water, leaving a passage for vessels 1600 yards wide on the west, and another 1000 yards wide on the east. The whole has a vertical height of from 56 to 80 feet from the base to the top. In addition to the outer slope is an extensive berne, or foreshore, 30 feet wide at the extremity of the east wing, 50 feet wide in the centre, and 70 feet wide at the extremity of the west wing. This foreshore rises from the base of the slope to about five feet above the low-water line, and serves to break the force of the waves before they strike the main body of the work, and to prevent their recoil from undermining the slopes of the base, and making a consequent breach in the general structure. The western end of the Breakwater is strengthened by facings of masonry, and finished off in a circular form, to serve as the foundation of a Lighthouse, which was completed in 1843, and rises 68 feet above the platform. It is crowned by a lantern eight feet high, supported by gun-metal pilasters, and provided with four refractors and five tiers containing 118 mirrors. The light can be seen at the distance of eight miles, except in foggy weather, when a bell is struck a certain number of times every minute by clock machinery. A floating light had been stationed near the same spot since 1813, but was often sent adrift from its moorings. There is a Beacon at the east end, and a landing-place in the centre and at the west end. In January 1817 and November 1824 the Breakwater (then unfinished) was much injured by violent storms—particularly in the latter year, when a most tremendous hurricane, acting on an unusually high tide, made vast breaches through this barrier; yet even that tempest demonstrated its great utility—for had not the Breakwater existed, it was supposed that all the ships in the Catwater would have been wrecked, and many of the buildings near the shore swept into the ocean. That it has answered the expectations of its warmest advocates is evinced by the security it has afforded to ships at anchor—above 200 sail of vessels having taken refuge within it at one time. On the shore of Bovisand, east of the Breakwater, is a large reservoir of water, for supplying vessels free of charge, which is done by means of iron pipes at the landing-place. On an artificial island recently formed in the centre of the Breakwater, but at some distance from it on the shore side, a circular fort called the Breakwater Fort has been constructed and strongly armed with Armstrong guns.

Eddystone Lighthouse is under the control of the Customs' establishment at Plymouth, though distant 14 miles in the Channel, opposite the Sound. This celebrated structure stands upon one of a large cluster of rocks, stretching north and south to the length of about 100 fathoms. The particular form and position of these rocks tend greatly to augment the force of the sea; and previous to the erection of the lighthouse, many fatal accidents happened upon them. In the year 1696, the first attempt to erect a lighthouse on the principal rock, was accomplished by Mr. Henry Winstanley, of Essex, who completed it in three years; but he perished amidst the ruins of his edifice, in the tremendous storm of November 1703. Three years after, Mr. Rudyerd, of London, began to erect another lighthouse on the same spot, of stone and timber, and completed it in 1709. This structure, after braving the storms of the ocean for 46 years, was destroyed by fire in 1755. The present lighthouse was erected by that celebrated architect the late Mr. Smeaton, and exhibits a striking triumph of art and ingenuity. It was commenced in 1757, and finished in 1759. With the exception of the lantern, which is of cast iron and copper, the building is entirely of stone, the outside being of granite, and the floors vaulted. It is a circular building, and the diameter of the base is 26 feet, and that of the top 15 feet. The stone work rises 70 feet to the octagonal lantern, which rises 24 feet higher. The stones average a ton weight each, and those on the same level are dove-tailed together, and the successive courses are attached to each other, by means of square blocks of marble, which project one half of their solidity into the course below, and the other half into the course above. The light is useful not only to warn vessels against an isolated danger, and to provide a lead into Plymouth, but also to form a link in that chain of lights which defines a straight passage up and down the Channel. Hence, when the lighthouse was found to be unsafe in 1878, the Elder Brethren of Trinity House did not give any detailed consideration to the practicability of the removal of the rocks instead of the rebuilding of the lighthouse; though they estimated that to secure the safe minimum depth of 7 fathoms it would be needful to remove 1,750,000 tons of rock, and in addition the Hard Deeps, about 250,000 tons, making in all 2,000,000 tons to be removed, the cost of which was estimated at £500,000. The lighthouse, consequently, is being rebuilt upon an adjoining rock, and will be 40 feet higher than the present one. Three men are stationed here, and they are provided with food, &c., by a special boat; but they are always stocked with salt provisions, as sometimes in winter the boats cannot approach for many weeks together.

Catwater Harbour, on the south-east side of Plymouth, is the grand outlet, through which the river Plym falls into the Sound, between the Citadel and Mount Batten. It is capable of receiving a thousand sail of merchant ships, but though protected by high hills, ships have sometimes been wrecked in it, as was the case in the tremendous gales of 1824 and 1828, when 20 vessels were stranded on its rocky shores in the former, and 15 in the latter year. Above Catwater, the estuary of the Plym, assumes a lake-like expanse, called the Laira or Lary, and skirted by the groves of Saltram—the splendid seat of the Earl of Morley (see Plympton St. Mary), one of whose predecessors erected at his own expense, the Laira Bridge, an elegant structure, consisting of five elliptical arches of cast iron, springing from abutments and piers of stone. The first stone was laid in 1824, and the bridge was finished in 1827. The centre arch is 100 feet span, and rises 14½ feet above high-water mark; and the other arches are two of them 95 and two 81 feet each in span. The roadway is 24 feet wide within the railings, and 500 feet in length.

Sutton Pool Harbour is in the south-eastern part of Plymouth, and is nearly surrounded by the town. The entrance from Catwater is about 90 feet in width, between two large Piers (called the Barbican), that were erected by means of parliamentary grants, in 1791 and 1799. This spacious harbour belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall, but is held on lease by the Sutton Harbour Improvement Company, who have expended large sums in cleansing and deepening it, and in erecting sea-walls, quays, &c. The railway from Dartmoor granite works terminates at its south-eastern angle, and it has a communication with the South Devon Railway. New quays, wharfs, cranes, railway slips, storehouses, &c., have been erected by the company; and a large dredging machine is employed in excavating the muddy bottom, formerly left bare at low water. On the West Barbican pier-head is a fixed light, 29 feet above high-water mark.

Millbay occupies a central position between Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport, comprising within its boundaries part of the parishes of East Stonehouse, and St. Andrew's, Plymouth. A pier, about 500 feet in length, extends from the south-eastern side of the bay, near the entrance, and has a depth alongside of over 20 feet. This pier was constructed by the late Thomas Gill, Esq., in 1840, but afterwards purchased by the Great Western Docks Company, by whom the whole of the bay was converted into extensive docks under the powers of an Act of Parliament, obtained in 1846. The Floating Basin, entered by gates 80 feet wide, covers 13 acres, and has an ample depth of water for the largest vessels. A large Graving Dock, having an entrance 80 feet wide, is 367 feet long, 92 feet in width of chamber, and has a depth of water on the blocks of 22 feet at high-water spring tides. The Open Dock comprises an area of about 35 acres, and has a Floating Pier, alongside of which vessels of the heaviest draught can lie at all states of the tides to load or unload their cargo. Here is a jetty with commodious transit sheds erected thereon. At the eastern side of the open dock, where are several convenient landing places for boats and other small craft, are the waiting rooms, refreshment rooms, baggage warehouses, &c., for the passengers who land here from the West Indies, and Cape of Good Hope, &c. Commodious warehouses are erected on the wharfs. In 1874 the docks were purchased by the Great Western, the Bristol and Exeter, and the South Devon Railway Companies; the last two companies have been merged into the former, who have thus become sole owners. The company is about to construct an additional deep water pier and breakwater at the western side of the open dock. The Railway, both broad and narrow guage, is carried all round the wharfs, so that passengers, mails, specie, and goods can be embarked and disembarked therefrom with the greatest expedition. A fixed red light marks the western extremity of the pier at the entrance of the bay, and a green light is shown on the Pontoon or floating pier. Vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 500,000 tons use the docks every year. Much of the prosperity of Plymouth is owing to the developement of trade induced by the facilities afforded by the docks.

Frequent excursions are now organised by enterprising tourists to the places of interest in the locality. The trip up the river Tamar by steamer is much enjoyed; and visits are paid by permission to the seats of Sir Massey Lopes, at Maristow; Walter Radcliffe, Esq., at Warleigh, Tamerton Foliott; and the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, at Mount Edgcumbe and Catehele; as well as the Weir Head and Calstock. Pleasure steamers are in constant demand; and in addition sea trips are taken to Eddystone Lighthouse twice a week, and sometimes more frequently, by the fine steamers 'Sir Francis Drake' and 'Sir Walter Raleigh,' specially employed for that purpose by the Great Western Docks authorities. Excursions to the Breakwater, the river Yealm, Looe, and even to Knightsbridge, Dartmouth, and Falmouth, and the Channel Islands are also much in vogue.

Races are held in Chelson Meadow, near Saltram; and during the year there are several Regattas and rowing matches in the harbours of the Three Towns.

The Municipal Borough of Plymouth, which comprises those parts of the ancient ecclesiastical parishes of Charles and St. Andrew, that are in Plymouth incorporation (see page 607), is divided into the wards, of which the following are their names with the population, and the number of inhabited houses in 1871:—Charles, 12,933 persons and 1542 houses; Drake, 7935 persons and 1084 houses; Frankfort, 17,621 persons and 1726 houses; St. Andrew, 13,261 persons and 1423 houses; Sutton, 8938 persons and 898 houses; and Vintry, 8070 persons and 616 houses, making a total of 68,758 inhabitants (31,578 males and 37,180 females), living in 7289 houses, besides which there were 533 uninhabited houses, and 49 building. The Municipal and Parliamentary Boroughs were formerly co-extensive, but by 31 & 32 Vict. cap. 46, the boundary of the latter was extended so as to include part of Compton Gifford civil parish in Plympton St. Mary union; this portion contained 1333 inhabitants (501 males and 832 females) in 1871, dwelling in 223 houses, besides which there were 15 uninhabited and 5 building; thus making a total for the whole Parliamentary Borough of 70,091 inhabitants, living in 7512 houses. Under the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, the Town Council consists of a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 36 councillors, with a recorder, town clerk, and other officers; and the borough has a commission of the peace, a court of quarter sessions, &c. The paving, lighting, and improvements of the town are vested in separate commissioners under Acts of Parliament obtained for those purposes; and the three towns were associated under a local act for the recovery of debts under £5, but the latter has given place to the county court. An Act for improving the town was obtained in the 51st of George III., and was amended in the 5th of George IV., by 'An Act for the better paving, lighting, cleansing, watching, and improving the Town and Borough of Plymouth, and for regulating the police, and removing and preventing nuisances and annoyances therein;' but these powers have been transferred to the Town Council as the Urban Sanitary Authority, the Public Health Act being adopted in 1855. As lords of the manor, the Corporation owns the tolls and dues of the markets and fairs, now let for £4540 a year, on lease for two years. The rateable property of the borough has recently been assessed at the yearly value of £178,843 10*s.* On December 31, 1878, the estimated value of the capital account of the corporate account was £138,280, the assets being £235,180, and the liabilities £96,900; during the year then ended £17,666 14*s.* 3*d.* had been received, and there were assets of revenue outstanding, £2336 18*s.*, making a total of £20,003 12*s.* 3*d.*; against this the payments had been £18,651 19*s.* 11*d.*, and the outstanding liabilities were £1857 10*s.* 8*d.*, making a total of £20,509 10*s.* 7*d.*, and leaving a balance due to the treasurer of £505 18*s.* 4*d.* As regards the municipal revenue account, the year commenced with a balance due to the treasurer of £2539 0*s.* 11*d.*; during the year the various rates, &c., produced a revenue, including outstanding assets, of £14,832 13*s.* 0*d.*, and the payments and outstanding liabilities amounted to £14,510 6*s.* 5*d.*, leaving a balance in hand of £322 6*s.* 7*d.* The School Board account commenced with a balance in hand of £99 5*s.* 11*d.*, and had a revenue of £3843 7*s.* 10*d.*, and its outgoings and liabilities amounted to £3800, leaving a balance in hand of £43 7*s.* 10*d.*

As noticed at page 601, the borough sent members to Parliament as early as the reign of Edward I., and has sent two regularly since its incorporation in the 18th of Henry VI. For a long period, Plymouth was considered as an Admiralty Borough, and was generally represented by Lords of the Admiralty, or by Admirals; but when the Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.) did the corporation the honour of becoming their high steward, they considered themselves under royal patronage, and two gentlemen of the Prince's household represented them till the election of 1818. The number of municipal voters is 5201, and of parliamentary, 4805. The Prince of Wales succeeded the late Prince Consort as Lord High Steward of the Borough of Plymouth.

Messrs. T. H. Bulteel, A. F. Tracey, W. Luscombe, R. Hicks, H. Brown, C. Norrington, J. F. Trist, J. B. Wilcocks, A. Hingston, A. Hubbard, W. Radford, E. Ede, J. F. Fortescue, S. Jackson, and C. F. Tanner. Sessions are held every Monday and Thursday at the Police Court, Guildhall.

Plymouth Workhouse.—By an Act of Parliament passed in the 6th of Queen Anne (1708) for erecting a Workhouse in Plymouth for the two parishes, all almshouses belonging to the mayor and commonalty were vested in the Corporation of the Guardians of the Poor, established by that Act, and consisting of the mayor, recorder, 6 of the magistrates, 6 of the common council, 20 inhabitants of the parish of St. Andrew, and 18 inhabitants of the parish of Charles. Among other property transferred to them, was the hospital or workhouse, called the Poor's Portion, built in 1630, and endowed with land and tenements now let for upwards of £20 a year, and given by various donors. This property is let on 99 years' leases, determinable on lives; and subject to fines on every renewal. The Guardians of the Poor are also in receipt of £5 a year, in three annuities, left by Philip Francis, Joseph Palmer, and an unknown donor; and they have the management (jointly with the trustees) of Hele's and Lanyon's Charities for the maintenance and schooling of poor boys, as already noticed. The Act of Queen Elizabeth was amended by three other Acts passed in the 32nd of George II., and the 26th and 53rd of George III., and under them the two parishes still maintain their poor, without any interference from the New Poor Law Commissioners. The Workhouse stands in Charles parish, and has room for more than 500 paupers. The able-bodied are employed in teazing oakum, making mats, &c. The guardians are elected annually on the second Tuesday in May; 14 from the Town Council, 20 from the ratepayers of St. Andrew's, and 18 from the ratepayers of the parish of Charles. The total cost of maintaining the poor of the two parishes was £11,580 in 1838, £16,529 in 1848, and £15,014 in 1849. The governor, deputy governor, treasurer, and receiver are appointed yearly by the guardians; and the following are the principal officers:—J. W. Matthews, Esq., clerk; H. Wotton, Esq., cashier; Mr. H. M. Drew, master; Mrs. L. Fey, matron; Messrs. J. Annear, C. J. Mayell, and R. J. Nicholson, relieving officers; Mr. G. Stanlake and Miss H. Kelly, teachers of the schools; and Messrs. F. A. Pardon, H. J. Barter, J. Keast, W. G. H. Boon, and W. H. Harris, collectors of poor rates. The two parishes form a registration district, and J. W. Matthews, Esq., is the superintendent registrar. Mr. W. P. H. White is registrar of marriages; and Messrs. J. S. Pike and C. Pascoe are registrars of births and deaths.

The poor rate is made for the whole borough, the rateable value of which is £184,356. The rateable value of the Government property is:—

H. M. (late Borough) Prison, which was completed in 1849, is pleasantly situated on the north-east side of the town, and cost about £13,500, of which about £3500 was derived from the freeman's, or prison fund, and £10,000 was borrowed, chiefly from the Exchequer Loan Commissioners. It is handsomely built of blue limestone, relieved by Caen-stone dressings, and the sashes are all of cast iron, glazed with plate glass a quarter of an inch thick. It is generally in the Italian style, and the lofty boundary wall encloses about 3 acres, divided into airing grounds, &c. The governor's house and porter's lodge are on each side of the entrance. The prison is in the centre of the ground, and is disposed in three large wings, comprising the governor's offices, apartments for the matron, a chapel and surgery, visiting cells, convalescent rooms, a bath room, and cells for about 70 prisoners, including six for male and three for female debtors, for whom there are comfortable day-rooms and airing grounds. There are four solitary cells, so constructed as to admit air, but no light; and there are 24 airing grounds, radiating from a common centre, and each to be occupied by only one prisoner at a time, whilst an officer is so placed as to be able to see into all the yards,—the arrangements having been so made as to carry out the separate system in all its completeness, both in the prisons and the chapel. The chief employment is mat-making, oakum-picking, and shoemaking. From the 41st Report of the Inspectors of Prisons, it appears that on September 29, 1876, there were 44 certified cells for males, and 23 for females; 2 certified punishment cells for males and 2 for females; and 4 reception cells. The total population of the prison, exclusive of debtors and military prisoners, on September 29, 1875, was 21 males, 11 females; number admitted during the year, exclusive of debtors and military prisoners, 309 males, 114 females; total prisoners during the year, 330 males, 125 females; of these were discharged, removed, and died, during the year ending September 29, 1876, 299 males, 122 females; leaving in the prison on that date 31 males, 3 females. The average daily number of persons in custody during the year was 26 males, 7 females; the greatest number at any one time during the year, 37 males, 8 females. The net profit on work done by prisoners during the year was £101 2*s.* 1*d.*; and the estimated value of work done for the prison, £206 17*s.* 9*d.* The total ordinary expenditure of the prison, including salaries of all officers, &c., for the year ended September 29, 1876, was £1161 14*s.* 5*d.*; the average annual cost per prisoner, without allowing for earnings of labour, £35 3*s.* 11*d.*; the average annual net profit on each prisoner's labour, £3 1*s.* 3*d.*; average weekly cost of food per prisoner, 2*s.* 0½*d.* Mr. Jas. Edwards is governor; the Rev. George Fletcher, chaplain; S. Wolferstan, Esq., surgeon; and Mrs. James Davidson, matron.

The Guildhall and Municipal Buildings are situated in the Public Square, in the centre of the town, behind Bedford Street, and bounded by Westwell Street and Catherine Street. The Square is 250 feet by 80 feet. The architectural plans were thrown open to competition, those of Messrs. Alfred Norman and James Hind being chosen. The style of the buildings is 13th century Gothic, with some French characteristics. The foundation stone was laid by William Luscombe Esq., the mayor, on July 28, 1870, and the Municipal Buildings were opened by John Kelly, Esq., the mayor, in 1873. Messrs. Call and Pethick were the contractors, and the expense of the works was over £50,000. The Guildhall occupies the centre of the southern block of buildings, having the Crown and Nisi Prius Courts on the west, and the Police Courts and Station on the east; and the Council Chamber and Municipal Buildings on the north, an open space being reserved at the Westwell Street end for future public uses. The Great Hall is entered from the Public Square, through a central double doorway, having symbolical sculpture, and two side porches, and comprises a hall, 58 feet wide, with narrow aisles on either side, the entire length being 146 feet. The aisles which open into the body of the hall, have arcades of seven arches each, which are supported by polished Penryn granite pillars with skilfully carved Portland stone pillars. The hall has a clerestory and a semi-circular roof. The orchestra is at the west end where are ante-rooms for performers, &c. Many of the windows are filled with stained glass, commemorative of various personages and incidents connected with the borough, and were given by various donors. The triple window in the ladies' gallery, has in the centre compartment, the arms of Alfred Rooker, Esq., and in the side those of W. Luscombe and John Kelly, Esqrs. respectively; these being the mayors under whom the works were commenced and completed. The ladies' gallery will seat 250 persons, and the hall about 2500; there are seven separate doorways for ingress and egress. Each court at the Westwell Street end is 49 feet long and 38 feet wide, and has separate entrances for barristers, solicitors, witnesses, &c.; and distinct accommodation for the public in galleries at the ends of the courts. The gables are surmounted by statues of Edward I., Edward the Black Prince, and the present Prince of Wales. A grand view of Plymouth and the country for many miles round, can be had from the top of the tower at the south-west corner, which is about 200 feet high measuring to the top of the vane. The Police Court on the east of the Guildhall, is 46 feet by 38 feet, and there are rooms for magistrates, magistrates' clerk, solicitors, and witnesses; and behind is the Police Station house, with muster room, and drill ground adjoining. The Council Chamber is just opposite the Guildhall, and is surrounded by a corridor affording communication with the entrances, treasurer's offices, muniment room, and the mayor's parlour; and on the upper floor are the town clerk's offices, school board offices, and committee and ante-rooms, also connected by a corridor. The gable of the Council Chamber is surmounted by a full length statue of Sir F. Drake, and on other parts of the exterior are medallion heads of the Queen, Sir Walter Raleigh and others.

The Port of Plymouth extends to all the harbours, rivers, and creeks between Looe on the west, and the river Yealm on the east; but its pilotage district reaches eastward as far as Start Point, though no master of a vessel is compelled to take a pilot, except going into or coming out of the ports within a line drawn from Rame Head to the Mewstone. During the Napoleonic war, Plymouth was content with its resources as a great naval and military station, and paid but little attention to trade and commerce with the colonies of foreign countries. Its merchants, at this period, were mostly agents for London, Liverpool, and Bristol houses, and purchased and transported under their directions the vast quantities of prize-goods brought here for sale. A large trade is now carried on with America, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, the Baltic, Africa, &c.; and an extensive coasting trade to most of the ports of England and Wales. Steamers sail once or twice a week with goods and passengers to London, Southampton, Portsmouth, Guernsey, Jersey, Dublin, Cork, Torquay, &c. Here are large bonded warehouses for all sorts of foreign produce. The chief exports are copper and lead ores, manganese, granite, limestone, clay, fish, &c., and the imports chiefly of wine, fruit, corn, timber, &c. The port has several fine vessels engaged in the fruit trade, and receives some of the first importations of early fruits from Denia, Valencia, Zante, &c. Great quantities of coal and culm are imported here for the consumption of the three towns, and the places on or near the navigable rivers Tamar, Plym, and Lynher. When the mackerel and pilchard seasons arrive, there are large accessions to the Plymouth boats from Brighton, Hastings, Yarmouth, Rye, Cornwall, &c., and in some seasons there are from 200 to 300 boats on the fishing stations. Turbot, soles, brill, cod, hake, mullet, and a great variety of other fish are caught here; and salmon, trout, plaice, &c., in the Tamar and other rivers. Fish is not cured here to any large extent, but great quantities are sent in a fresh state by rails (as well as by fast sailing cutters to Southampton, and thence by rails) to London, Bath, Bristol, Manchester, and other markets.

The value of the total imports of Foreign and Colonial merchandise at Plymouth was £1,335,794 in 1872; £1,582,349 in 1873; £1,247,148 in 1874; £1,452,459 in 1875; and £1,433,307 in 1876. The gross amount of customs revenue received at the port was £118,143 in 1872; £105,504 in 1873; £66,413 in 1874; £59,346 in 1875; and £63,260 in 1876. The value of the total exports of the United Kingdom here was £76,437 in 1872; £118,343 in 1873; £116,832 in 1874; £95,084 in 1875; and £117,430 in 1876.

The number and tonnage of sailing and steam vessels, including their repeated voyages that, in 1876, entered and cleared with cargoes and in ballast (from and to Foreign Countries) was:—Entered, 344 British sailers, 48,278 tons; 75 steamers, 32,155 tons; total British vessels, 419; tons, 80,433. 296 foreign sailers, 54,047 tons; 1 steamer, 197 tons; total foreign vessels, 297; tons, 54,244; making a total of 640 sailers, 102,325 tons; 76 steamers, 32,352 tons; grand total, 716 vessels. 134,677 tons. Cleared: 270 British sailers, 28,920 tons; 21 steamers, 6022 tons; total British vessels 291; tons, 34,942; 208 Foreign sailers, 32,321 tons; (steamers nil); making a total of 478 sailers, 61,241 tons; 21 steamers, 6022 tons, grand total, 499 vessels, 67,263 tons. (From and to British Possessions) Entered:—128 British sailers, 30,368 tons; (steamers nil); 8 foreign sailers, 2050 tons; (steamers nil); grand total, 133 sailers, 32,418 tons. Cleared: 205 British sailers, 37,819 tons; (steamers nil); 14 foreign sailers, 4200 tons; (steamers nil); grand total, 219 sailers, 42,019 tons. Coastwise (with cargoes) Entered:—2175 sailers, 195,248 tons; 699 steamers, 305,408 tons; total 2874 vessels, 500,656 tons. Cleared: 1016 sailers, 79,649 tons; 613 steamers, 282,226 tons; total 1629 vessels, 361,875 tons. Do. (in ballast.) Entered: 55 sailers, 3415 tons; 5 steamers, 827 tons, total 60 vessels, 4242 tons. Cleared: 648 sailers, 87,801 tons; 104 steamers, 35,283 tons; total 752 vessels, 123,084 tons. The number of registered vessels belonging to the port on December 31, 1876, and their tonnage, was 359 sailers, 42,735 tons; 12 steamers, 670 tons; total 371 vessels, 43,405 tons. 350 fishing boats had their certificates endorsed in 1876, and 1241 men and boys are required to work them. 745 men and boys, who are constantly engaged in fishing are resident within the limits of the port. 204 persons, other than regular fishermen, are occasionally employed in fishing.

The Custom House is situated on the parade, near Sutton Pool, and is a large and handsome structure, built of granite, in 1819–20, at the cost of £8000. It contains a long room, 52 feet by 26, and all other necessary offices. Nicholas E. Browne, Esq., is the collector; John S. Salmon, Esq., chief clerk; Messrs. Henry Chambers, John Broadhead, Thomas H. Davy, and Charles Woodward are clerks; Mr. Francis Brent, surveyor. There are 11 examining officers, 3 writers, 20 outdoor officers, and a number of pensioners employed as extra men. An officer is stationed at Calstock Creek.

The Inland Revenue Office is in Princess Square. John Harris, Esq., is the collector; Thomas

Barnett, Esq., surveyor of taxes; Mr. William B. Woodward, supervisor; Mr. Walter Barnett, clerk; and Mr. Thomas John Kittow, inspector of corn returns. There are four division officers and an assistant.

Markets, Fairs, &c.—A grant for a market and a fair at Plymouth was first obtained in 1253, the former to be held on Thursdays, and the latter on the festival of St. John the Baptist. In 1257, Baldwin de L'Isle had a grant for another market at Sutton, and a fair for three days at the festival of the Ascension. Markets are now every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. The corn market, on Tuesday and Thursday, is well attended by the farmers and dealers residing within the distance of 15 or 20 miles. There is a great market for cattle, &c., on the second Thursday of every month; and large fairs for cattle, merchandise, and pleasure, are held on the first Mondays in April and November. The Market Place occupies three acres of ground, and has three entrances, from Cornwall Street, East Street, and Drake Street. It was built by the Corporation, about 1809, and affords ample room for meat, corn, fish, poultry, and vegetables, as well as for a considerable display of manufactured goods. It might have been made one of the handsomest market places in England, but the effect is much injured by the irregularity of the structure. It is, however, very spacious and convenient, and has a division set apart for corn, and an area for moveable stalls, carts, &c. The cattle market is at the head of Tavistock Street. At the fairs, part of the area is occupied by shows, &c.

The principal manufactures of the town are those of manures, candles, soap, sail cloth, Roman cement, brushes, rope, and twine. There are also many ship building yards, several iron foundries, breweries, steam sawing mills, a sugar refinery, starch works, &c. Mr. William Cookworthy, of Plymouth, was the first person who found out the materials for manufacturing porcelain, as now practised at Worcester. His original experiments were made at Plymouth, where a manufactory was for a while established, but it was not successful till its removal to Worcester, after repeated trials here and at Bristol. There is still a pottery here, where various kinds of earthenware are manufactured. The mill property belonging to the Corporation produces about £450, arising from the Higher and Lower Grist Mills; the mills, &c., in Drake's Place and Mill Street; the higher malt mill, and the factory, in Russell Street. There is a large patent rope and cordage manufactory at Teats Hill.

Banks.—The Branch Bank of England was removed from Exeter to Plymouth in 1834, and now occupies a large and handsome building in Bank of England Place; besides which there are the Naval Bank, Whimple Street; Devonport Bank, Princess Square; Devon and Cornwall Banking Co., Bedford Street; West of England and South Wales District Bank, George Street; and Three Towns Banking Co. (lim.), Old Town Street.

East Stonehouse County Court is noticed with Stonehouse, on a subsequent page.

The Exchange, in Woolster Street, near the Custom House, was built in 1813 at the cost of £7000, raised in £25 shares. At first it was only partially occupied, and had a large open area, surrounded by a colonnade; but this area was built upon, and covered with a glass dome, and offices have been built under the galleries. The building is now very spacious, and fully occupied It comprises various mercantile and public offices, amongst them being a Post Office and Postal Telegraph Station; the office of the Local Marine Board of which Mr. John Kelly is secretary; the Board of Trade Mercantile Marine Office; the offices of the Examiners of Masters and Mates and Engineers: the office of the Principal Board of Trade office; Government Emigration Office; and the office of the Board of Trade Surveyors. Mr. Thos. Wolferstan, is secretary to the Company.

Water Works.—The town of Plymouth is supplied with water from the river Meavy, which rises on the borders of Dartmoor, near Princetown. The character of the Woneford and Deancombe valleys affords large tributaries to the river, which, about half-a-mile above Sheepstow bridge, is diverted into an artificial channel, called the Leat, and is thence conveyed to the town. The original course of the Leat was 17 miles in length, and was constructed by Sir Francis Drake, as noticed at page 601. The stream was brought into the town on April 24, 1590, and was distributed through hewn granite channels, from which, as well as from conduits in various parts of the town, the inhabitants obtained their supply. Great improvements have been made from time to time. The water is now brought by the open Leat to Knackersknowle, where there is a small intercepting reservoir, whence iron mains convey it to the chief distributing reservoir at Hartley and those at Drake place within the borough. The works are under the control of the corporation, and extensive works are in contemplation for the construction of storage, reservoir and filter beds. The reservoirs and their capacity are:—Drake's (higher) 1,500,000 gallons; Drake's (lower) 800,000; Hartley 7,000,000 gallons; Knackersknowle 1,500,000. The estimated value of the works is £123,640. Mr. G. D. Bellamy is the water surveyor.

Oil Gas Works were established in Exeter street, under an act passed in the 4th of George IV.; but soon afterwards the United General Gas Company of London constructed coal gas works at Mill Bay, for supplying the three towns. The high price charged by this company, while its monopoly existed, induced the inhabitants of Plymouth and Stonehouse to form a company for a cheaper supply, for which an act of parliament was obtained; and in 1848, the new company compelled the old one to sell them their works for £25,410. The Plymouth and Stonehouse Gas Light and Coke Company, Coxside, was established in 1844, at a cost of £25,000, raised in £10 shares. There are upwards of 1000 public lamps, which are lighted at 54*s.* each per annum; the charge to private consumers is 2*s.* 3*d.* per 1000 cubic feet. Mr. John Thomas is secretary, and Mr. Jno. T. Browning, engineer.

Churches, &c.—As already noticed, Plymouth was anciently called Sutton, and was a prebendal parish attached to the collegiate church of Plympton, till that church was converted into a priory, when Sutton was appropriated to it. (See page 601.) After the Reformation, the advowson of the vicarage was vested in the corporation, but since the Municipal Reform Act, they have sold the patronage of both vicarages. In 1640, the borough was divided into two parishes by act of parliament, but the new parish church was not completed till after the Restoration, when it was dedicated to the memory of Charles I. In monastic times, here were several religious houses, but nothing is known relating to their foundation or history. The Franciscans or Grey Friars are supposed to have had small monasteries in Palace Court, and on the site of the Distillery in Southside street, where there are some interesting remains of ancient architecture. The White Friary is supposed to have been in Friary Court, the principal entrance to which is through an antique dilapidated gateway. A Cistercian Abbey gave name to Abbey Street, and its remains may be traced in the large building, now used as a residence and grocery stores, which still retains much of its original ecclesiastical character. The White Friary was licensed by Bishop Stapledon in 1324, at the desire of Edward II., and was granted at the Dissolution to Giles Iselham.

St. Andrew's Parish Church is a spacious and venerable structure, which is mentioned in a survey made about 1291, but was evidently mostly rebuilt in the 15th century. It possesses much historical interest with the town of Plymouth; St. Andrew's church existed before Plymouth was a town, and before corporation or parliamentary representation were given to the town, there stood a church of St. Andrew, not in its present size, but still the St. Andrew's Church of that day. In the present edifice there is room for 2000 persons. It consists of a spacious nave, chancel, side aisles, two small transepts, and a fine lofty tower, which contains a peal of ten deep-toned bells, and was built about 1440, by a merchant of Plymouth, named Yogge. The weight of the tenor bell is 2½ tons, and the tower is surmounted at each angle by handsome and lofty pinnacles. Two of the bells were recently added by Edward Bates, Esq., M.P. A carillon playing fourteen tunes and Westminster chimes, striking the quarters, have been placed in the tower, at the expense of C. Norrington, Esq., J.P., in memory of his son. They were erected by Gillett and Bland, of Croydon, and the tune, which is played every four hours, is changed each night at 12. The interior is divided by clustered columns and pointed arches. The church being in a very dilapidated state, the parishioners in 1824 determined on its restoration, at the cost of £5000, part of which was borrowed from the Exchequer Loan Commissioners, to be repaid by annual payments of £150. The improvements were continued at intervals, and church rates were annually levied till 1834, when Mr. F. Bone became churchwarden. In 1839, Mr. Bone (without the aid of church rates) having succeeded in completing most of the intended renovations, and also in liquidating the debt, was presented by the parishioners with a valuable service of plate. But notwithstanding the large expenditure, it was felt in 1871 that the work was but imperfectly done. Soon after the appointment of the Rev. C. T. Wilkinson, D.D., the work of complete restoration was commenced under the direction of the late Sir G. G. Scott, R.A. The sham-Gothic galleries in the north and south chapels and at the western end of the church have been removed. The entire church has been repewed in oak; the tracery and carving are very handsome. The roof of the chancel has been tastefully decorated, and the floor laid with encaustic tiles. Three polished Plymouth marble steps lead to the holy table; and a carved reredos has been erected; over the table are to be seen the emblems of the Pelican, Lamb, and Phœnix, and in the panels on either side are four striking paintings representing Moses striking the Rock Horeb, the Brazen Serpent, the Baptism of our Lord, and the Crucifixion.

A new and beautiful stained glass East window by Burlison and Grylls of London, representing the Resurrection, the Raising of Lazarus, and also of the Widow's Son, has been erected; while an equally fine window by Messrs. Fouracre and Watson, of Stonehouse, representing the Call and the Martyrdom of St. Andrew, has been placed in the tower, the gift of ladies, friends of the vicar. The octagonal pulpit, composed of Caen stone, very richly carved, and the panels and shafts of local marbles, stands on a pedestal of Cornish and Devonshire granite. The fine old organ has been rebuilt, a rich solo organ added, besides other alterations. It now stands in the north chapel, and is blown by a water engine, the pressure of water in the town being sufficient for the purpose. It is now probably the finest organ in the West of England. The restoration has been completed at a cost of about £7000 raised by subscription.

In the aisles are many neat mural monuments, on one of which is a fine bust of the Rev. Zachary Mudge, a late vicar, who died in 1769, and was the author of a volume of sermons. A cenotaph is in memory of Dr. William Woollcombe, an eminent physician, who died in 1822, aged 49 years, and was buried at Plympton St. Mary. The principal group represents the Genius of Medicine supporting Indigence. In the north aisle is another monument, on which Religion, personified by a female figure, rests upon a medallion bust of the Rev. John Gandy, M.A., a prebendary of Exeter, who died in 1824, aged 85 years, during 55 years of which he held this vicarage, besides previously officiating here five years as curate. This memorial was erected by public subscription, in record of the many virtues of the late venerable vicar. Here is also a tablet in memory of the late celebrated comedian, Charles Mathews, who was born in 1776, and died in 1835. One of the most important monuments is that called the 'Citadel Monument,' on which Sir John Skelton, formerly governor of the citadel, and his wife, Bridget Prideaux, are represented kneeling at a lectern. The vicarage, valued in K.B. at £12 5*s.* 5*d.*, and in 1831 at £921, is in the gift of the Church Patronage Society, and incumbency of the Rev. C. T. Wilkinson, D.D., who derives his income partly from fees and vicarial property, and partly from the small tithes, which have been commuted for the following yearly sums:—£153 from St. Andrew's, £350 from Pennycross, and £65 from Compton Gifford. The vicar of Charles has £525 a year in lieu of tithes, of which he derives £160 from Compton Gifford. The great tithes belong to the landowners, except a few small moduses.

The Parish Church of Charles is a large fabric, of mixed architecture, in the eastern part of the town, and was erected under the powers of an Act of Parliament passed in 1640, but owing to the troubles of the civil wars, it was not completed till 1658, nor consecrated till the Restoration. It consists of a spacious nave, with north and south aisles, a chancel, and west tower, crowned by a spire, which was struck by lightning, and mostly rebuilt about 51 years ago. There are eight bells in the tower. The interior of the church has a neat appearance, and contains about 1600 sittings. The church was restored at a cost of £1100 in 1864. The roof is barrel-shaped and divided into square compartments by ribs of wood. Many of the windows are filled with stained glass; that on the south side of the chancel is in memory of John Moore, Esq., J.P., who died in 1861; and one on the north side is in remembrance of Herbert Fillis, Esq. The church contains several handsome monuments, one of which has a finely sculptured bust of the Rev. R. Hawker, D.D., who died in 1827. The living, a vicarage, of the gross value of £620, is in the gift of the Church Patronage Society, and incumbency of the Rev. G. F. Head, M.A.

All Saints, in Well Street, will be when completed a handsome building in the Early French (Gothic) style, seating 700 worshippers. The designs were by Mr. James Hine, and the estimated cost is £5000. The chancel was consecrated in November 1874. A district was assigned it in 1875, and contains about 4000 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, valued at £200 a year, in the alternate patronage of the Bishop of Exeter and the vicar of St. Peter's, and in the incumbency of the Rev. S. W. E. Bird, M.A.

Christ Church, a handsome structure, in Eton Place, was built in 1845–6, in the Perpendicular style, and consists of chancel, nave, and aisle. It has galleries, and contains 1080 sittings, of which 536 are free. The edifice was restored in 1875 at a cost of £400. There is a window filled with stained glass in memory of the daughter of the Rev. J. Metcalfe, the late vicar. A district was assigned to the church in 1847, which had 6626 inhabitants in 1871. The Register dates from 1845. The living, a vicarage valued at £270, is in the patronage of the vicar of St. Andrew's, and incumbency of the Rev. T. Whitby, M.A.

The Citadel Church, a plain building at the Citadel, capable of holding 450 persons, is used for the garrison. The East window is filled with stained glass, executed by Lavers and Barraud, and representing the Crucifixion.

Emmanuel Church, in the tithing of Compton Gifford, was built in 1870, at a cost of £3600, and comprises a lofty nave with north and south aisles; the transept chancel and central tower are still to be added. The benefice was constituted a separate living in 1871, and is now a vicarage in the patronage of the vicar of Charles and incumbency of the Rev. George Henry Fletcher, M.A. (See also page 236).

St. Andrew's Chapel, in Lockyer Street, is an elegant chapel of ease to St. Andrew's parish, and was erected in 1822–3, at the cost of £5000, mostly contributed by the Rev. R. Lampen (the first incumbent), and H. Woollcombe, J. Pridham, and Thomas Gill, Esqrs. The front is composed of large blocks of granite, in the Grecian style, with a cupola and bell on the top. The interior has about 900 sittings, is handsomely fitted up, and includes a valuable altar-piece, the Crucifixion, a picture by Ball. It has galleries and a good organ, and many of the pews are private property. The benefice is a perpetual curacy, valued in 1831 at £115, and now in the patronage of the vicar of St. Andrew's, and incumbency of the Rev. J. Erskine Risk, M.A.

St. James the Less (uncompleted), in Clarendon Place, was built in 1874, for a district formed in 1847 out of the south-west portion of Plymouth, and which had 4538 inhabitants in 1871. The church, which consists of nave, apsidal chancel and aisles, will have, when completed, 750 free and unappropriated sittings. The chancel windows are filled with stained glass, representing a series of New Testament subjects. The living is a vicarage valued at £183, with residence, in the patronage of Keble College, Oxford, and incumbency of the Rev. F. Gurney, M.A.

St. John the Evangelist, Sutton on Plym, in Exeter Street, is an elegant Gothic structure, built in 1855, from designs by Mr. Perry, of London, at a cost of £3000, raised by subscriptions. It contains six memorial windows to the late Colonel Hawker and two members of his family, to the Rev. G. G. Carrighan, the first incumbent, and to two former parishioners. The organ by Hill, of London, was built in 1872, at a cost of £450. A new and handsome reredos has been recently erected by the present vicar, in memory of his wife. The church has accommodation for 450 people. The ecclesiastical district, formed in 1844, had 6196 inhabitants in 1871. The benefice, a vicarage, was formerly in the gift of the Bishop and Crown alternately, but the patronage has just been transferred to the Rev. F. Gurney, in consideration of a payment of £3000 made by him to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for the augmentation of the vicar's income. The value of the benefice is now £400 a year. The Rev. Charles Coombs, M.A., is the vicar, and the Revs. Harry Oxland and Arthur Williams are the assistant curates. Near the church, in St. John's Street, are large schools for boys, girls, and infants.

St. Jude's, Tothill Lane, was built, in the Early English style, by subscription, in 1875–6 at a cost of £4000, of which £1000 was given by the local Church Extension Society, and £1100 by the Rev. T. A. Bewes, of Beaumont. It consists of chancel, nave, north and south aisles, transepts, and bell turret containing one bell, but it is contemplated to replace the turret by a tower. An organ, the gift of the Rev. T. A. Bewes, is being built by Hele, of Plymouth, at a cost of £500. The church contains 600 sittings, all of which are free. St. Jude's district was taken out of the parish of Charles, and the vicarage has been endowed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners with £200 a year. The Rev. T. H. Howard, M.A., is the incumbent.

St. Luke's, in Tavistock Place, formerly a chapel of ease to Charles parish church, had a separate district assigned it in 1874, which has about 4500 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage valued at about £260, derived from seat rents, in the gift of the vicar of Charles, and incumbency of the Rev. Isaac Hawker.

St. Peter's Church, Wyndham Square, was formerly Eldad Chapel, which was built in 1830 for the late Rev. John Hawker, B.A., but was not consecrated until 1850. It consists of a chancel and nave, and contains 750 sittings. The Register dates from 1848, in which year the church was licensed by the Bishop. The living is a vicarage, valued at £400, in the gift of trustees, and incumbency of the Rev. George Rundle Prynne, B.A.

St. Saviour's, Lambhay Hill, built by subscription in 1870, on a site given by the Queen, as a chapel of ease to Holy Trinity Church, is a neat building, in the Early English style, accommodating 400 persons. At present it is served by the curate of Holy Trinity.

Trinity Church, in Southside Street, is a substantial structure in the Doric order, erected in 1841–2 by subscription, and a grant from the Incorporated Society. It consists of chancel, nave, and aisles. It has 1200 sittings, of which 636 are free. A district was assigned to the church in 1851, which had 4762 inhabitants in 1871. The Register dates from 1851. The living, a vicarage, valued at £300, with house, is in the gift of the vicar of St. Andrew's, and incumbency of the Rev. Francis Barnes, M.A.

Sherwell Congregational Church, on Tavistock Road, was built in 1862–4, in the Decorated style, from designs by Messrs. Paull and Ayliffe. The church has a spire. A good organ was presented by C. Fox, Esq.; and a window has been filled with stained glass by Mr. William Derry, in memory of the late Mr. David Derry, who laid the foundation stone of this place of worship, which will seat 900 hearers. The schools adjoining, accommodating 900 children, were added in 1867. The cost of the entire building was £13,000. The Congregational Union Church is a handsome building, erected in 1848, at a cost of £2000. Besides these the same body has chapels in Norley Street, Baller Street, Britonside, and Mount Street. The Baptist Chapel, in Mutley Plain, was built in 1869 at a cost of £8000, from designs by Messrs. Ambrose and Snell, and will seat 1000 people. Adjoining are good schools. George Street Baptist Chapel, an elegant structure with a colonnade in front, and large schools attached, was built in 1845, at a cost of £4600. There is also a Baptist Chapel in How Street, and another called Trinity Baptist Chapel. The Presbyterian Church, in Wyndham Street, is a handsome structure in the Corinthian style, and was completed in 1869, at a cost of £6000, from designs by Mr. John L. Hodge. The church will seat 1200 persons, and in the basement are schools accommodating 700 children. The Rev. Joseph Wood is minister, and acting chaplain to the forces. The Wesleyans have chapels in Saltash Street (Ebenezer Chapel), Buckwell Street (Wesley Chapel), Salem Street (Salem Chapel), Cattedown, King Street, and Mutley Plain. Ebenezer Chapel is a large handsome building, erected in 1817, at the cost of about £5000, and has a burial ground. The Plymouth Brethren have chapels in Park Street, Raleigh Street, Manor Street, Shaftesbury Street, and Notte Street; the Protestant Evangelicals, in Compton Street and Gascoyne Place; the Bible Christians, in Zion Street; the Primitive Methodists, in Ebrington Street; the United Free Methodists, in Ebrington Street; the Unitarians, in Treville Street; the Universalists, in Henry Street; the Catholic Apostolics, in Princess Street; the Friends' Meeting House is in Treville Street; Bethel Union Chapel in Castle Street. The latter was erected by subscription in 1833, for the accommodation of sailors and soldiers, and is supplied chiefly by Independent and Wesleyan ministers, and has a large day and Sunday school. The Jews' Synagogue is in Catherine Street, and is endowed with £1000 Three per Cent. Consols, left in 1867 by Mr. Jacob Nathan.

The Roman Catholic Cathedral (St. Mary and St. Boniface), in Cecil Street, was opened on March 25, 1858, and is a cruciform building in the Early English style, from designs by Messrs. Hansom, consisting of nave with clerestory, north and south aisles, chancel, transept, lady chapel and spire. The tender for the original erection was £4000 (exclusive of the spire). The length is 155 feet, and width across the nave and transept 80 feet. The pillars in the chancel are of polished Devonshire marble, and those in the nave of grey Cornish granite. Several windows are filled with rich stained glass. The tower and spire were added in 1866, at an outlay of £1200, the stonework of which rises to a height of 197 feet. The organ, formerly at St. Martin's-in-the-Field, London, has been placed in the church at a cost of 400 guineas. The old chapel is now used as a kind of hospital for poor Roman Catholics. Adjoining to, and connected with, the Cathedral on one side is the residence of the Bishop (Rev. Dr. Vaughan), erected at a cost of £2000, and on the other a nunnery of the Sisters of Notre Dame with extensive schools. It was in 1851 that Plymouth was erected into a Roman Catholic bishopric, the first prelate being the Rev. Dr. Errington.

Cemetery.—The Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport Cemetery Company, was established in 1846, with a capital of £15,000 in £25 shares, for the purpose of supplying an extensive cemetery for the three towns, where the old burial grounds have long been crowded, especially those at the parish churches, and that in Westwell Street. This cemetery is pleasantly situated on a gentle acclivity, about half-a-mile north of Plymouth, and about two miles from Devonport, and comprises 10 acres of ground, more than half of which was consecrated by the Bishop, on June 5, 1849, for the use of the Established Church, and the rest is appropriated to Dissenters, and was first opened in December 1848. The ground is well enclosed and tastefully laid out, and has two neat chapels, in the Decorated style, one for the consecrated, and the other for the unconsecrated division. About 8 acres of land adjoining are to be added to the cemetery, when required, having been purchased by the company for that purpose, but now let for pasturage. The cemetery forms a pleasant promenade, and east of it is a newly made road through the beautiful grounds, called Hyde Park. Mr. Philip James Jory, 11 Hyde Park Terrace, is the secretary; and the Rev. William Hayden Phillips, chaplain of the church portion.

The Western College was founded in 1752 by the London Congregational Fund Board, for educating young men for the Congregational ministry; it is also open to young men of approved moral character, of all denominations, as lay students. It was removed to Plymouth in 1844 and conducted in Wyndham Place, until the present college was erected at Mannamead, at a cost of upwards of £5000. There are two scholarships—Alfred Rooker's, Esq., of about £20 a year, and Thomas Harris's, Esq., of £10. The Rev. Charles Chapman, M.A., is the president and theological tutor; Robert Conway, Esq., treasurer; and the Rev. E. B. Hickman, honorary secretary. The income is £1405 15*s.* 3*d.*, and the expenditure £1403 8*s.* 6*d.*

The Grammar School, in Princess Square, was founded by the Corporation in the reign of Henry VII., and had a pension of £8 a year, out of the vicarage of St. Andrew, as part and parcel of Plympton Priory. After the Dissolution this came to the Sovereign until 1573, when Queen Elizabeth granted the great tithes of Plymouth and the advowson of the vicarage to the Corporation, and directed that they should allow £20 a year to a schoolmaster. The Corporation are the patrons, and allow £50 a year to the master for teaching 12 sons of resident burgesses, who are selected by competition, besides whom he is allowed to take a large number of day scholars and boarders. The school is well conducted, and the Rev. William Bennett, F.C.P.S., is the head master, and has six assistants.

Hele's and Lanyon's School, where at present 12 poor boys are educated, lodged, fed and clothed, was founded in connection with an ancient charity, called the Poor's Portion. When the Act incorporating the Plymouth Court of Guardians was passed in the reign of Queen Anne, the bulk of the property of which the endowment of this charity consisted was handed over to the said Court of Guardians, to be by them administered to the general relief of the poor; but that portion of it which had been applied to educational purposes was still continued under a separate trust, and now forms the endowment from which the funds of this school are derived. In 1632 Elize Hele, the great benefactor of Exeter and other places (see pages 350 and 351), gave certain lands, tenements, &c., to his executors, in trust that they should settle them for some charitable and godly uses. In 1658 the surviving executors vested property for the support of a charity school, with certain trustees, by a deed to which the Corporation and the Guardians of the Poor were made parties. The income of this trust property is now applied in schooling and maintaining 12 boys, and in giving apprentice fees and outfits to such as are apprenticed to trades on leaving the school. They are clothed in blue, and the master has also the care of four poor boys, who are educated and maintained from the charity of John Lanyon, who, in 1674, left £2000 to be vested for that purpose. This trust property now consists of several houses, and money in the funds derived from the sale of property; and the income is now applied to the schooling, maintaining, and apprenticing four poor boys, who are nominated to the school by the Governor of the Court of Guardians, subject to the approval of the trustees.

Plymouth High School for Boys is under a Board of Governors, of which the Bishop of Exeter is chairman, and the Rev. Dr. Wilkinson and the Rev. Professor Anthony, M.A., are hon. secretaries. The Plymouth High School (girls) is at North Hill, and the Rev. Professor Anthony, M.A., and W. F. Collier, Esq., are hon. secretaries.

Plymouth Public Free School, the largest of its kind in the kingdom (the Jews' School in Spitalfields only being excepted), was founded in 1809, and at that time was literally a free school; but in 1833 a small fee was imposed so that a superior education might be given, which resulted in an increased attendance of 368 scholars. The school was placed under government inspection. The school comprises the following departments—boys, containing 901 pupils; girls, 440; infants, 361; science and art, Latin and French, and adults' evening class, 327; making a total of 2029 pupils.

The Grey School, in Hampton Street, was commenced in 1714, and is supported partly by subscriptions, and collections at churches. Arising from donations and legacies, this charity now possesses £5351 4*s*. Consols, of which upwards of £700 arose from benefactions for apprenticing the scholars. The present schoolrooms, and the house for the master and mistress, were built in 1814, at the cost of £1178. The charity now affords education for 65 boys and 65 girls, 25 of each being clothed and educated free.

Lady Rogers' Charity School, in Bedford Terrace, was founded in 1773, pursuant to the will of Lady Rogers, who left £10,000 to be vested for the education and maintenance of poor girls of Devon and Cornwall. There is now belonging to this charity £28,173 0*s*. 10*d*. Three per Cent. Consols. About 50 poor girls are now educated and maintained in the school. They are admitted at eight, and are allowed to remain till fifteen years of age, when they are presented with an outfit each, costing £5 5*s*., and placed in situations as domestic servants, agreeably to a new scheme sanctioned by the Court of Chancery in 1787. Lord Blachford, the Rev. E. Rogers, Mr. Pole-Carew Anthony, and Mr. Froude are the present trustees.

Jacob Nathan's Endowed School, in Well Street, was founded and endowed by Jacob Nathan, a native of Plymouth, who died in 1867, aged 84 years. He left £20,000 in charities.

The Household of Faith, near Charles Church, was established in 1787, by the Rev. Dr. Hawker, then vicar of Charles, and consists of a School of Industry, and a Sunday School, for poor girls, supported chiefly by subscriptions and donations. Among the legacies to this charity are—£500 left by Thomas Hodson, in 1819, and £100 left by James Bruce, in 1814. About 40 of the scholars are clothed at the expense of the charity, which has an income of £46 10*s*. 1*d*., being the dividends of £1550 5*s*. 11*d*., purchased with legacies.

Board Schools.—The School Board, formed here in 1871, now consists of the Rev. Frederic E. Anthony (chairman), George Chase, Esq. (vice-chairman), the Revs. Canon Richard Mansfield, and Thomas Whitby, and Messrs. Nathaniel Barker, Samuel Poad Cook, William Collier James, James Loye, John Samuel Pike, Thomas Pitts, jun., Edwin Roseveare, Joshua Brooking Rowe, and Robert Coad Serpell. They have ten schools under their control, five of which they have built, one purchased, one opened (Station Road) as a temporary mixed school, one (Tracey Street) is rented for five days a week during school hours of the Wesleyans, and two (Batter Street and Stillman Street) are lent to the Board. The following is a list of the buildings erected and purchased by the Board, relative to cost and accommodation:—

The cost of the buildings was defrayed by loans from the Public Loan Commissioners. The offices are at the Municipal Buildings, Guildhall Square. Edwin Stribley, Esq., is the clerk; Alfred Hingston, Esq., treasurer, and J. W. Wilson, Esq., solicitor.

The National Schools, at Tavistock Place, established in 1835, are attended by 350 boys and 300 girls; the Infant School, in Charles' parish, by 300 infants. The Ragged School Association was established in 1849, for the purpose of educating and training to habits of industry and piety the children of the most destitute poor, but the schools have been transferred to the School Board.

The Roman Catholic Schools adjoin the Cathedral, and are under Government inspection. The boys' school was built at a cost of £450; and the girls' and infants' at £500. The Convent of the Sisters of Notre Dame was built at an outlay of £5000, and enlarged in 1876 at a further expense of £500. The order is exclusively devoted to teaching a boarding school, a middle-class day school, and a poor school.

Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport School of Cookery, 5 Bank of England Place, was established in 1877. Mr. Elliott Square is secretary.

The Athenæum, a building in the Doric order, from designs by J. Foulston, Esq., is the home of the Plymouth Institution and Devon and Cornwall Natural History Society, which originated in 1812 in the endeavours of a few gentlemen to further the cultivation of useful knowledge, by encouraging habits of research, and affording opportunities to persons of various pursuits to communicate with one another, by the reading of essays on literary and scientific subjects, and discussing the same. The property of the Institution is vested in seven trustees to secure the delivery of lectures and discussions on science, literature, and the fine arts; the formation and use of a library, collection of apparatus, and museum, and for other uses of the Society. The Plymouth Institution was amalgamated with the Devon and Cornwall Natural History Society in 1851. The museum contains many interesting objects, mainly coral, among them an important collection from a Romano-British cemetery, discovered near Mount Batten. The library of scientific works is a valuable one, and the portraits and the cast from the Elgin and other marbles in the hall and vestibule are worth examination. Many famous Plymouthians have been connected with this institution. Among them may be mentioned Benjamin Robert Haydon, James Northcote, Sir Charles Lock Eastlake, Charles Roscoe, the Poet Carrington, William Elford Leach, Colonel C. Hamilton Smith, Sir William Snow Harris, Dr. S. B. Tregelles, and J. N. Hearder.

Newspapers.—Three newspapers are published here: the 'Western Daily Mercury' (Liberal), with which is incorporated the 'Plymouth and Devonport Weekly Journal and the Western Counties Herald;' it was established in June 1860, and is published by Isaac Latimer & Sons. The 'Western Morning News' (Independent), established January 3, 1860, and the 'Western Weekly News,' established October 1861, are issued by the Western Morning News Company (lim.).

The Free Library is held in the old Guildhall, in Whimple Street, which was built in 1800 at the cost of £7000 on the site of the old one erected in 1606, and which has been granted by the Council for the purpose. The Free Libraries Act was adopted on October 6, 1871, but it was not until the completion of the new Guildhall that a suitable building could be obtained. In 1876, the Town Council voted £300 for the cost of fittings, which sum, together with £1100 raised by subscription, enabled the committee to take the necessary steps for its opening. The Library was formally opened on August 30, 1876, but books were not issued until September 28. There are 9000 volumes in the library, the average number of volumes issued per day being over 400. From September 28, 1876, to July 26, 1878, 186,000 volumes were issued, the turnover for the year being 1298. The newsroom is well supplied with newspapers, periodicals, &c. Mr. W. H. K. Wright, F.R.H.S., is secretary and librarian.

The Public Library and Cottonian Library.—The Public Library, established at the Guildhall on November 20, 1810, occupies a handsome building in Cornwall Street, erected, in 1813, from designs by Mr. Foulston, at a cost of about £5000 raised in £30 shares, and by loan. The property of the library is vested in ten trustees. In 1850–3 arrangements were completed for the reception of the Cottonian Library, so-called from its donor, William Cotton, Esq., F.R.S. This collection was formed by Charles Rogers, Esq., F.R.S., F.S.A., a distinguished connoisseur, and author of the last century, from whom it passed into the hands of his brother-in-law, William Cotton, Esq., the grandfather of the donor. New apartments were erected from designs by Messrs. Wightwick & Damant, at an outlay of about £1500. The Library contains 16,000 volumes, and if newspapers and the volumes in the Law and Cottonian Libraries be counted, upwards of 20,000. Among the paintings are a portrait of Sir Joshua Reynolds, by himself; one of his father, the Rev. Samuel Reynolds; another of Sir Joshua's sister, Miss Fanny Reynolds; one of Regulus leaving Rome to return to Carthage a prisoner, after the picture by Benjamin West; and one of Alexander visiting the tent of Darius, after Le Brun. Alexander Haldane, Esq., is librarian.

The Mechanics' Institution was established in 1825, and occupies a building in Princess Square, erected in 1851, in lieu of the old one. The institute comprises a large lecture hall, capable of seating 1200 persons, which is let for public meetings, &c., a library of 6000 volumes, and reading, committee, and class rooms. Mr. Henry Cawse is secretary, and Mr. Joseph Foster, curator.

The Plymouth Elocution Society was instituted in 1877, and is now amalgamated with the Mechanics' Institute. Weekly meetings are held in the large hall, and occasional public recitals given. Mr. W. H. K. Wright, F.R.H.S., is president; Mr. Thomas Plummer, vice-president; and Mr. J. Brown, secretary.

The Young Men's Christian Association, 193 Union Street, was established in 1866, and has 100 members. Mr William Henry Webb is the secretary.

The Plymouth Club was formed in 1876, and has an excellent club house at the corner of Windsor Terrace and Lockyer Street, facing the Hoe. It comprises coffee-room, 35 feet by 30 feet; reading-room, 35 feet by 17 feet; billiard-room, 38 feet by 26 feet and 21 feet high; private, dining, chess, card, smoking, and non-smoking rooms; waiting-room for non-members, lavatories, and in the basement are spacious bowl and skittle alleys. The cost of the alterations, and the furnishing of the club, was over £6000. There are about 250 members. H. J. Waring, Esq., is chairman, F. B. Westlake, Esq., honorary secretary.

The Plymouth Debating Society was established in 1876, and holds its meetings at the Guildhall. Mr. W. E. Odgers is secretary.

The Royal Hotel and Theatre formed an extensive and elegant fabric, which was finished in 1813, at the cost of about £60,000, partly supplied by the Corporation, and partly raised by way of tontine. The north front is 270 feet long, and has in the centre a magnificent portico of the Ionic order, under which are the entrances to the boxes, and to the great hall and staircase of the assembly rooms. The theatre was destroyed by fire on June 13, 1878, but is about to be rebuilt from designs by Mr. C. J. Phipps, F.S.A., of London. The hotel, which lets for about £750 per annum, occupies all the eastern front, and has in the centre an Ionic portico, corresponding in its proportions with the temple of Ilissus, a choice example of Grecian simplicity. Many of its apartments are spacious and handsomely furnished; and attached to it is an elegant suite of Assembly and Ball Rooms. In Union Street is a large room which will hold 1800 persons, called St. James Hall, belonging to Mr. Snawdon, and let for exhibitions, meetings, &c. The Albert Hall, at Eldad, in the occupation of Mr. T. Martin, is used for concerts, meetings, &c.

In George Street is the Clock Tower and Bell Turret, the entire height of which is 60 feet. On the north, east and west sides, are three drinking fountains of skilfully carved Portland stone, the doorway being on the south. The Plymouth arms are cut in the shaft about 15 feet up the shaft. Near the top is the clock, placed there at a cost of £400, defrayed by W. Derry, Esq. The top is surmounted by an elegant bell turret. The architect was Mr. Henry Hall, of London, and the builders were Messrs. Call and Pethick, of Plymouth. The town raised £300 for the erection of the tower, Mr. Derry paying all additional cost.

The Royal Western Yacht Club of England was established in 1827 at Stonehouse, but removed about eleven years ago to its present quarters, Elliot Terrace. The Club has 230 members, besides honorary ones, including all the commodores and flag officers of yacht clubs carrying the Admiralty warrant, and a fleet of 50 yachts carrying the Admiralty warrant. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is commodore; Charles Simpson, Esq., chairman; and Henry A. Carruthers, Esq., secretary.

St. Andrew's Hall (Skating Rink) in Westwell Street, was built in the Grecian style from designs by Mr. J. H. Keats, in 1876, at a cost of £2000, raised by a limited liability company in £5 shares. The hall is let for public uses. Mr. A. Smith is secretary. During the reconstruction of the Theatre Royal, the Skating Rink has been fitted with a stage, scenery, &c., and is successfully used as a theatre. The Devon and Cornwall Archery Association has rooms at 52 Bedford Street. Messrs. Key and Son, are agents.

The Orphans Aid Hospital was founded in 1615, and School in 1617, by Thomas and Nicholas Sherwill, who endowed it with houses, land, &c., now yielding about £200 per annum, and vested with the Charity Trustees of the Borough. This charity now educates and maintains 12 orphan boys, who are boarded with Mr. G. E. Chambers, 10 Regent Street, and educated at the Free School in Coburg Street. Devon and Cornwall Female Orphan Asylum, in Lockyer Street, was founded in 1834, for the education and maintenance of poor orphan girls, with the view of training them to habits of industry, and fitting them for domestic service. It has now about 55 on the foundation. The receipts of the Institution in 1877 comprised £334 from subscriptions, and £644 3*s.* 4*d.* from donations. Mr. G. R. Holberton is honorary secretary; the Rev. T. Whitby, M.A., chaplain; and Mrs. Bidgood, matron. The Presbyterian School, in Batter Street, was founded in 1785, by the Rev. Herbert Mends, who left £200 towards its support. It is now called Batter Street Benevolent Institution for clothing and educating 50 poor girls. It is supported chiefly by subscription, and children of all religious denominations are admitted, and instructed in reading, writing, needlework, &c.

The South Devon and East Cornwall Hospital, Sussex Place, Princess Square, was established on January 30, 1840. In connection with the Hospital is a Private Nursing Institution for rendering service in private families, and in very many cases gratuituous assistance is given in poor families. George Henry Silvester, Esq., is resident surgeon; Henry Brown, Esq., is treasurer; J. Walter Wilson, Esq., secretary; F. Hicks, treasurer of the children's ward; and Miss Smith, matron.

Plymouth Public Dispensary was instiuted in the year 1798, 'for the gratuitous relief of the industrious poor with advice and medicines, and, if necessary, attendance at their own houses, in time of sickness.' It now occupies a commodious building in Catherine Street, which was erected in 1808–9, at the cost of about £1650, including £234 paid for the land. For this building, the town is chiefly indebted to the late Charles Yonge, Esq., who, in 1807, bequeathed to the charity £1000, which was preserved entire by the Rev. Duke Yonge paying the legacy duty. In the board room is a fine portrait and a marble tablet in memory of Mr. Yonge. The charity now derives yearly about £288 from 3 per Cent. Consols, and £451 16*s.* 3*d.* from subscriptions; and has in the course of each year about 3572 patients, nearly one-fourth of whom are visited at their own houses. A Provident Department was opened on July 1, 1878. Three physicians and four surgeons tender their services gratuitously. Mrs. Mary Lacey is matron, and Mr. William Prance, secretary.

The Royal Eye Infirmary, in Mill Bay Road, was established in 1821 for the cure of diseases of the eye, and is under the patronage of the Prince of Wales. In 1876 it received 1406 patients, of whom 147 were in-patients. Its receipts during the same year amounted to £618, of which £262 10*s.* 8*d.* was from subscriptions and £114 from donations. William J. Square, Esq., is consulting surgeon; John H. Eccles, E. M. R. Rendle, and William Square, Esqrs., surgeons; William F. Moore, Esq., secretary; and Mr. George Bayntun, resident dispenser.

Here is a Lying-in Charity, and also several benevolent societies for clothing and feeding the poor. The Soup Kitchen in Green Street, was built by the Misses White, of Seven-trees, and supplies soup to the poor in winter at 1*d.* per quart. Wash-houses for the poor were established about twenty-five years ago.

The Plymouth Royal Mendicity Society, 5 Frankfort Street, was established in 1870, for the relief of the deserving poor. Mr. Hamilton Whiteford is hon. secretary.

The Provident Institutions of Plymouth comprise a Savings Bank; three Lodges of Freemasons, held at the Royal Hotel, the Commercial Hotel, and the Golden Fleece; several other Secret Orders, and many Friendly Societies, &c. The Plymouth Provident Dispensary, 5 Frankfort Street, was established in June 1869. T. Harper, Esq., is secretary. The Freemasons' Hall, at the end of Cornwall Street, was built in 1827, at the cost of £2500. It is a handsome stone building, and on the ground floor are the Commercial Rooms, established in 1832. It is now in the possession of Messrs. Skardon and Sons, who hold their sales in the large hall. The Plymouth and South Devon Savings Bank, 40 Whimple Street, was established in 1837. On November 20, 1876, it had deposits amounting to £291,723 15*s.* 1*d.*, belonging to 12,029 depositors, 164 Charitable Societies, 42 Friendly Societies, and 5 Penny Banks; besides which there was a balance of £700 invested with the Commissioners on the Separate Surplus Fund account. Sir Massey Lopes, Bart., M.P., is president; T. H. Bulteel, Esq., treasurer; the Rev. Peter Holmes, D.D., secretary; and Mr. John A. Saunders, actuary.

The 2nd Administrative Battalion of Rifle Volunteers, comprising 2nd, 3rd, and 22nd corps has its head-quarters at Plymouth, and was formed in 1859. This was the second battalion formed in the county, and is now 800 strong. The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe is lieutenant-colonel commandant; Messrs. Edward St. Aubyn and Mortimer J. Collier, majors; Captain Henry S. Bouchier, adjutant; Mr. W. H. Luke, hon. quarter-master; and Mr. John H. S. May, surgeon. The 2nd Corps (Plymouth), under the command of Major M. Collier, has its head-quarters also at Millbay, where a spacious Drill Hall, 260 feet long, 86 feet wide, and 45 high, was erected in 1871 at a cost of £2000. The corps has a strength of 400 men. The hall is let for public purposes, and Captain G. Browse is secretary.

The Unity Sunday School Choir was established in 1875 for the purpose of assisting the funds of the Children's Ward of the South Devon and East Cornwall Hospital. It comprises 19 of the principal Sunday Schools, representing 6000 children, from whom 280 singers are selected, who, with 50 lady teachers and an equal number of gentlemen teachers, complete the choir. The arrangements are carried out by a committee of superintendents of the united schools. Mr. Arthur Faull is conductor.

The South Devon and Cornwall Institution for the Instruction and Employment of the Blind, North Hill, was established in 1860. Blind persons may be admitted either as day pupils or as resident boarders, subject to certain rules and regulations. The Prince of Wales is patron, Dr. James C. Bulteel, hon. physician, Messrs. J. H. and G. H. Eccles, hon. surgeons, Mr. John Trego, hon. treasurer, Mr. J. W. Matthews, hon. secretary, Mr. W. H. Hockaday, superintendent, and Mrs. W. H. Hockaday, matron.

The Royal Western Horticultural Society was established in 1840 to advance the study of horticulture in the mansion of the wealthy and the cottage of the poor. Two shows are held annually—one in spring and the other in summer—when prizes are distributed among successful exhibitors. Mr. J. E. Moon is hon. treasurer, and Mr. Wm. Hy. Dillon, hon. secretary.

The House of Mercy, or Penitentiary, on North Road, was originally commenced in 1859 at Devonport, by the Rev. — Mawson, who in 1863 went as missionary to the Sandwich Islands. The institution was in that year (1863) removed to the House of Peace, 157 North Road, Plymouth. There is accommodation for 64 persons, and the House is under the management of the Devonport Society, and in connection with the Church Penitentiary Association. Miss Turnbull is superioress, Sister Rose Alston, resident sister-in-charge, and George Norrington, Esq., secretary and treasurer.

The Plymouth, Stonehouse and Devonport Penitentiary and Female Home is in Ham Lane, and was founded in 1832. The inmates are employed in washing and in all the business of a laundry, together with needlework and every kind of household work; and the proceeds of their labours are applied towards the current expenses of the establishment. The Rev. H. Marriott and H. T. Heywood, Esq., are secretaries, Dr. C. A. Hingston, physician, Mr. J. H. Eccles, surgeon, Miss A. Trist, matron, and Miss M. Coaker, sub-matron.

Almshouses.—The Old Church Almshouses, known as the 'Old Church Twelves,' for twelve poor widows and a nurse, are supported by the Corporation, and were in existence before 1573, but their origin is unknown. Under the same management are the New Church Almshouses, in Green Street, originally built about 1680, with £300 left by John Lanyon, and £100 given by John Gubbs. Both these sets of Almshouses have been removed, and the eastern wing of the new Municipal Buildings now occupies the site of the former. Handsome Elizabethan buildings, for both foundations, were erected in Green Street by the Corporation about 1869. By a scheme adopted in 1870, the inmates of the Old Church Almshouses have £1 15*s.* weekly, together with the annual sum of £3 from Rawlins' gift. Prynne's, Baker's, and Fownes's Almshouses were sold by the guardians of the poor, about 75 years ago, for £600, and taken down for the improvement of the town. The £600 was expended on the old workhouse. Alice Miller's, alias Baker's Almhouses, were endowed with £10 a year out of 22 acres of land, called the Bradley Estate, belonging to the guardians of the poor, and let for £25 a year, which is divided among the inmates of almshouses in the borough. Jory's Almshouses at Coxide, were built and endowed by Joseph Jory, Esq., in 1702, for twelve poor widows. They are endowed with 16 houses, &c., in St. Andrew's parish, and a farm of 30½ acres at Modbury, let for about £250 per annum. Each inmate has an allowance of 30*s.* per calendar month. Victoria Cottages, in Victoria Street, were purchased in 1834 by the late Mrs. Hodson, who vested them as almshouses for twelve poor women, and endowed them with £500 Three per Cent. Consols.

The Borough Charities, vested with the Corporation, and now managed by the Borough Charity trustees, comprise the following charities, and also the Orphan's Aid, and the Old Church Almshouses, already noticed. At an early period Sir John Gayer left an estate at Torr, in Pennycross, now let for £71 a year, out of which £8 is paid to the vicar of Charles, for preaching sermons preparatory to the administration of the sacrament; 24*s.* to the clerk and sexton, and £4 to the Orphan's Aid. The rest of the rent is distributed among the poor of the borough, chiefly in shirts, shifts, petticoats, and other clothing, together with about £90, arising yearly from the following gifts, viz., John White's, £11 15*s.*, left in 1584; John and Thomas Bound's, £2, left in 1642, out of Thistle Park; Robert Hewer's, £4; and Baron's, Collin's, Hill's, and Ackerman's gifts, amounting to £9 12*s.* per annum. The Corporation have £14 8*s.* yearly out of the tithes of Egg-Buckland and St. Budeaux, left by John Burrough, for providing clothing for the 'two town corporals and the governor of the Barbican.' Mrs. Joan Bennett's Trust, for the support of two exhibitioners from Plymouth at one of the Universities, yields about £100 per annum, of which about £40 arises from premises in Southside Street, and the rest from £1841 Three per Cent. Consols. Robert Rawling, in 1626, left £250 in trust to pay yearly £3 for the poor in the almshouses; £2 for the poor of Compton Gifford; 30*s.* for poor burgesses; and 10*s.* each to seven other parishes for the poor. He also left two tenements in Batter Street, and other property to the Orphan Aid Hospital. William Rowe, in 1690, left 3A. 4R. 27P. of land, called Shute Park, in trust to distribute the rent among the poor of the borough. It is now let for £52 per annum, which is distributed by the guardians of the poor. The same donor also left £841 Three per Cent. Consols, the dividends of which are applied towards the support of the Free Schools. In 1727 James Maddock left to the guardians of the poor £1500, in trust to distribute the proceeds yearly in clothing among the poor, one-half to those receiving and the other half to those not receiving parochial relief. This charity now consists of £1406 Old South Sea Annuities. In 1732 Henry Kelway left £1900 Bank Stock, in trust for the benefit of his relations, or, in default of such, for the poor. This stock has since been increased by bonuses, &c., to £4860 17*s.* 3*d.*, which yields dividends amounting to about 10 per cent. Pursuant to the donor's will, £43 is yearly distributed among his relations, and the rest of the income is applied in educating their children. The two vicars and the master of the Grammar School are the acting trustees.

St. Andrew's Parish has the following charities, besides its share in the general charities of the borough. The poor have four annuities of 52*s.* each for weekly distributions of bread, left by Sir John Acland and William and John Hill, in the 17th century, and by John Morshead in 1750. For the same purpose they have the following yearly sums, viz., 50*s.* left by Captain Ackerman, and £2 2*s.* 3*d.* from Huxham's charity. The churchwardens distribute the bread. The poor of Pennycross tithing have £4 a year from the gift of John Harris, Johannah Knighton, and Robert Rawling.

The Parish of Charles has the following, besides its share of the borough charities. For distributions of bread, the poor have £5 10*s.* yearly, as interest of £102 10*s.* left by Mary Collins and John Morshead in 1720, and lent to the churchwardens. The vicar distributes £7 yearly in clothing, as the gift of Elizabeth Chapman and Mrs. Sutton. In 1796, Eleanor Huxham left £660 Three per Cent. Stock, in trust with the vicar, to pay £15 yearly to ten poor women of Plymouth, in equal shares, and to distribute the rest of the dividends in bread at the two parish churches. The dividends of £334 14*s.* 6*d.* Three per Cent. Consols, left by James Stevens in 1797, are applied, one-half to the support of the Sunday School, and the other in distributions to the poor. The interest of £150, left by J. Bruce in 1841, is divided among three poor tradesmen's families. In 1829 Mrs Mary Glanville Hodson left the dividends of £500 Three per Cent Stock, to be distributed in bread on April 13 and Dec. 12; and in 1830 John Morris left the dividends of £100 of the same stock for distribution in bread among the poor parishioners on January 1. The poor of Compton Gifford have 40*s.* a year from Rawling's Charity; and the interest of £200 left by Rebecca Shaw and Sarah Hancock.

The Skelton Family.—John Skelton married Bridget Prideaux, the daughter of Sir Peter Prideaux and Lady Christian Grenville (daughter of Sir Bevill Grenville, Charles I.'s celebrated Cornish general). John Grenville, Earl of Bath, was consequently her uncle. The property at Bittleford was sold immediately after the death of Sir Bevill, and the family went into exile with Prince Charles during the Commonwealth. John Skelton was made governor of Plymouth and deputy lieutenant of the county soon after the Restoration. That the Skeltons of Cornwall, afterwards of Plymouth, were originally 'a branch of the Skeltons of Cumberland' as Llewellyn Jowett tells us, is undoubtedly true, although it is pretty clear that some members of the family held property in Cornwall prior to the time of Sir John Skelton, seeing that Robert Skelton represented Launceston and Liskeard during the reign of Henry VI. After the death of Sir John Skelton, Dame Bridget Skelton, his widow, with John the younger son, left Plymouth and took up their residence with the Prideauxes, who held property in the parishes of Modbury and Ermington, and the neighbourhood. The Prideaux family were the lineal descendants of Edmund Prideaux, younger brother of Sir Peter Prideaux, Attorney-General during the Commonwealth. John Skelton, the younger son, nephew of Edmund Prideaux, after the death of his mother, married and left issue, James Skelton, from whom descended the present family residing in Plymouth, some of whom are employed in H.M. yards at Devonport and Chatham; besides John Skelton, Esq., physician and surgeon, and his son John Skelton, Esq., M.R.C.S., of London. Peter, the last and younger son of James Skelton, was buried in Ermington churchyard. The cause of the declension of the two families was doubtless the heavy fine (£15,000) inflicted upon Edmund Prideaux, by Judge Jeffries. Dr. James Gale, M.A., F.G.S., F.C.S., the inventor of the non-explosive gunpowder process, &c., and founder of the South Devon and Cornwall Blind Institution, was born at Crabtree, near Plymouth, in 1833, and is descended from one of the old families of Devon. Soon after his birth his father removed to Tavistock. At the age of 17 he lost his eyesight. He ultimately studied for the German degrees of Ph.D. and M.A., which he received from the University of Rodstock. His principal invention has been, as intimated above, the rendering of gunpowder harmless without injuring its character when required. Among other worthies of Plymouth may be mentioned Sir Thomas Edmunds, the ambassador and political writer; John Glanville, author of a work on 'Witchcraft'; John Quick, author of a 'History of the Reformation in France'; Mrs. Parsons, a novelist; Jacob Bryant, a mythologist; General Mudge, who conducted the first trigonometrical survey of the kingdom under the auspices of the Government; Sir John Hawkins, the navigator: and Dr. Kitto, the celebrated biblical critic.

The POST OFFICE is in Whimple Street, and Mr. J. B. Ellen is the postmaster. The Postal Telegraph Office is always open; Money Orders are issued and paid, and Savings Bank, Government Annuity, and Insurance business transacted, and Inland Revenue Licences granted, from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. (on Saturdays until 8 p.m.).
